BOMB AT TORQUAY HOTEL

First alert at 'hit list' town

By LIN JENKINS

POLICE evacuated the Palm Court Hotel, Torquay, last night and called in Army experts to examine a "suspicious package," thought to be a bomb, which was found in a bedroom.

Guests at nearby hotels in rooms overlooking the Palm Court were also evacuated and the town's hotels' association organised a bed bank to find them other accommodation.

Torquay is one of 12 seaside towns on the I R A hit list find at the weekend. The S D P conference is to be held there later this summer.

About 120 staff and guests were in the 74-room Palm Court when detectives carrying out checks of hotel registers noticed a name they were looking for.

The discovery of the bomb came as a result of routine inquiries at the hotel by police when staff identified a police picture as a man who had stayed at the hotel recently. He had used an alias already known to police.

Bomb experts took sniffer equipment to the room he had stayed in and found that an explosive device was hidden in a piece of furniture, thought to be a sofa.

The evacuation was ordered at about 7.30 p.m. after a search of bedrooms uncovered the suspicious package.

But guests who had started dinner were allowed to finish.

Mr Nigel Weston, 40, who runs a fish and chip franchise on theg round floor of the hotel, said last night: "Police told me a suspicious package had been found and they were sure it was a bomb.

"I didn't need to be told twice. I closed the place up straight away."

Detectives believed that the Palm Court bomb could be a copy of the device found at the Rubens hotel, near Buckingham Palace, on Sunday.

Bomb disposal experts were hoping to be able to render it safe, and to take it away for examination, and for use as possible evidence.

But if the suspected device is booby-trapped it may have to be exploded on the spot.

Five hotels in the immediate vicinity wereasked to evacuate guests from rooms overlooking the Palm Court.

Hoteliers were asked to open windows and close curtains as a precaution against an explosion.

Train services over a wide area of Southern Region were disrupted for five hours yesterday after a suspicious package was found in a tunnel at Southampton—another of the I R A's hit-list targets. Bomb experts were called in, removed the package and detonated it.

Las night experts were examining the remains to ascertain whether it had been a bomb or not. Extensive repairs have ben going on in the tunnel for many months.

'Blackmail' irks black lawyer

By HEATHER MILLS
Old Bailey Correspondent

A WEST INDIAN barrister threatened to withdraw from an Old Bailey trial yesterday because he objected to the word "blackmail."

Mr BERISTON BRYAN, told Judge ALAN LIPFRIEND: "As a black person myself I object most strongly to this word. It denotes a derogatory stigma to our people and is an evil word in our eyes."

Mr Bryan went on: "I shall ask to withdraw from the case if I am forced to repeat the word. I don't mind using the term 'demanding money with menaces' but blackmail causes a tremendous amount of offence to black people.

"If we used the word 'whitemail' I am sure a lot of people would be up in arms."

'On statute book'

Two other coloured barristers in the case refused to support Mr Bryan's application to have the word banned throughout the trial.

The judge said he did not want the court used for "propagating certain views."

He added: "As far as I am concerned that word is in the Statute Books. If the statute is to be changed, it may be changed, but certainly not in this court. I am not prepared to change it."

Mr Bryan then said he would remain in the case but would not use the term.

The judge retorted: "You can use whatever words you like but the word in the indictment is blackmail."

Mr Beriston Bryan

Mr Bryan was defending two of five West Indian men accused of blackmailing, assaulting and kidnapping a building firm proprietor in Ealing in August 1983. They claim the builder owed one of them money and all five had been employed by him at one time.

'Blatant prejudice'

As he left court Mr Bryan said: "Words containing black in them, I suggest, denote bad or evil. It is blatant racial prejudice to have five black men on trial and calling the crime blackmail."

He added: "It's about time someone spoke out about it and something was done to change the language—whether it is legal language or not."

Mr John Perry, another black barrister in the case said he wanted to dissociate himself from his "learned friend's remarks made on a purely personal basis."

 Blackmail, from "black" meaning dark or bad and "mail" meaning rent or tribute applies to any payment extorted by intimidation. It was originally a sum extorted from Border farmers by freebooters in return for immunity from raids.

A 11th century legal definition referred to "black money" or copper used for paying rents as against "white money" or silver.

In 1601 it was made a felony to pay or accept blackmail. Extortion by letter became a crime in 1772 and in 1776 the extortion of money by verbal threats became a constructive robbery. Threatening with intent to extort money was made a crime by statute in 1823. The present blackmail charge is in the 1968 Theft Act.

Mr Jimmy Palmer, the freed American sky-jack hostage, brandishing a pistol as he joked with an Amal leader in Beirut while waiting to board a plane for Cyprus yesterday.

Beirut move to end hostage deadlock

By JOHN BULLOCH in Beirut

ONE of the American hostages in Beirut was released yesterday; a second is likely to be freed today, and the man who claims to be in control of the remaining 38 offered to put them in the care of a Western embassy or to send them to Damascus.

The sudden movement in the position of kidnappers holding the passengers of the Trans World Airlines flight followed tough talk from the American administration — which was later toned down — and more importantly, a flurry of contacts between Syrian, Iranian and Lebanese leaders in Damascus.

News of the movement was given by the leader of the Amal Shi'ites, Mr Nabih Berri, at a Press conference held in the basement of his house in West Beirut.

Mr Berri walked into the meeting accompanied by the portly figure of one of the American hostages, Mr Jimmy Dell Palmer, 48, who has a heart condition and whose blood pressure had been rising for lack of medication.

After setting out the Shi'ite position, Mr Berri announced that Mr Palmer was being released.

The Amal leader, who made himself the mediator between the skyjackers and the outside world when the drama began 13 days ago, read from notes written in Arabic on two slips of green paper as he set out the new situation.

Kidnappers agree

He announced that he had the agreement of the kidnappers to moving the Americans to the custody of a Western embassy in Beirut so long as that embassy agreed that the hostages would not be sent out of the country until all the remaining 733 Lebanese detained in Israel were set free.

Mr Berri suggested the French, Swiss or Austrian embassies in West Beirut as possible havens for the hostages.

By late last night, both the French and the Swiss had agreed "in principle" to act as hosts to the hostages, with the

SECRECY OVER U.S. OPTIONS

By RICHARD BEESTON in Washington

THE United States clamped down a lid of secrecy on its moves on the hostage crisis as the Administration stepped up diplomatic efforts to bring about the release of the 39 captive Americans.

"The President wants to see some action," the White House spokesman, Mr Larry Speakes, said yesterday after Mr Reagan discussed the crisis with his Secretary of State, Mr George Shultz, and other top advisers. One visitor who met Mr Reagan said the President called the hostage situation "a dark cloud hanging over my head every day."

KILLER'S NAME COSTS BEATLE ACTOR HIS JOB

Mark Lindsay, a young British actor chosen to play John Lennon in an American television film, was sacked yesterday because his real name is Mark Chapman, the same as that of the man who murdered the former Beatle.

N B C television net work said it was unaware of Lindsay's real name when he was hired after a lengthy seach to play Lennon. Lindsay changed his name when he joined British Equity because there was already a Mark Chapman in it.

A joint statement by N B C and the production company in Los Angeles said: "Although purely a coincidence, we feel that it is in the best interest of this project that another actor be cast as John Lennon."

SOUR NOTE FOR G&T DRINKERS

By A. J. McILROY

GIN and tonic drinkers were told in the Commons yesterday that the slice of lemon in their glass could pose a health risk.

Mr Simon Hughes, Liberal MP for Southwark and Bermondsey, said researchers from London University had found 20 times the recommended safety level of fungicide on the skins of lemons.

It could be released in a chemical reaction in a gin and tonic, he said, calling for greater public information on pesticides to be included in the Government's Food and Environment Protection Bill.

Mr Hughes said that research had shown there was no problem if lemons were washed in water. But if the lemon was dipped in gin and tonic the alcohol caused a chemical reaction.

Official secret

When researchers asked the Agriculture Ministry if it was doing any work on the subject, they were told such information came under the Official Secrets Act, said Mr Hughes.

A Ministry official said last night that information could not be given because it might eventually be of use to commercial interests.

Mrs Peggy Fenner, junior Agriculture Minister, confirmed that "slightly higher than recommended levels of fungicide" had been found in lemons. But she told M Ps: "Members who consume large quantities of the mixture would be at much greater risk from cirrhosis of th liver."

600 PUPILS IN BAN ON 'RULE BRITANNIA'

Six hundred schoolchildren who were due to sing "Rule Britannia" at today's opening of an £18million leisure complex near Teanor, Derbyshire, were tonned from doing so by the county council last night.

The Britannia Park complex has created 325 jobs on a former open-cast mining site, but the council and developers have been involved in a long legal battle over the project.

"Serenading a commercial venture is not an educational activity. Using children in this way is wrong," said Mr David Bookbinder, Labour leader of Derbyshire council. The children will not attend the ceremony.

Lawson rebuffs CBI on call for rate cut

By JAMES WIGHTMAN Political Correspondent

A DEFIANT message to his critics in the Confederation of British Industry and any waverers in the Cabinet was delivered by Mr Lawson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, yesterday when he ruled out an early cut in interest rates and recommitted the Government to lower taxes.

He told the C B I that instead of complaining about high interest charges businessmen should be enforcing lower pay settlements below the rate of inflation.

To the Cabinet, in the midst of its troubled annual public expenditure review, he said: "We made a pledge to the British people to reduce the burden of income tax. We must not — and will not — go back on that pledge."

Mr Lawson was addressing Conservatives at a meeting of the Carlton Club political committee.

His tough language was being contrasted at Westminster last night with a speech, also yesterday, by a Cabinet colleague, Mr Biffen, who gave a warning that the Government had to be more careful about its public image in the approach to the next General Election.

Biffen's speech—P6

Mr Biffen, Lord Privy Seal and Leader of the Commons, and one of the Cabinet members known as "consolidators" who are less keen than Mr Lawson and the Prime Minister about tax cuts, said that the Government was being depicted, among other things, as "having enthusiasm only for direct personal tax cuts which will aid the better off."

CHANCELLOR HELPS POUND STRENGTHEN

By Our Financial Correspondent

The Chancellor's reply to the employers' request for cheaper money, stressing the need for high interest rates as a means of controlling inflation, upset investors, but helped strengthen sterling yesterday afternoon.

The pound forged ahead and closed almost 1 cent. higher on balance at $1·29½ in London.

The Stock Market continued to reflect the lack of confidence among investors and steady profit-taking undermined share prices, bringing the FINANCIAL TIMES 30 Share Index down 15·6 to 956·5. It closed at the lowest point of the day and the worst since Jan. 3.

TENNIS TONGUE TWISTER

By Our Sports Staff

THE man who yesterday inflicted a surprise Wimbledon defeat on Mats Wilander, the first seed to fall this year, also proved more than a match for journalists.

Slobodan Zivojinovic from Yugoslavia, has been dubbed the player with the most unpronounceable name in the tournament, and his efforts to rectify the situation by carefully repeating it at a Press conference took almost as long as his 6-2, 5-7, 7-5, 6-0 centre court victory.

Slobodan, 21, ranked only 77th in the world, admitted that playing on the centre court was "like I was dreaming".

After the match his fiancee, Miss Zorica Desnica, 23, said the couple plan to marry in Belgrade 10 days after Wimbledon and are expecting their first child in September.

They said they had already filled their hotel room with baby clothes bought here. "We have bought a lot of things because there is a better choice over here than in Yugoslavia," said Miss Desnica, a law student.

To try and make up for time lost to the weather, play will begin on all courts at noon today, tomorrow and Saturday.

Newman briefs MPs and police chiefs

By JOHN WEEKS Crime Staff

ONE of the I R A suspects being held by Anti-Terrorist Branch detectives in Strathclyde was defeated as a candidate at elections in Ulster last month and another escaped is a mass break-out from the Maze prison, Northern Ireland, in September, 1983.

Peter Sherry stood as a candidate for Sinn Fein, the political wing of the I R A, in district council elections and lost.

Gerald McDonnell, 34, escaped from prison with 37 other prisoners in Sept., 1983. He had been jailed for 16 years in 1978 for posessing bomb-making material and illegal documents.

Police in the Irish Republic want to interview him in connection with other kidnapping and terrorist activities.

A Londonderry woman, Martina Anderson, is also believed to be one of those being questioned in Strathclyde.

16 in custody

Together with others already detained it brings the total now in custody to 16 in Scotland, Lancashire and London.

Sir Kenneth Newman, the Metropolitan Police Commissioner yesterday briefed chief constables of seaside towns threatened with I R A bombings at Scotland Yard.

He has been appointed in overall charge of the search for I R A bombs in the 12 hit-list towns.

Sir Kenneth also briefed 18 M Ps, all Conservatives, who have constituencies in the areas.

He has set up a national co-ordination centre at Scotland Yard.

This will be manned 24 hours a day by Metropolitan Police officers from the Anti-Terrorist Branch, Special Branch and from the uniformed branch.

The chief constable briefed yesterday by Sir Kenneth were Mr Frank Jordan, of Kent; Mr Ronald Stone, deputy chief constable of Essex; Mr John Duke, of Hampshire; Mr Brian Weight, of Dorset; Mr Peter Howse, assistant chief constable of Norfolk; Mr Donald Elliott, of Devon and Corwall; Mr Tony Leonard, deputy chief constable of Sussex; Sir Patrick Hamill, of Strathclyde, and Mr Brian Johnson, of Lancashire.

M Ps with constituencies in the affected areas had a separate briefing.

They were Mr Norman Miscampbell, Q C, Sir Peter Blaker and Sir Ian Percival, Q C, all of Blackpool, Mr David Atkinson, Mr John Balantine Butterfill, Viscount Cranborne and Mr John Ward, all of Bournemouth; Mr Andrew Bowden and Mr Julian Amery of Brighton; Mr Ian Gow, of Eastborne; Mr Michael Howard, Q C, of Folkestone.

Mr Michael Cartliss, of Great Aitken, of Ramsgate; Mr Christopher Chope and Mr James Hill, of Southampton; Mr Teddy Taylor and Mr Paul Channon, both of Southend; and Sir Frederic Bennett, of Torquay.

Mr Peter Rees, Q C, of Dover, and Mr Roger Gale, of Margate, were unableto attend and will be briefed separately at a later stage.

REBEL COUNCILS CLAIM BACKING FROM LABOUR

By NICHOLAS COMFORT Political Staff

LEFT-WING leaders of Liverpool and Lambeth councils emerged from a meeting with Labour's National Executive yesterday to claim that the party had pledged its total support for their defiance of the Government in refusing to set a legal rate.

But Mr Kinnock made it clear when the meeting broke up that the two rebel councils could only count on the backing of the party as long as they stayed within the law.

Councillors would be on their own if they were disqualified or surcharged.

What the party was prepared to do was to back legal action by th councils in support of its "defence of jobs and services" on the ground that the Government was violating local democracy. However, it was not implicity approving their overall tactics.

It later emerged that Mr Derek Hatton, Trotskyist deputy leadr of Liverpool council, had unsuccessfully pressed Mr Kinnock for an assurance that the party would support the council's tactics of deliberately setting a rate producing a budget deficit.

The Labour Leader responded by leaning across the table and telling Mr Hatton: "Gestures are fine, but people can't live on them. Gestures don't bring housing repairs or meals on wheels, and they don't pay the rent.

"If actions by Labour councils mean more power to the Tories because our people are put out of office, no-one gains but the Tories. Certainly communities and workers don't."

Auditor threat

Labour's meeting with the leaders of the two councils in England still defying the Government came on the eve of possible action by the District Auditor to surcharge or disqualify councillors.

Mr Edward "Red Ted" Knight, leader of Lambeth council, which has refused to set a rate at all, and Mr John Hamilton, leader of Liverpool said that they expected letters from the Auditor this morning or soon after.

In the face of this, the National Executive yesterday agreed to use a special fund to seek legal advice on how the two councils—and Edinburgh which faces similar penalties—could remain within the law.

Mr Eric Heffer, Left-wing MP for Liverpool Walton, proposed that the Executive offer "maximum support" for councillors threatened with disqualification and surcharge, but this was rejected by 18 votes to eight.

Instead the Executive accepted an amendment from Mr David Blunkett, leader of Sheffield council, offering support to try to prevent these legal sanctions. This was approved 25 to one.

IRISH PRESS DISPUTE IS SETTLED

By A Dublin Correspondent

Journalists and printers at the Dublin-based IRISH PRESS newspaper group accepted a return-to-work formula yesterday to end a five-week-old dispute which has kept the group's newspapers off the streets.

Journalists voted by two to one to accept the recommendation of the Labour Court just 45 minutes before a management deadline to close down the group's three papers expired.

The group's three national newspapers ceased publication more than five weeks ago and the majority of the 850 staff were laid off in a dispute over the introduction of new technology.

WRONG ADDRESSES

Mr Roger Everest, a barrister and the Independent Tory in the by-election, yesterday failed in a High Court attempt to force the Post Office to deliver his campaign leaflets free of charge. Brecon and Radnor By-election

Poll showing Tory in third place 'bogus'

By GRAHAM JONES

CONSERVATIVES in Brecon were furious last night about a Liberal poll which put them in third place.

Mr Chris Butler, the Tory candidate, said the Liberals usually did produce "bogus polls." He was very sceptical of canvass returns "and the way some parties use them."

He shrugged off suggestions that his support was crumbling, but admitted that he had not been helped by the Government's confirmation that a military training camp in the area is to close.

He received the news about the Cwrt-y-Gollen camp in a letter from Mr Heseltine, Defence Secretary, which contained implied criticism of the Tory candidate.

Bookmakers' odds

Mr Butler pointed out that an Alliance survey during the 1983 General Election which the Tories had won with an 8,700 majority had overestimated the Liberal vote by 10 per cent. "If anything my vote is hardening," he said.

His confidence was not reflected by the odds at the local bookmakers. Evans and James, where the Alliance are 5-4, Labour 7-4, Conservatives 2-1 and Plaid Cymru 100-1.

"We haven't taken a bet on the Tories all week," said a spokesman.

The Liberal canvass returns which caused such a stir in the up-to-now staid Brecon and Radnor by-election contest put support for Labour at 34 per cent., for the Alliance at 35 per cent., the Conservatives at 28 per cent. and Plaid Cymru at 2 per cent.

Mr Andrew Ellis, Liberal Alliance agent, said the good Labour showing was based on a weighted sample of 38 per cent. of the electorate.

Allowing for pro-Liberal bluff on the doorstep from those wishing themselves rid of callers, and a generous interpretation of results by the Liberals, the returns seem to indicate Labour a little ahead right now. However, the Liberals say 31 per cent. are still undecided.

WOODLAND DRILLING GO-AHEAD

OBJECTIONS to drilling for oil and gas in woodland near Guildford, Surrey, have been overruled by Mr Neil MacFarlane, junior Environment Minister.

He has given the go-ahead to Conoco, the United States energy group, to start exploratory tests near the village of Normandy, north-west Surrey, after accepting the report of an inspector who carried out a public inquiry.

Surrey County Council led the objectors to an application regarded by the oil industry as an important test case for the fast-developing search for oil and gas in green belt land in southern England. The objectors said that the develoopment would be an intrusion into the green belt area.

£45 to change fuse on video recorders

Consumer monitors who took "doctored" video recorders sent for repair to 15 shops in Birmingham, the Black Country, Solihull and Coventry were charged £45-89 in one instance. The only "fault" was a blown fuse.

The lowest bill sent to the West Midlands county council Surrey team was for £16-28—28p for the fuse and £16 for labour—and three bills were for more than £40. Six shops which claimed they had installed replacement parts had only replaced the fuse.

Smear test checks to be introduced

New guidelines to ensure that women are told of the results of cervical smear tests, whether positive or negative, are to be introduced by Oxfordshire district health authority. They follow the case of a woman who died of cancer last year. She was never told that a test in 1979 had proved positive.

Women will also be given record cards with details of test results, while tests will be repeated every five years for sexually active women considered to be at risk.

Hedges destroyed

Britain's hedges are still disappearing at an alarming rate with four times as many being destroyed as being planted, according to a survey by the Young Ornithologists' Club, the junior branch of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

The West of England had the worst record, with fewer than half of its hedges well cared for, but Scotland, Wales and Ireland had more than 60 per cent. of their hedges in good condition.

NUR strike ballot move leads change in attitude

By JOHN RICHARDS Industrial Correspondent

THE Union of Communication Workers appears likely to be the next union to modify its opposition to strike ballots under the Trade Union Act 1984.

Following the decision on Tuesday of the National Union of Railwaymen's conference in Ayr to alter its rules so that ballots are held before any national strike action, the UCW executive will be urged to make a similar move today.

Mr Alan Tuffin, UCW general secretary, will recommend to the executive that a special rules revision conference should b called in October to make strike ballots compulsory instead of optional as at present.

The NUR decision is now expected to reverberate among the unions, including those on teh "realistic" Left, who fear that they could be confronted with claims for up to £250,000 damages each time they cause disruption without a vote of the members concerned.

The TUC General Council was told yesterday that its key employment policy and organisation committee would be preparing a statement for the annual Congress in September on developing TUC policy on union legislation in the light of events since the 1982 Wembley conference pledged outright opposition.

The Council is awaiting a reply from the Amalgamated Union of Engineering Workers which could face disciplinary moves for accepting £1,200,000 Government money to finance postal ballots.

The committee is likely to recommend that the TUC should call on affiliated unions to observe the terms of the Wembley policy "in a tactically flexible way and on a case by case basis."

It acknowledged that some have perceived benefits in developing strategies for putting pressure on employers through the use of ballots.

'Cultural centre' planned to aid TUC finances

By JOHN RICHARDS Industrial Correspondent

UNION leaders have suggested that TUC headquarters at Congress House in London should become a cultural centre with a theatre, restaurant and bar facilities.

Alternatively, the TUC should follow the example of the National Union of Mineworkers and the National Union of Public Employees and move into cheaper accommodation.

The proposals were raised when the TUC's "inner cabinet," the finance and General purposes committee, was discussing forecasts of a potential deficit of £332,500 in 1985 rising to between £667,000 and £714,000 in 1986.

They were reported to the full TUC General Council yesterday which decided to raise the affiliation fees of 91 member unions by 10p a head to 70p from Jan. 1, 1986. A 5p increase in January 1984 brought in an extra £470,000.

Mr Norman Willis, TUC general secretary, said that the agreed increases should enable the TUC to maintain its current level of service.

But confidential financial reports put to the General Council show that cost-cutting moves proposed by Mr Willis include an attempt to save on heating and lighting, catering services, letting the TUC underground car park at nights and weekends and letting spare office accommodation.

Fall in reserves

The most adventurous proposal is to turn Congress Hall in Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, into a cultural centre. It enjoys easy access to main-line rail stations, Parliament and Whitehall.

Expenditure which had been expected to rise by £415,000 (8½ per cent.) in the year ending last December actually rose by £456,000 (9½ per cent.) including an extra £95,000 on appointments of regional secretaries and research assistants; £57,000 on conferences, demonstrations and campaigns; and a £52,000 rise in grants and donations following a decision to give two year's salary for death in service.

TUC reserves of £894,766 are expected to fall to £562,000 by the end of 1985. Even with the affiliation increase, the TUC expects to have a surplus of only between £250,000 and £500,000—only two or three weeks' expenditure—at the end of 1986.

EURO-COURT JUDGMENT RESERVED

By TERENCE SHAW in Strasbourg

THE European Court of Civil Rights reserved its judgment yesterday over claims that the Government failed to compensate adequately shareholders of certain nationalised aircraft and shipbuilding companies.

Mr ANTHONY LESTER said the Government had now belatedly recognised that British nationals whose property is nationalised were entitled under the convention to compensation that was real and not illusory.

But in its defence to compensation claims presented to the European Court in Strasbourg this week, the Government had failed to recognise that the compensation formula adopted by the previous Labour administration had resulted in compensation not reasonably related to the value of their property when nationalised in 1977.

Mr Lester was appearing for six groups of companies and Sir William Lithgow claiming additional compensation with interest totalling nearly £600 million.

The seven applicants that had brought the case against the government are, Sir WILLIAM LITHGOW; VOSPER, in respect of its subsidiaries VOSPER THORNYCRAFT (UK) and VOSPER SHIPREPAIRERS; ENGLISH ELECTRIC and VICKERS which jointly owns the BRITISH AIRCRAFT CORPORATION; VICKERS in respect of its shipbuilding group; YARROW; BANSTONIAN and DOWSETT SECURITIES.

They claim that the compensation formula adopted by parliament under the last Labour administration and which resulted in "grossly inadequate" compensation totalling £125 million contravened the protection of property provisions in Article 1 of the First Protocol to the Convention.

STRIKES AT 50 yr LOW

By STEPHEN WARD Industrial Staff

FIGURES published yesterday show that the number of strikes in the first five months of the year is the lowest for almost half a century.

Between January and May this year only 377 stoppages began—fewer than in any year since 1936—says the EMPLOYMENT GAZETTE.

Mr King, Employment Secretary, linked the trend to the impact of the 1984 Trade Union Act which has made it unlawful since last September to call a strike without holding a ballot.

The figures show that the number of working days lost through disputes rose slightly last month to 215,000. But the April total of 186,000 days lost was the lowest monthly figure for 50 years.

Of the days lost in May, 69,000 were because of the teachers' pay strike.

Over the past decade the average number of days lost each May was 635,000, almost three times as high as last month.

INVESTMENT BLOW FOR ISLINGTON

Investment by the London borough of Islington in co-operatives and companies has landed the Labour-controlled council with a loss of more than £400,000.

A confidential report by council has "apparently backed programme of financial assistance shows that 31 enterprises which received £417,098 in grants and loan guarantees have "closed down, moved out of the borough or cannot be contacted."

However the report says that another 132 local businesses which have received cash from the council since 1979 are still trading. It adds that the council has "apparently backed very few losers in what is essentially a high risk programme."

EUROPEAN BRIDGE

By A Bridge Correspondent in Salsomaggiore

After six rounds, the European Bridge championships in Salsomaggiore, Italy, are as open as on the first day. By a good win over their co-favourite, Poland, France now lead the table, but are not able to draw away from the field where several teams including Britain have a real chance.

The British team hopes to build on a foundation for which much credit should go to the non-playing captain, Tony Priday, bridge correspondent of THE SUNDAY TELEGRAPH, whose experience is of great value to the young team.

Talking point is the deplorable start made by Italy, now resting in 20th place out of 21. But as a team they are notorious for recovering in the second week, and it would be premature to ignore their chance.

ROUND 5: Holland, bye (18); Iceland 14; Italy 16; Britain 12; Portugal 18; Hungary 18; Sweden 12; Ireland 22; Luxembourg 8; Greece 10; Norway 14; Poland 18; Finland 12; Spain 8; France 22; Israel 20; Switzerland 10; Germany 17; Austria 13; Denmark 10; Belgium 20.

WORLD CHESS

The only victory in completed games in Round 12 of the World Chess International at Taxvo, Mexico, was by the American Walter Brown, who had been struggling in last place. He beat Cebalo (Yugoslavia).

The series of draws by the leaders has left Jonathan Speelman, of Britain, with an outside chance of reaching fourth place and qualifying for the Candidates tournament. Leaders:

1, Timman (Holland) 9½; equal 2, Nogueiras (Cuba), Sprassov (Canada) 8; 4, Tal (Soviet Union) 8½ (one postponed); 5, Steelman 6 (one adj.); equal 6, Andersen (Norway), Finter (Hungary) 5½; equal 8, Romanishin (Soviet Union) 5 (one adj), Cebalo 5.

BR's coal traffic cut by 10pc in £250m strike loss

By STEPHEN WARD Industrial Staff

BRITISH RAIL said yesterday that it had lost 10 per cent. of its coal traffic, worth £28 million a year, as a result of the miners' strike.

A large proportion of the loss was accounted for by customers who switched to road or sea transport during the strike.

The two main rail unions were "blacking" coal trains in sympathy with the miners.

The rest of the lost traffic was due to pits closing, or production being down since the end of the strike in March, BR said.

Coal is British Rail's largest section of traffic, and in the last year abnormal working generated an income of £280 million.

Because it is such a heavy, low value cargo, it is much cheaper to transport it on trains where one locomotive can pull dozens of trucks, rather than in lorry convoys where each vehicle has to have a driver.

Long-term contracts

But in many cases customers decided to pay whatever it cost to use lorries during the strike, and have stuck with them since, often because they signed long-term contracts in order to get a better rate.

A British Rail spokesman said that the lost traffic had not resulted in any job losses among railway staff. "We are still hoping to get back more of the traffic," he said.

British Rail estimates that it lost £250 million as a result of the miners' strike, because pits on strike were producing no coal to carry, and because the unions were refusing to carry coal from the working areas, such as Nottinghamshire, and were also "blacking" iron ore and finished steel.

BRITAIN TOP FOR DOCK STOPPAGES

By JOHN PETTY Shipping Correspondent

BRITAIN had by far the worst record in the world last year for dock strikes, according to the firm which insures shipowners against port disputes.

Two national dock strikes, in support of striking miners, did most o fthe damage as Britain accounted for 48 per cent. of all cliams made, said Transmarine Mutual Strike Assurance.

Canada came second, with 15·7 per cent. total claims, and Australia third with 11·3 per cent. In the previous year, Britain had been second to Denmark with Australia again in third position.

"The first of the two big British strikes last year was very sudden, giving shipowners no time to take evasive action and switch vessels to continental ports," said Transmarine, which is London based.

Claims soared

The strike fund covers a fleet totalling 6,400,000 gross tons of international shipping.

Total claims in 1983 came to $886,000 (£692,000) but for 1984 they soared to $3,200,000 (£2,500,000). International shipping generally conducts its affairs in dollors.

In the five years 1980-84, Australia had the poorest record and accounted for 21·7 per cent. of all claims, with Britain a close second at 21·1 per cent. and Sweden third at 11·1 per cent.

Pit strike 'heroes' left frightened & isolated

By JAMES O'BRIEN

THE pit strike is history now, but for miners who were among the first to defy it the undimmed enmity it provoked leaves them working a world of silence, intimidation and bitterness.

The men who were feted as heroes by those who followed them back to work find themselves today isolated and without support.

During and since the dispute some pit managers displayed a marked lack of interest in safeguarding the men who returned to work.

Even the Coal Board's own executives in South Yorkshire and the Doncaster area's acknowledge that some managers did not want the problems of victimisation brought to their pits by encouraging men to break the strike.

Violent intimidation has now given way to "invisible intimidation"—prompted, the victims claim, by union branches exerting pressure on the NUM membership.

Threat to home

Over 200 Yorkshire miners have moved to jobs in Nottinghamshire pits since the end of the strike.

But those who want to sell their homes have encounted the invisible intimidation.

A miner at Beavercotes colliery in Nottinghamshire who moved from Hatfield Main near Doncaster finds he is unable to sell his house because of the spite still harboured by strikers.

Prospective buyers in the village where he still lives have been warned by "yobs seeking vengeance" that the property would be damaged after they moved into the house.

The miner, who did not want to be identified, has seen three would be buyers back off from completing the purchase after warnings about damage.

Mr Ronald Bint, 48, a dirt disposal driver at Yorkshire Main colliery, Edlington, Doncaster, has decided to take voluntary redundancy after working all his life in the industry.

His council house at Edlington was set ablaze when he became the only man at the pit going into work.

It has been refurbished by the council and offered to him for re-occupation, but he is too frightened to move back.

He is still paying the rent of £21 a week, including rates, for a house he fears to live in.

He said yesterday: "They have got me out of my job, I shall try to find another but I am down in the dumps.

Damned by photos

He sits alone to eat his "snap". Even then, some hardliners shout at him, and on one occasion one man kept up the barrage of hate for four days during the lunch break.

He claims that union men took photographs of him and other miners who broke the strike at Yorkshire Main, and branches at other collieries have been given the pictures so that strike-breakers could be identified.

When he recently visited Norton Working Mens' Club near Askern colliery, about seven miles from his own pit, a man tapped him on the shoulder and asked him to leave.

"Nobody should have recognised me out there, and I believe I was identified from a photograph taken during the dispute and passed around," Mr Bint said.

Even on public transport there are times when he is abused and called a scab in front of other passengers.

When he went for his interview for voluntary redundancy he discovered that he was one of 24 others seeking it, that the other 23 were also strike-breakers, and he was the only one not "on sick pay."

Mr Terry Moore was transferred from his job as an underground train driver at Allerton Bywater colliery, near Castleford, to Riccall mine in the Selby coalfield after bags of urine were thrown at him.

After a short time at Riccall, when NUM officials were told about him by men at Allerton Bywater, the mood towards him changed.

Before he moved home to another area somebody tampered with his motor cycle. On his way to Riccall it veered off the road and he was injured.

A qualified mechanic examined it and confirmed that it had been tampered with mechanically.

Shopping ordeal

At Rossington Colliery, Doncaster, Walter Sharpes' name is still painted across the road to the pit.

He works in the power house and travels from the neighbouring pit village of Armthorpe, where his house has been up for sale for six months. There is no sign yet of a buyer.

His visit to the shops in Armthorpe always means catcalling and jeers, and there are only four or five men who will speak to him at Rossington colliery.

"If I could sell my house and get a better job I'd go," he admits. "The trouble is my wife likes Doncaster. I can take a lot, but getting it every day gives me the pip.

"It is a war. You have to stand up. The men underground are tough and they can give you a mouthful, although they would like to give you a fistful. They know they would get the sack if they did."

A Coal Board official at Doncaster said that it would take action over verbal abuse and intimidation. Some men had already been dismissed on those grounds since the strike ended.

The management at Riccall are aware of Mr Moore's situation, but had not received any complaint from him.

PITMAN KILLED

TATTERSALLS FIASCO BLAMED ON GAMBLER

TATTERSALLS, the bloodstock auctioneers, emerged from the High Court yesterday with their 200-year reputation intact after a judge cleared them of negligence in the sale of a yearling colt.

The horse was knocked down for 430,000 guineas, but the "buyer", professional gambler Mr JAMES FLOOD, denied making the final bid. Two days later, the animal fetched only 200,000 gns.

Mr Justice HIRST laid the blame for the fiasco squarely at the dor of Mr Flood, who, he said, was a braggart, a liar and a cheat.

The colt's original owners, Liechenstein-based ALCHEMY INTERNATIONAL, had sued TATTERSALLS and Mr Flood for the 230,000 gns difference between the prices.

Mr Justice Hirst cleared Tattersalls of blame and awarded Alchemy 230,000 gns damages against Mr Flood, 30, of Malone Road, Belfast.

The judge said he resisted the temptation to speculate about Mr Flood's motives in bidding for the colt and then repudiating the bid. During the 13-day court hearing in London, witnesses had spoken of the practice of "running up" the bidding for bloodstock.

The practice, they said, was aimed at forcing up the price of horses by using false bidders—especially when, as in the present case, the genuine bidders were Arabs.

Racing highspot

The judge said Tattersalls' yearling sales at Newmarket were a highspot in the racing calender.

In 1983, a bay colt sired by Riverman was taken to the sales ring on Alchemy's behalf by top trainer Mr Henry Cecil. Mr Cecil and his brother David had reared it at their stud in Hemisley, Yorkshire.

After the disputed bid, the colt was re-sold at a time when most of the top buyers had left Newmarket. The buyer, Sheik Hamdan El Maktoum, of Dubai, named the horse Sulafaah.

Alchemy claimed that Tattersalls' auctioneer, Capt Kenneth Watt, was negligent in not reselling the colt immediately after the repudiated bid.

The judge ruled that it was reasonable for Capt. Watt to hold the colt back because that day's sales were coming to an end and buyers were drifting away.

Both Tattersalls and Alchemy were "caught up, the moment the hammer fell, in the dishonest machinations of Mr Flood," who fled Newmarket when he realised he might be held liable, said the judge.

Mr Flood lay low for six months before being arrested by police on suspicion of fraud. He was released without charge.

He admitted bidding up to 410,000 gns for Sulafaah, claiming that he was part of a three-man Irish syndicate, but denied making the 430,000 gns bid.

The judge said Mr Flood had told police: "I'm the biggest gambler in Ireland—they write books about me." He boasted of winning £300,000 at poker and losing £70,000 at Cheltenham races.

Everyone cheats

He described himself in court as "an honest man but not a straightforward one," claiming that "everyone cheats at horses."

Alchemy will have to bear the brunt of the estimated £400,000 costs of the 13-day hearing, since it was its unsuccesful claim against the auctioneers which took up most of the time.

Mr Flood was ordered to pay Alchemy's costs of their case against him and the costs of third party proceedings in which Tattersalls claimed indemnity against him in the event of their being held liable.

Tattersalls later obtained an order from the judge in private, freezing Flood's assets and property within the court's jurisdiction.

It is unlikely that Alchemy will get their damages from Flood, whose assets were described by the judge as "evidently substantially less valuable" than those of Tattersalls.

After the case, Mr Geoffrey Hart, Tattersall's financial adviser, said: "This bizarre and odd case has been hanging over us for two years. Apart from one previous case concerning a wealthy butcher who reneged over a sale, nothing like this has happened to Tattersalls in the last 40 years. I have not the faintest idea why Mr Flood did it.

Wife driven to divorce by strong, silent type

GEORGE STEER, a former policeman, was a strict disciplinarian who used to put his three children "on parade", it was stated in the Divorce Court yesterday. His word was law, and if he did not get his own way he would sulk in silence, not speaking for up to three months at a time.

Yesterday, after the longest period of silence — nearly three-and-half years under the same roof with barely a word passing between them — his wife, Brenda, 62, was granted a decree nisi.

Mr Justice Hollis, in the High Court Family Division, said that, while it was not the most serious of cases and it was agreed that Mr Steer, 59, did have good points, it would be unreasonable to expect his wife to continue living with him because of his behaviour.

Since January 1982, the couple, who married in August 1950, had had separate bedrooms and sitting rooms at their home in Adelphi Crescent, Hayes, Middlesex, had eaten their meals separately and had had little conversation.

'A martinet'

The judge said Mr Steer, who now worked as an investigator, was "something of a martinet" particularly where the children were concerned.

To some degree children needed discipline, said the judge, but his three children, Marilyn, now 33, Keith, 29, and Julia, 22, "were put on parade before him from time to time."

There were endless rows, and when his wife had sided with the children the husband had "sulked, would not communicate and would not speak."

Mr Steer claimed that the marriage had not broken down, and if it had it was not his fault. The judge disagreed.

WIFE POLICE 'NEGLECTED' GETS £1·7m

By IAN BALL in New York

A CONNECTICUT woman has been awarded $2,300,000 (£1,786,000) on her claim that police violated her constitutional rights by failing to protect her from an attack by her estranged husband.

In addition the Federal jury in Hartford, Connecticut, awarded $300,000 (£233,000) to her son, three, who witnessed the attack in June, 1983.

Mrs Tracey Thurman, 24, claimed Torrington police department failed to give her complaints of harassment by her husband as much consideration as other complaints because the context was a "domestic dispute."

The jury found the police had, indeed, violated her right to equal protection. The police are expected to appeal.

Mrs Thurman was stabbed 13 times and kicked in the head by Charles Thurman, who is serving a 15-year jail term for the assault. She had started divorce proceedings, and the marriage has since been dissolved.

12 YEARS FOR TIDEY KIDNAP EX-SOLDIER

A former Irish soldier returned yesterday to Portlaoise, the jail he once used to guard, but this time as a prisoner. Michael Burke, 28, from Cork City, was jailed for 12 years by Dublin's anti-terrorist Special Criminal Court for his part in the kidnap of Mr Don Tidey, the British-born boss of the Quinnsworth group of stores.

Burke, an unemployed father of three, was convicted after a four-day trial of falsely imprisoning Mr Tidey outside his Co. Dublin home

Mr Tidey had been forced at gunpoint into a bogus police car and held for three weeks before being rescued. Burke was picked out at an identification parade nine months later by a neighbour of Mr Tidey who had been stopped by the gang by mistake.

DRIVER WRECKS CAR SHOW ROOM

A driver repeatedly rammed his car into plate glass windows and doors at a garage showroom in Iffley Road, Oxford, yesterday, causing £10,000 of damage.

When his Volkswagen car became too damaged to drive, he got out and tried to smash up parts of the Motorlux showroom with an iron bar. A man was later being questioned by police.

BUYING BRITISH

The chairman of Japan's External Trade Organisation, a government body promoting imports to cut the country's huge trade deficits, ordered a British Jaguar yesterday as his new official car.—Reuter.

Like Donic, the crazy robot wine waiter whose antics landed him in court in Edinburgh, his fellow robot Argon (above) gave Ruth Gladhill a soaking when serving her a glass of vin extraordinaire in London's West End yesterday.

HEADLESS ROBOT GOES HOME

THE case of the robot wine waiter than went out of control in a restaurant, knocking over furniture and frightening the customers, was settled out of court yesterday.

MR JOHN CAMPBELL, counsel for PROJECTS BARLOW, of Woodstock Street, Westminster, told Lord Davidson in the Court of Session in Edinburgh that "certain payments" would be made to the company by the defenders F G H Systems, of West Harbour Road, Granton, Edinburgh, and the robot would be returned to it in London.

The terms of the settlement were not disclosed.

The London company had sued the Edinburgh firm for £4,887—the purchase price of the second-hand robot, when F G H Systems refused to pay.

The Edinburgh company, which ordered the robot, said it could not send an account to the Kavie Restaurant in Commercial Street, Leith, Edinburgh, when the robot did not work.

Head fell off

The court was told that the robot was used as a wine waiter, but soon after it was installed, in July, 1983, it began to spill wine and became erratic and uncontrollable, finally dropping its plastic head into a customer's lap.

An engineer from the London company, who installed the robot, said in evidence that the robot was now in a dilapidated state. He thought the restaurant had either undercharged the battery or had plugged it into the receiver socket instead of the transmitter socket.

The disgraced robot was removed later by van to be returned to London for a complete overhaul.

Mr Robert Barlow, chairman of Projects Barlow, said that his robots did not usually behave so erratically. "They don't scare people. We have trained operators to run them. If they are hired out they are hired with an operator. They have to assume a personality to fit the clients' need," he said.

Meanwhile, the firm's senior robot, Argon, was delighting tourists and office workers at a West End wine bar yesterday. "He's a good boy really," said one waitress, Susan Lewis, 25.

GORED RANGER HELD FIRE

A game ranger allowed himself to be gored by a ch black rhinoceros, instead of shooting it because it belonged to an endangered species, the NATAL MERCURY newspaper reported yesterday.

The rhino battered Dave Reynold's legs, ripped open his right thigh and knocked him to the ground in a nature reserve near Durban.—Reuter.

ART LOVER'S WILL

Mrs Beatrice Moresby, of Park Lane, Mayfair, who died last May, aged 84, has left £1,863,034 net (£1,899,870 gross) in her will published yesterday. Australian-born Mrs Moresby bequeathed her pictures and paintings to the National Art Collections Fund with the request that they be loaned to the Art Gallery of New South Wales.

Judge settles legal battle over Beirut

A LEGAL battle over ownership of one of Beirut's bloodiest battlefields was resolved in the High Court in London yesterday by Mr Justice HARMAN.

He ordered Mr NABIL AL-SHOWK, a Lebanese property developer, to transfer The Triangle in central Beirut to Mr VARE AGABABIAN, a Lebanese businessman, who claimed his money was used to buy the site, once the city's business heart.

Mr MARK LOMAS, counsel for Mr Agababian, of Whitehaven Close, Bromley, said his client gave Mr Al-Showk, of Ducan Terrace, Islington, £90,000 to buy development land in 1979.

A High Court case in London last year was cut short when Mr Al-Showk agreed to transfer the land to Mr Agababian, but despite repeated requests he had not executed the legal hand-over.

Transfer opposed

Opposing the transfer order, Mr CHRISTOPER MCCALL, for Mr Al-Showk, said that such an order might not be enforceable in a Lebanese court.

The judge said an English court had power to make orders about the ownership of land abroad if the parties to the dispute were in this country.

Mr Justice Harman, who had earlier described the case as "extraordinary" said: "I hope the United States Navy don't put too many shells on it."

AWARD FOR RAIL FLOWER SCHEME

British Rail's efforts to improve stations with hanging flower baskets and an anti-litter campaign won the Keep Britain Tidy Group's environmental award yesterday. It came as part of the Queen Mother's Birthday Awards.

B R has started an anti-litter campaign, provided more than 10,000 hanging flower baskets for stations and embarked on a partnership with local authorities and groups matching funds to improve stations.

SIX KILLED BY OWN GRENADES IN S. AFRICA

By CHRISTOPHER MUNNION in Johannesburg

EIGHT blacks were killed and seven injured in hand-grenade incidents in townships east of Johannesburg yesterday, and limpet mines destroyed a bulk fuel depot, a power station and a dam in the Transkei Homeland.

South African police said that six of the dead appeared to have blown themselves up while attempting a "co-ordinated terrorist attack" on the homes of black policemen and on an electricity substation.

One of the dead was clutching a hand-grenade tin. Several other bodies had the right hand missing. Some of the injured had their arms or hands blown off.

Relatives of some of the dead identified them as teenaged active members of the Congress of South African Students, a black group affiliated to the United Democratic Front, the umbrella organisation for anti-apartheid groups.

In Dudusa Township, near Nigel, police fired birdshot and tear gas to disperse about 3,000 people who gathered around the multilated bodies of three victims of the hand-grenade blasts.

Bishop's home

In Kwathema, near Springs, three shots were fired at the home of the Rt Rev. Simeon Nkoane, Bishop Suffragan of Johannesburg East, and the house was set on fire. Nobody was injured. It was the second attack on the bishop's home in a week.

Police said the hand grenades involved were of Soviet manufacture and of the type usually used by activists of the banned African National Congress (A N C).

In Umtata, capital of the independant Transkei Homeland, bulk fuel tanks owned by the Transkei Development Corporation were destroyed by an eight-hour fire after an explosion early yesterday.

The town's power supply was cut when a second explosion destroyed two main transformers. A third blast at a dam affected the main water supply to the capital.

Police found two unexploded limpet mines also of Soviet make and said all the explosions appeared to have been caused by mines.

Chief George Matanzima, Transkei Prime Minister blamed saboteurs from outside for the attacks but woulud not say if he thought the A N C responsible.

Yesterday was the 30th anniversary of the A N C's "Freedom Charter." The incidents also coincided with the end of an A N C conference in northern Zambia, at which the organisation vowed to intensify its "political and military offensive" in South Africa.

Threat to shoppers

The conference agreed military action should be extended to include so-called "soft" targets such as white farmers and shopping centres.

The A N C also warned the New Zealand Rugby Union that its touring team, due to play in South Africa later this year, would "only have themselves to blame if their lives were endangered."

Maputo seeking U.S. aid to stop rebels

By JAMES MacMANUS in Harare

THE Marxist government of Mozambique is to appeal to America for help in halting the rebel offensive in the East African country that threatens to sweep President Samora Machel from power.

Washington has already expressed interest in the initiative by Zimbabwe and Tanzania to launch a military rescue operation for the regime in Maputo, according to Mozambique sources.

Western diplomats feel the planned deployment of 20,000 Zimbabwean troops in central Mozambique by the end of the year will need to be matched by an infusion of foreign funds if President Machel is to survive the onslaught by the Mozambique National Resistance, which controls 90 per cent of the country.

£50m in food aid

President Machel is due to pay an official visit to Washington in December, but, according to relable sources in Harare, influential figures close to the administration are urging President Reagan to accept the visit in late August or early September.

The tantalising reward for America could be the expulsion of the Russians and their East European satellites from the positions of influence in Mozambique they have established since the country's independence from Portugal in 1975.

Moscow provides Mozambique with 150,000 tons of fuel a year on a deferred payment programme that barely allows the capital and the remnants of its Army to function.

President Reagan agreed last year to provide £2 million of non-lethal military aid to Maputo, but the Senate recently vetoed the deal.

Washington does however provide £50 million of food aid to President Machel's crippled country, and the figure will rise to £90 million this year.

Mozambique sources now say that, if this aid could be increased to cover the country's fuel costs, the already waning Soviet influence could be brought to an end.

In light of Mr Reagan's review of United States relations with South Africa and the tempting prospect that the Soviets and their allies could be removed from the south-east African coast, the Mozambique government is counting on a major increase in aid from Washington.

JAIL TERMS FOR DAM NEGLIGENCE

Five Soviet officials at a chemicals plant in the western Ukraine have been jailed for terms of up to five years for negligence in connection with a pollution disaster in 1983, the government newspaper IZVESTIA said yesterday.

The accident occurred when a reservoir dam burst at a giant ammonia-processing and storage plant in Lvov, sending toxic waste pouring into three rivers, killing thousands of fish, swamping farmland and cutting water supplies to cities throughout the region for several days.—Reuter.

Australian atom tests hearing row

THE British Government has launched a stinging attack on the Royal Commission into its Australian atomic tests.

Counsel for the Government, Mr Robin Auld, accused the commission of mismanaging documents and having "an unresponsive attitude" towards problems of some parties to the hearing.

Mr Auld said that where Commission staff had marked some of the documents, the sections marked were "mostly those that are potentially adverse to the United Kingdom.

"Those that may be of value to the commission but which are not adverse to the United Kingdom are mostly left unflagged," he said. Mr Auld said parties were unable to identify or examine several hundred files which as yet appeared not to have been read by anybody from the Commission.

Counsel assisting the Commission, Mr Peter McClellan, accused Mr Auld of adopting the tone of a "whinging Pom." The criticisms were "perhaps a reflection of the insecurity which Mr Auld and those instructing him feel about the strength of the British position."

British 1m for Bangladesh

A British appeal for victims of the Bangladesh cyclone has passed its £1 million target. The £1,060,000 contributed is being used to help thousands who lost homes, relatives, crops, and livestock when a tidal wave killed up to 15,000 people.

Thousands more Bangladeshis have now fled from their homes because of monsoon floods in the eastern part of the country.

Joint command in Cambodia

The two non-Communist Cambodia resistance groups have agreed to fight under a joint military command. The Khmer People's National Liberation Front and the forces loyal to Prince Sihanouk, who oppose the occupying Vietnamese Army, said the joint command would mean a more efficient struggle.

The top military post is expected to go to Gen. Sak Sutsakhan, of the National Liberation Front, who was Minister of Defence during the Lon Nol regime. The Communist Khmer Rouge, third partner in the anti Vietnamese coalition, is not part of this agreement.

Hundreds help to save whales

Trawlers towed 21 stranded whales to safety as hundreds of people helped at Crowdy Head, New South Wales, to rescue dozens of the creatures from one of the biggest mass beachings recorded in Australia. About 50 whales died on the beach.

Mr Laurie Levy, of Melbourne's whale rescue centre, said the whales were not suicidal. When a sick whale was in trouble others trying to help it would follow it into shallow water, where their echo sounding navigational system would give them false signals.

Election likely in Portugal

An October election is expected in Portugal following the collapse this week of the Socialist-led ruling coalition.

President Eanes met the advisory Council of State before deciding whether to call an election two years early. He had asked the four main Parliamentary parties to try to agree on a stable new Government without elections, but only the Socialists (101 seats out of 250) backed his call.

Basque separatist terrorists have shot dead Estanislao Galindez, 65, a postman and father of eight, as he cycled to work in a small town near Vittoria, the troubled region's capital. He was the terrorists' 20th victim this year. Four years ago they murdered his brother.

Walkabout popularity won by Gorbachev

By NIGEL WADE in Moscow

THE Kremlin leader, Mr Gorbachev, is developing his "Mr Personality" style in a series of tours to meet working people outside Moscow.

He is winning popularity that will be valuable to him as he seeks to consolidate his power in the run-up to the five-yearly Communist party congress next February.

In Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, this week he made more walkabout visits of the kind that proved so successful for him in Leningrad last month.

Not entirely impromptu

He chatted with a group of workers in front of television news cameras in Kiev's Victory Park. It was not an entirely impromptu gathering, judging by the working men's Sunday-best suits, complete with war decorations.

But, like the Leningrad outing, the free and easy style was fresh and attractive to people who saw it on television.

Mr Gorbachev, 54, has been in office for little more than three months. He assured people in Kiev that his measures to tighten workplace discipline and accelerate production would bring good results, even if ill-wishers abroad hoped they would not.

Recalling the harsh years in the Ukraine after the Nazi occupation 40 years ago, Mr Gorbachev asked the small crowd: "Didn't we cope? Didn't we rise again, although some said we were finished?"

When a man's voice asked, "What about Star Wars?" Mr Gorbachev said: "Don't worry about it."

A woman interjected: "Why shouldn't we? We are all living beings, and we are frightened."

Mr Gorbachev answered her: "Don't worry. We shall not let ourselves be cheated."

As he left, he told the workers: "We rely on your support." Voices from the crowd wished him health and "many, many years ahead."

The party leader toured a metallurgical institute, an aircraft factory and technical design centres, in an itinerary planned to underline the importance he attaches to science and technology.

"It's true that the people work well here in the Ukraine, but it's also true that they can work better," he bluntly told one group he met.

Cry of 'we will try'

One of the people gathered around him called out, "We will try".

Mr Gorbachev is expected further to strengthen his political position at important Kremlin gatherings next week. A full session of the party Central Committee is expected to precede the opening on Tuesday of the summer session of the Supreme Soviet, or "Parliament".

The Central Committee could approve further top-level personnel changes. The Supreme Soviet is expected to name a new Soviet President to succeed President Chernenko, who died in March, and possibly to replace the Prime Minister, Mr Nikolai Tikhonov, who is 80.

Senior Chinese planning Moscow trade mission

By HUGH DAVIES in Peking

IN yet another attempt to narrow the 25-year-old Sino-Soviet split, Peking is sending Vice-Premier Yao Yilin to Moscow next month, although his mission, according to yesterday's official announcement in Peking, is mainly to expand economic ties.

The Chinese emphasised the visit was a "return" engagement after the December trip to Peking by Mr Ivan Arkhipov, First Deputy Prime Minister and highest ranking Soviet to visit for 15 years.

Yao is to discuss trade matters and sign an ecomonic pact covering the next five years.

Moves are also afoot to open a Soviet consulte in Shanghai, where Britain has recently installed a consul-general. In return, the Russians are to allow the Chinese a mission in Leningrad.

Disturbing sight

Mr Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, has already voiced his wish for "a serious improvement" in relations with China, but is thought to regard Peking's moves to reform its economy as suicidal in terms of Marxist-Leninist ideology.

The Russians were said to have been disturbed when the Chinese tried to point the way on economic reform by taking Mr Arkhipov to their most pro-Western zone, Shenzen, near Hongkong.

Peking makes no secret of the fact that political rapprochement is unlikely in the foreseeable future, but believes there is good business to be done.

Trade is already increasing, with the Chinese exchanging food for steel, metal, timber, chemical fertilisers, cement and machinery. Last year, about 400,000 tons of soybeans, canned meat and the like was swopped for 500,000 tons of building materials at Suifenhe, a frontier town in north-east China.

Soviet Transport Ministry officials have an office in the town's railway station, and the Chinese are eager to restore the rail service to Vladivostok.

DEMOCRACY BILL FOR HONGKONG

THE Hongkong government yesterday defied public opposition and passed a bill designed to pave the way for more democracy and autonomy in the colony before it reverts to Chinese sovereignty.

Large chunks of the Legislative Council (Powers and Privileges) Bill had been cut after opposition from lawyers, pressure groups, unions and journalists who denounced it as an attempt to muzzle free speech. Fifty groups opposed to the Bill made a last-minute attempt last night to get its final reading delayed.

The government said the Bill set out existing powers of Hongkong's top lawmaking body, which are now rooted in the British parliament, and would give a new-style Legislative Council a firm Hongkong identity.

In October, 24 elected members will sit for the first time in a 56-member council. All are now government appointed.

Opposition to the Bill centred on a clause, since scrapped, stating anyone who defamed the council or reported its closed sessions could be jailed for three years.

PRINCE LOWERS HIS GUARD

By TONY ALLEN-MILLS in Halifax, Nova Scotia

A TANTELISING tale of the English prince, the beautiful singer, the strawberry shortcake and the pot of whipped cream was titillating Canadians as Prince Andrew left New Brunswick for Nova Scotia yesterday.

For the rst time on the Prince's eight day Canadian tour, a brush with a pretty girl led him to drop his shield of cautious reserve and playfully return to his old gallivanting style.

The girl who caught the Prince's eye was Joan Kennedy, a seductive 25-year-old Canadian singer who had a number one Country and Western hit with her record "Big Girl Now."

Cream tease

Miss Kennedy revealed yesterday that after singing for the Prince with her Country Clover band on Tuesday night at a barbeque in the rural town of Sussex, she was asked to take a seat at the Royal table.

Arriving as dessert of strawberry shortcake was being served, the slender, suntanned blonde made a striking impression on the 25-year-old Prince, who started teasing her with a spoon laden with cream.

"He put the spoon up to my mouth and kept playing, pulling the cream away when I tried to taste it," the singer said.

The pair jocked and chatted for almost 15 minutes amid envious glances from other female guests, Miss Kennedy added.

I quite fancied him. I was quite comfortable sitting beside him," she said, describing herself as "just kind of footloose and fancy free."

Livestock on show

But any hopes the singer may have entertained of a more intimate encounter with the bachelor Prince were dashed when, at the end of the meal, he failed to leave his telephone number. "I was very hurt," Miss Kennedy said, with a twinkle in her eye.

Prince Andrew was perhaps on safer ground before the barbecue, when he diligently inspected a modest selection of prize-winning local livestock.

Later he tried his hand at the Canadian sport of horse-shoe pitching. To the delight of the crowd, his luck was in and his very first toss was on target. He tried a few more throws to not such good effect, and wisely quit while still ahead.

MUD-SLINGING CONTINUES ON UN BIRTHDAY

By Our Staff Correspondent in San Francisco

Super-power mud-slinging that has bedeviled the United Nations from the start continued even while the world organisation was celebrating its 40th birthday in San Francisco yesterday.

Mr Vsevlovod Oleandrov, Deputy Soviet United Nations Ambassador, accused the United States of being partially responsible for the Beirut hostage crisis with American support of "Israeli arrogance," contributing to Shi'ite terrorism.

On the other hand, General Vernon Walters, American United Nations Ambassador, accused Communist nations of undermining the self-determination of developing countries.

Partisans carry out executions in Philippines streets

By DENIS WARNER in Davao City, Philippines

A MAN was shot dead at close range on a street in Davao City on Tuesday night and his killer walked away casually with a small escort. This was an execution, the work of Filipino partisans of the Communist New People's Army.

The "Army" insists that no bullets should be wasted, so the victim was killed by a single shot to the head.

The security forces, when they kill clandestinely, as they do all the time, are spendthrift with their ammunition, and their victims are often tortured.

Between Jan. 1 and May 30 this year, there have been 412 political murders in Davao City. The total so far this month is more than 90.

The police are afraid to walk the streets of this city, the third largest in the Philippines with a population of about one million. So far this year 70 out of the city's force of 600 policemen have been killed.

'Town of death'

In the squatter suburb of Agdao, now declared out of bounds by the military for all foreigners, and with its inner areas blocked off by high wooden gates, 28 of a captain's armed guard of 37 have been killed. So many people have been killed in one area that it has now been officially named Baryo Patay, or "Town of Death."

Despite the presence of six battalions of troops, the armed forces have failed to get effective control, and in many cases have succeeded only in alienating large sections of the population.

Agdao is heavily under the influence of the New People's Army and is clearly sympathetic to its cause. Three other areas in the city are heavily under its influence.

Mr Luis Bantos, a former mayor and former chief of police, told me that support for the 'Army' was all but total. There were two governments in Davao, he said, one visible, one invisible. The people paid taxes to both.

The middle class is caught between two firms, the New People's Army and the security forces. It is powerless to extinguish either, and it knows that sooner or later it will be forced to take sides in what is becoming a bloody civil war.

The situation in all of Mindanao is deteriorating. After moving some of its partisan forces to Manila, the "Army" has been expanding its regular forces and building up its stocks of weapons and ammunition.

A year ago, attacks on towns were rare. Now company-sized forces of up to 150 men mount at least a couple of attacks each month on town halls, gathering in the local police armouries.

Attacks such as the ambush in which seven policemen were killed at Kiblawan, about an hour's drive from Devao have become commonplace.

Sixty per cent. of the Philippines armer forces is said to be deployed on the island. The military rarely ventures into vast areas of the hinterland and more than one third of the island is now said to be under de facto Communist control.

Delors rejects British ideas for Euro-policy

By ALAN OSBORN Common Market Correspondent

BRITISH proposals for the development of the Common Market were sharply attacked yesterday by the president of the E E C Commission, M. Jacques Delors.

He rejected ideas put forward by Sir Geoffrey Howe, Foreign Secretary, that would preserve an individual country's right of veto over E E C policies.

The British plan would provide for more E E C decisions to be taken by a majority vote, where one or more countries' opposition can be over-ruled, but it specifically preserves the right of veto in cases where a government feels its national interests are endangered.

Speaking in Brussels before the Milan E E C summit meeting beginning tomorrow, M. Delors said the veto right had, in recent years, crippled the Community's ability to take decisions and he urged the summit to back proposals for phasing out the practice.

His tough stand surprised many officials since it is now believed that the drive to eliminate the veto has lost support in recent month. The single biggest reason is West Germany's recent veto of a farm price cut — an act that has seriously undermined Bonn's authority in calling for the veto right to be abandoned.

Rival secretariat

Geoffrey's suggestion that a new, permanent secretariat be set up in Brussels to co-ordinate the foreign policies of the member countries.

He feared that such a secretariat could grow in authority, making the unspoken assumption that in due course it would rival the Commission itself.

The Commission president took the same view as Britain on the need for a single free E E C member countries but said this would not be achieved unless majojrity voting was employed to override national practices aimed at protecting industries and services.

M. Delors urged the Milan summit to consider the report drawn up on European union by the so-called Dooge commitee earlier this year which called for an end to the veto right and increased powers for the European Parliament.

Britain submitted alternative texts on both these points, in both cases proposing a more cautious approach. Denmark and Greece share Britain's reservations about ending the veto and increasing the European Parliament's powers.

Britain also opposes the calling of an inter-governmental conference later this year to consider changes in the E E C treaties designed to improve decision-making.

ARMY DOUBLED

Zaires' armed forces are to be doubled from 50,000 to 100,000 men. The decision comes only days after a rebel attack across Lake Tanganyika on the port town of Moba, which was occupied briefly by rebel forces, based in Tanzania, last November.—A P.

ALL-PARTY APPEAL BY MITTERRAND

By MICHAEL FIELD in Paris

PRESIDENT MITTERRAND appealed yesterday to French people of all political persuasions to rally around the slogan of "modernising" their country.

His call for a "sporting attitude" by the opposition sounded the death-knell of sectarian socialism and appeared to offer broad political co-operation with the resurgent right wing.

Winding up a two-day official tour of the Languedoc-Rousillon area with a speech in the main square of Carcassonne on Tuesday night, he denounced the communist party leaders for "running away" from their obligations under the government's economic policy which was "the fruit of decisions taken with them."

Although he never used the fashionable jargon "cohabitation," M. Mitterrand more than once emphasised his determination to complete his elected term until April 1988, implying a willingness to work with the conservative opposition if, as expected, it wins next year's general election.

'Lost his cool'

For former President Giscard D'Estaing, interviewed yesterday on radio, M. Mitterrand's Carcassonne speech was an admission that "socialism has failed."

For M. Georges Marchais, Communist leader, the President's attack on the Communist leadership showed he had "lost his cool."

The President's all-embracing "national" style and insistence that current economic austerity, involving drastic reductions in the industrial workforce, has sealed the total rift with the Communists.

M. Mitterrand said he was still true to the democratic socialism he had formerly defended but that it was his duty "from now on" to take heed of "the others — all the nuances of the popular forces, all the socio-economic and professional groups of today's opposition."

BAN ALL DRINK ADVERTISING, URGE DOCTORS

By DAVID FLETCHER Health Services Correspondent

A BAN on advertising alcoholic drinks, an increase in taxes on alcohol and a lower blood level limit for young drivers were urged by the British Medical Association at its annual meeting in Plymouth yesterday.

It also called for a ban on cigarette advertising, an end to tobacco sponsorship of the arts and sport, and a ban on tobacco bags—new American products intended to be sucked.

Resolutions calling for a series of bans were given overwhelming support by the 600 doctors, but a small minority spoke out against a "ban everything" approach.

One hospital consultant claimed that the BMA had become "a mob of pill-pushing, rent-a-womb, unilaterally disarming hippies."

Dr Justin Robbins, from Plymouth, said that in the light of the Brussels football disaster—where drunkeness was blamed for hooligan behaviour—it was time alcohol was recognised as a social evil.

"As a society we are drinking too much and a dreadful price we pay—street violence, crime, road accidents and worst of all domestic violence and child battering."

Calling for a ban on all advertising and promotional alcohol he said: "We doctors have a clear moral and professional duty to take a step towards creating a healthier and happier society."

The doctors backed calls for a reduction in the legal limit of blood alcohol in drivers under 25 despite opposition from a police surgeon. Dr Hugh de la Haye Davies, who said that what were needed were more "boys in blue" on the road so that drink drivers knew they would be caught.

'Merchants of death'

A resolution calling for a legal ban on tobacco advertising was given overwhelming support after doctors blamed smoking as the biggest cause of preventable death, responsible for 100,000 premature deaths a year.

Tobacco companies were referred to as "merchants of death" who were overcoming existing restrictions on advertising through sports sponsorship

The conference called for increased penalties for shopkeepers who sold cigarettes to children under 16 and a ban on tobacco "sucking" bags.

BREWERS HIT BACK

'It's no solution'

The Brewers' Society said said that the BMA's suggestions would not help solve the problems of alcoholism or alcohol-related diseases. Mr Mike Ripley, press officer, said: "If the tax on beer was increased I suggest that all it would do is make the sensible moderate drinker drink more moderately — and they are not the ones with the problem.

The people who abuse alcohol and do have a problem will get the money from somewhere — so the price increase will not really affect them."

NEW HEART REJECTION RULED OUT

KEITH CASTLE, Britain's longest-surviving heart transplant patient, died of heart failure — but there was no question of his body rejecting the transplanted organ, a post mortem examination disclosed yesterday.

A team of pathologists at Papworth Hospital, Cambridgeshire, where Mr Castle first received the new heart, found that it failed because of coronary artery disease. There was no question of his body "rejecting" the heart of a 21-year-old professional golfer which he received in an operation in August 1979.

Mr John Edwards, spokesman for the hospital's heart transplant team, said: "Medical conditions can arise in the human body and, in some circumstances, with great speed."

Asked why Mr Castle's disease was not picked up through the annual medical checks which heart transplant patients undergo, he said: "The purpose of medical checks is to see that his medical condition is satisfactory. "If he had said he had not been feeling too well, we would have admitted him to hospital to see what was wrong."

Mr Castle, 58, died on Monday after collapsing in the garden of his home in Battersea. Earlier in the year he had an artery by-pass operation which "had been successful and had not given him any trouble," Mr Edwards said.

Mr Castle, a builder by profession, was seen as an inspiration to patients suffering from heart disease through his fund-raising activities for the surgery which once saved his life.

ARTERY DISEASE

Undetectable stage

OUR MEDICAL CONSULTANT writes: Mr Castle's death after six years of active life following his transplant could be said to be due to natural causes. The donated heart was known to be healthy at the time of the transplant but coronary artery disease can arise at any stage and progress rapidly.

It is also possible that the earliest, undetectable stage of the disease was present in the heart at the time as this has been known to be the case in the hearts of healthy young men who die in accidents or in battle. Apart from other considerations, rejection of the transplanted heart after six years is extremely unlikely.

'No spending ban' hint by Jenkin

By JOHN GRIGSBY Local Government Correspondent

THERE will be no freeze on capital spending by local councils this financial year, Mr Jenkin, Environment Secretary, indicated yesterday.

The news was welcomed with reservations by local councils and will hearten the construction industry.

Mr Jenkin has resisted Treasury demands for a further clampdown on capital expenditure up to the end of March as part of the Government's strategy.

He told the Commons that, from returns submitted, he estimated that local councils this year were planning to spend between £1,850 and £2,750 million compared with the main cash limit of £1,911 million.

Councils' spending on urban programmes and derelict land reclamation is likely to be within the £279 million local authority element of the urban aid limit.

Mr Jack Layden, chairman of the Labour-controlled Association of Metropolitan Authorities, was pleased that there would be no formal moratorium this year. "A new freeze is not needed. The one we have already is quite bad enough," he said.

MPs concerned over loss on State grant

By VALERIE ELLIOTT Political Staff

AN all-party committee of MPs has criticised the way in which public funding was offered to Courtaulds to set up a new synthetic fibre manufacturing plant in Campsie, Co. Londonderry.

A total of £20,600,000 in grants was offered to the company between 1975 and 1977 by the Northern Ireland Department of Commerce, and the factory closed in 1981.

But the department's "ambiguous grant repayment conditions" meant that a substantial amount of public funds could not be recovered from the company, said the Select Committee on Public Accounts yesterday.

"As a result of adverse market conditions and resistance to the product, full capacity production was not attained and the peak employment achieved was only 900 as compared with the target of 1,500," says the committee's report.

Original conditions

Courtaulds had been required to repay the full amount of grants, or such lesser amount as might determine, in the event of closure of the factory within a stated period—five years for building grants and three years for machinery and equipment grants.

Eventually Courtaulds agreed to pay £2,125,000, compared with the £8,200,000 calculated by the Commerce Department and which the Industries Development Advisory Committee reassessed at £3,300,000.

Courtaulds were able to reduce the figure by questioning the ambiguity of the original conditions.

The Select Committee said it was relieved to report that the department's repayment conditions had now been changed to avoid confusion in the future.

PALUMBO TO PRESENT NEW PLAN

MR PETER PALUMBO, the developer whose scheme for a 290ft tower, designed by Mies van der Rohe, in the Mansion House area of the City was rejected by Mr Jenkin, Environment Secretary, is to present a new scheme.

He would announce the name of an architect next week to redevelop the site he owns in the area, he said after opening the Architect 85 exhibition at the Barbican which represents the work of many leading British firms.

Mr Palumbo agreed with conservation group claims that post-war building had, with few exceptions, been mediocre and at worst monstrous.

"I believe that a building should be under sentence of death from the date of its construction unless a special dispensation is granted on grounds of excellence.

'Economics of madhouse'

Mr George Smith, president of the Institute of Housing, told its annual conference in Torquay a new generation of slums within 15 years.

"Here we are, more than 300,000 houses sold, £5 billion lying in the bank, waiting lists of 1·2 million people, an astronomic backlog of essential capital works, and 400,000 building workers unemployed and being paid not to build. It seems to me to be the economics of the madhouse."

TOKYO CUTTING IMPORT TARIFFS BY UP TO 20pc

By A. E. CULLISON in Tokyo

SENIOR Japanese government and ruling Liberal Democratic party leaders basically agreed in Tokyo yesterday to support a 20 per cent. cut in import tariffs.

Altogether some 2,400 manufactured and agricultural products are involved.

It now appears likely that the sharp reduction in duties on imports wil become a main part of Japan's next market-opening package.

The latst measures are expected to be announced next month. But the list will not be finalised until June 25.

"We must listen to those who still feel that a 20 per cent slash is too drastic," comented one proponent of the programme.

The tariff cuts will be considered permanent, but emergency measures, including restitution of the previous duties, are promised should there occur a upsurge in imports of any particular product.

Some agricultural goods are to be exempt while the cutback on others will not be as much as 20 per cent. This is seen as a concession to the farmers whose votes keep the Liberal Democrats in power.

Mr Masayuki Fujio, chairman of the ruling party's policy research board, said Japan "has to do something" in view of the present international situation and the need for positive actions to open the Japanese market to foreign imports.

Mr Fujio, who only recently returned to Tokyo following visits to a number of countries with heavy trade deficits with Japan, added that the nation must make it "absolutely clear to the rest of the world" that it is engaged in the utmost efforts to reduce the surpluses.

QUALIFIED WELCOME

Pressure from Britain

OUR BUSINESS CORRESPONDENT writes: Britain yesterday gave a qualified welcome to Japanese moves to introduce 20 per cent tariff cuts on a long list of products.

The list includes 700 priority items where Japan has been under pressure by the United States, British and other foreign governments to reduce tariff barriers. They include boneless chicken, plywood and electronics equipment.

The Department of Trade and Industry said the cuts were a "step in the right direction". A spokesman added: "There are problems other than tariffs involved in Japanese trade and we will be studying the overall package very carefully."

LACK OF JOBS IN EEC 'DISTURBING'

By Our Brussels Correspondent

Summer jobs reduced the number of registered unemployed in the Common Market by 500,000 to a total of 12,400,000 last month.

EEC officials said the sitation remained disturbing in most member countries. Real reductions in seasonally adjusted unemployment were recorded only in Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark. Unemployment in Britain, at 12·3 per cent, remained the EEC's fifth highest proportionally.

MONSOON HITS 100,000

Monsoon floods in north and east Bangladesh had left more than 100,000 people marooned, it was stated in Dacca yesterday. Another 30,000 people were left homeless and 15,000 evacuated.

The flooding came close on the heels of last month's cyclone in which 11,000 people died. There were no known casualties in the latest incident. —Reuter.

Angry Japan surprises EEC chiefs

By ALAN OSBORN

RELATIONS between the EEC and Japan took a distinct turn for the worse yesterday when the Tokyo government angrily rejected this week's attack on its trade policies by Community ministers.

Responding to the charge that the nation's policies were "out of step" and could lead to trade protectionism, the Foreign Ministry in Tokyo said the complaint was "clearly self-serving and obviously unacceptable."

Japan had already achieved "solid results" in opening up its markets to imports and while other steps taken might appear unexciting "they are expected to have substantial long-term impact."

The strength of the rebuttal surprised EEC officials, especially since Wednesday's Common Market statement was no more aggressive than any other of the dozen or so that have been issued in recent years.

Some officials speculated that Japan was bracing itself for a barrage of criticism at next week's EEC summit when trade relations will be high on the agenda.

Time to be tough

Mrs Thatcher, in particular, believes the time has come to get much tougher with the Japanese. It will not be surprising if she tries to enlist other EEC leaders in a threat to retaliate against exports from Japan if no real action is taken by Tokyo.

Like America, the Common Market runs a huge and growing deficit in its trade with Japan. Last year the EEC deficit was £35 billion and that of the United States £28 billion.

Japanese exports to Britain were £3,800 million compared with £926 million of British sales in Japan.

Britain's resentment was fanned recently when a Japanese consortium won a £450 million contract for the new Bosphorus Bridge in Turkey as a result of subsidised loans and credits even though a British company put in the lowest tender.

Both in America and in Europe there is a growing feeling that Japan's repeated promises to correct the trade imbalance can no longer be trusted.

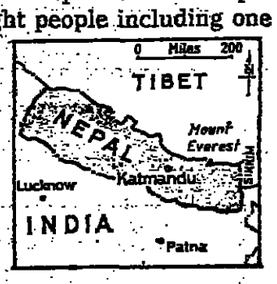
125 arrested after wave of bombings kill eight in Nepal

By K. M. SINGH in Katmandu

AT least 125 people have been arrested after a wave of bomb explosions in Nepal which have killed eight people including one terrorist.



Among those held was a brother of Surya Bahadur Thapa, a former Prime Minister.

Bombs exploded at the royal palace, the parliament building, the main government offices and the Annapurna Hotel in the capital, Katmandu. The dead included an MP and a man who died when a bomb he was planting blew up in the town of Pokhara.

The country's official news agency reported that three blasts rocked a police station, a Government store and customs office in the southern town of Birgunj. Police have found dozens of unexploded bombs.

Indians held

The Prime Minister, Lokendra Bahadur Chand, said yesterday that most of those arrested had criminal records. Some were Indians.

The bombs he added, were directed against the Government and not against King Birendra. Life in Katmandu and the rest of Nepal was normal yesterday, he said.

But leaflets strewn in streets in Katmandu suggested the bombers would strike again. The leaflets signed by a group calling itself the United Liberation Torchbearers, said: "There is more to come, for our struggle will go on until our objective is achieved which is the liberation of the people."

The bombs are thought to have been planted by extreme Leftists although there is no confirmation of this. The explosions followed a warning by King Birendra against the campaign for a multi-party system.

The banned Nepali Congress party said it had nothing to do with the explosions and that its campaign for the restoration of party politics had been suspended.

All political parties are banned in Nepal but Socialist and Communist groups have launched public protests and several thousand activists have been arrested in the past four weeks.

Border arrest

Leader of separatists' party in Quebec quits

By ERIC DOWD in Toronto

THE separatist Premier of Quebec Province, Mr Rene Levesque, has announced his resignation with support for independence falling and the party facing an early election.

Mr Rene Levesque

Mr Levesque, a folk hero to many, gave no reason other than to say that party members would have expected that sooner or later he would have to leave.

A former television commentator, Mr Levesque was one of the founders of the separatist Parti Quebecois in 1968 after he resigned as a Liberal Cabinet Minister and was its first and only leader.

He led the party to office in Quebec in 1976 in a victory felt to be due more to voters' disenchantment with a corruption-prone Liberal Government than to an enthusiasm for independence from Canada.

In 1980 Mr Levesque's proposal that Quebec form a separate state with a loose economic association with the rest of Canada was rejected by 60 to 40 per cent. in a referendum.

Mr Levesque, nonetheless, won a second electoral term in 1981 largely by stressing economic and social policies, and again he was re-elected comfortably.

The separatist Government's popularity has since slumped dramatically, however, because of a lagging economy and steadily dwindling support for its basic goal.

Mr Levesque recognised the lack of support for independence and earlier this year announced the party would drop separation completely from its platform in the next election.

But seven of his Cabinet Ministers resigned, and he has continued to face intense criticism from pro-independence hardliners in his party. Several constiutency associations had threatened to seek his resignation at a meeting of the party's council this week-end.

Mr Levesque, noted for his rumpled suits and his chain-smoking, has not been in good health recently, and some of his recent speeches and comments in the Legislature have been rambling and incoherent.

U.S. AGAIN A LAND OF RIBBONS

By TONY ALLEN-MILLS in New York

IN gestures eerily reminiscent of the Iranian hostage crisis yellow ribbons are being pinned across America as the country anxiously awaits the return of yet more victims of international terrorism.

In Algonquin, Illinois, home of four of the hostages being held in Beirut, the ribbons smother the chapel of St Margaret Mary Church, where services are held nightly for the Americans in captivity.

When the daughter of Mr Jerome Barczak, one of the hostages, graduated from high school in San Diego on Tuesday, she and her 400 classmates all pinned yellow ribbons to their academic gowns.

And many of the luckier passengers on Flight 847 — the ones already released — have tide ribbons to trees in their home towns as symbols of their support for the hostages left behind.

Hope and relief

For the families and friends of the 40 captives in Beirut, eight days of tension, impatience, and fear briefly gave way to feelings of hope and relief after television news programmes on Thursday showing the Hostage Press conference.

The sound of the hostages' spokesman, Mr Allyn Conwell, reading out the names of his fellow captives in a firm, clear voice, was for many relatives the happiest moment since the crisis began.

"We're encouraged by the news we've had today, seeing the people at the Press conference, seeing they're healthy," said Susan Traugott, sister-in-law of Mr Ralf Traugott, another of the hostages.

Javier Santos, brother-in-law of Vincente Garza, who spoke at the conference, said: "It gave the family a lot of hope. Now I know he's going to make it."

Relatives in tears

Mrs Kelly Cullins, whose husband Thomas also spoke at the conference, said: "It was wonderful to see him looking as good as he did, but he is still in a horrible and frightening situation."

Other relatives wept uncontrollably as Mr Conwell read out the name of their loved one—signifying that person was in "A1 health."

Mr Conwell's cool performance under agonising circumstances won admiration and applause from many Americans

An oil engineer from Houston, Texas, Mr Conwell, 39, is now based in Oman and was returning there via Rome on the ill-fated TWA flight after a holiday in Corfu with his Greek wife's parents.

Power of 'God' king is aided by party's fear

By BALRAM TANDON in New Delhi

KING BIRENDRA BIKRAM SHAH DEV of Nepal has emerged stronger after the series of bomb blasts which have left at least eight people dead and more 20 wounded in the Himalayan kingdom.

King of Nepal: treated as God by his subjects.

The decision of the Nepalese Congress, the leading political party, to end its agitation in seeking a multi-party system, has certainly followed a fear of arousing resentment, particularly in the Katmandu valley and areas where the Gurkhas predominate.

The King is regarded as the incarnation of Vishnu, the Hindu god of life and his splendid palace in Katmandu is still known as Narayan Hitti or "The Abode of God."

Members of the aristocracy, as well as ordinary citizens, when they pass the palace bow in reverence and fold their hands as if at a temple.

Indian border

Loyalty to the monarch and his word is strongest in the 500 miles of northern hills inhabited by the Gurkhas and in the Katmandu Valley of the Newars.

The King's hold is somewhat weaker in the 15-mile wide strip along the border with India in the south and east. Known as the Terai, it is mostly inhabited by people of Indian origin.

The Communists, socialists and others have footholds in the Terai but even in these areas the Nepalese Congress has remained paramount.

Its leaders have realised over the years that a policy of opposition to the monarchy can spell political doom.

Partyless state

Mr B. P. Koirala, far the most charismatic of the party's leaders and who died soon after the referendum in which the King won a verdict in favour of his partyless state, had once been one of his staunchest opponents.

But some years before his death and the last elections he conceded that no political force could survive in Nepal if it opposed the institution of the King and attacked the belief in his divinity.

Nepalese politics has had very little connection with terrorism. There was a minor uprising led by the former Nepali Congress leader K. I. Singh in 1952 but it ended after his escape from prison.

Even violence engineered by the Communists has been on a low key and ended in the sixties.

Floating currency rate backed by Ministers

By A. E. CULLISON in Tokyo

FINANCE Ministers and senior central bank officials from leading industrial countries unanimously concluded in Tokyo yesterday that the present floating rate system for currency exchange should continue.

They decided a return to the old fixed-rate system would be totally unrealistic. Known as the Group of 10, they are now actually 11, comprising Britain, France, the Netherlands, Canada, West Germany, the United States, Japan, Italy, Belgium, Sweden and a newcomer, Switzerland.

Zones rejected

A majority of those present also brushed off a French proposal that target zones be created for each currency's exchange rate vis-a-vis other major monetary units. It was branded as completely impractical at this time.

The group, in addition, drew up and approved a statement endorsing a report on the subject of monetary reforms, which was drafted by their deputies after two years of intensive consultations.

It was agreed that the International Monetary Fund should exercise closer surveillance over the economic and financial policies of the member states in the interest of monetary stability.

In a statement issued at the close of the conference it was conceded that intervention by monetary authorities in exchange markets can be useful in countering disorderly fluctuations and in reducing short-term volatility.

In addition the statement emphasised that countries should be willing to undertake co-ordinated market-intervention activities on those occasions when it is agreed such action would prove helpful.

Concerning the IMF's official monetary reserves—known as special drawing rights—the group only expressed support for a comprehensive review of the role of the SDR in future as its rationale was affected.

Overall, however, it was decided by the participants that the present system is working well, although they admitted it has certain shortcomings. These deficiencies, it was also agreed, can be handled by minor improvements as time goes on.

SOUR TIME FACES U.S. GRAPES

By JOHN LICHFIELD in Brussels

THE Common Market is expected to carry a burgeoning transatlantic food war into the heart of President Reagan's political constituency early next week.

EEC curbs on imports of Californian grapes and citrus fruit will be among retaliatory trade measures proposed by the Brussels Commission to member states.

This is regarded by Brussels as a politically effective and appropriate response to President Reagan's decision on Thursday to impose steep tariffs on European exports of spaghetti and other forms of pasta.

The pasta tax of between 25 and 40 per cent. was itself a response by Washington to the EEC's refusal to offer concessionary terms to American fruit exporters.

American fruit producers, mainly in California and Florida, have been demanding the same concessionary terms from the Community as North African and Mediterranean fruit exporters.

Brussels has refused, pointing out that the preferential treatment given to Mediterranean growers forms part of EEC aid to developing countries.

FABIUS ANGERS PARTY CHIEF

M. Lionel Jospin, first secretary of the ruling French Socialist party, yesterday asked the party's governing committee to decide who was in charge. It amounted to an offer of resignation.

Last week, M. Jospin was upset at a speech by M. Laurent Fabius, Prime Minister, which was seen by everyone as a launch of the Government party's election campaign. It had been understood that it would be for M. Jospin, as party leader, to launch the campaign.

13 KILLED BY MARAUDERS IN UGANDA

Thirteen people, including five civilians, had been killed in apparent rebel attacks in two areas near Kampala since Thursday morning according to survivors and news reports in Uganda yesterday.

Gunmen ambushed Government troops patrolling Kiteezi, a village about 10 miles north of Kampala, and killed seven soldiers on Thursday morning, the MUNNO newspaper reported. It quoted eyewitnesses saying the ambushers fled with their victims' uniforms and rifles.

A member of the paramilitary "Special Force" police unit and three civilians were among people forced from a bar at gunpoint and hacked or shot to death in Kitemu, 11 miles south of Kampala, survivors said. Later the assailants broke into a nearby residence and beat a civilian couple to death. — AP.

CHINA'S REAL MARY POPPINS LANDS SAFELY

A tornado that struck a Chinese village carried a peasant woman with a raised umbrella hundreds of yards before dropping her safely to earth, it was reported in Peking yesterday.

Yang Youxiang, 40, of Liaoqiao township in Hubei province experienced "an air adventure," the report said. It happened last month as she walked home from the fields.

The winds lifted her high into the sky and over the Jiuda River before she landed some 550 yards further on. The report added that after being treated for hailstone injuries she returned to work.—A P.

SEVESO WASTE DESTROYED

The Ciba-Geigy chemical concern yesterday reported the completion of the destruction of lethal dioxin toxic waste from the 1976 disaster at Seveso, in Italy, which affected 32,000 people in the region.

The waste, mainly soil, had been sealed in 41 barrels which disappeared after the disaster. It was discovered in an abandoned warehouse in northern France in 1983 and later transferred to the Ciba-Geigy plant in Basel,—Switzerland—UPI.

'Change of tactics' by Salvador guerrillas

By FRANK TAYLOR in Washington

AMERICAN officials believe the killing of four United States Marines in El Salvador marks a change of tactics by Left-wing guerrillas fighting to overthrow the Government there.

The officials said that the rebels had begun to realise they were losing the battle in the countryside, and had reverted to urban guerrilla warfare "in desperation."

This view was supported by Mr Elliott Abrams, who has been nominated by President Reagan as the new Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs.

'They cannot win'

Giving evidence to a Congressional committee, Mr Abrams declared: "They know they cannot win the war, and so they are pushed into this kind of barbaric terrorist act. El Salvador is really a great success story."

In the House of Representatives the Republican minority leader, Mr Robert Michel, placed the blame for the Marines' deaths squarely on the Left-wing Sandinista regime in Nicaragua. "The trigger was pulled by the Sandinista leadership," he said.

Mr Reagan has promised to increase military aid, including intelligence-gathering assistance, to the Salvadoran military in the wake of the killings. Two American businessmen and some Salvadoran civilians were also killed when the gunmen opened fire on diners at an outdoor cafe on Wednesday evening.

NEW UNITS

Duarte's pledge

MARK FAZLOLLAH reports from San Salvador: President Duarte of El Salvador vowed yesterday to establish new anti-terrorist units immediately to track down Leftist guerrillas blamed for the killing of four unarmed American Marines and nine civilians.

The Treasury Police who operate combat and investigative forces, are to inaugurate their own anti-terrorist battalion next Wednesday, and other units are being prepared with American help.

The guerrillas' clandestine transmitter, Radio Venceremos, declared "More Yankees will leave our country in coffins".

KASHMIR GUARD ON ROADS AND BRIDGES

By Our Srinagar Correspondent

A special guard has been mounted on the 180-mile Srinagar-Jammu highway, on the 270-mile Srinagar-Leh mountain road, and on important Kashmir bridges against possible sabotage by pro-Pakistan Moslem or Sikh secessionists.

This follows attempts in recent weeks to blow up the Nandni mountain tunnel, the destruction by fire of at least two bridges, and attempts to set six others on fire, all in the Kashmir Valley. In the latest incident the Syed Mansoor bridge in central Srinagar was partially burned.

The district magistrate of Srinagar has banned for a fortnight the carrying of any arms or stones and assemblies of five or more people. The fundamentalist Jamaad Islami party leader, Syed Ali Shah Geelani, has meanwhile asked Kashmiri youths to "undergo supreme sacrifices" to secure freedom from "imperialist" (Indian) occupation.

JOURNALISTS BACK STRIKE IN AUSTRALIA

Journalists voted yesterday to strike in support of printers who had halted Australia's only national daily, the AUSTRALIAN, union officials said. The printers decided to continue a three-day strike that has also hit editions of two Sydney tabloids, the DAILY TELEGRAPH and DAILY MIRROR, which are being produced by the management of News Ltd, the Rupert Murdoch group.

The journalists claim the management locked them out. The printers went on strike in a new technology dispute, complaining that a plan to reorganise labour would leave some of them 100 Australian dollars (more than £50) a week worse off.—Reuter.

SOVIET AIM IS CANARIES FOOTHOLD

By DESMOND WETTERN Naval Correspondent

RUSSIA is seeking refuelling, repair and crew-changing facilities for its ships at Las Palmas in the Spanish-owned Canary Islands, 500 miles from the new Nato base at Madeira.

Like the Madeira base, Las Palmaslies at the crucial junction of the shipping routes to Western Europe from North America and the Far East via the Cape of Good Hope.

The Russian request for facilities for its cruise, cargo and research ships at Las Palmas follows the visit to Moscow in April of the head of the Canaries' regional government who has now passed it to Madrid.

Convoy exercises

But as Russian fishing vessels have had the right to use Las Palmas under an earlier agreement for some years, it seems unlikely the Spanish government will refuse the Russians' request, even though it will be the source of some embarrassment to Nato.

For some time, the Alliance has been exercising sending convoys with reinforcements across the Atlantic to ports in the Iberian peninsula where they would be less vulnerable, particularly to air attacks from airfields in Russia and Eastern Europe.

These convoys and other traffic, particularly supertankers too large to use the Suez Canal, must pass through a triangle of which Madeira is the apex while the base is a line between Portugal and the Azores.

This is the second occasion in the past month or so that Moscow has sought fuelling and shore support facilities on a vital Western sea route.

The western Pacific island state of Kiribati, which lies astride the iron ore and other mineral traffic route from Brisbane to Japan, has recently approved Russian ships using its ports on a regular basis for refuelling and maintenance.

In this true-life story, however, it all went terribly wrong for the Celatose company of France.

Enticed by a regional development grant and a two year rent-free period, the good messieurs had settled in South Wales to produce disposable nappies.

But last February they could have been forgiven for thinking that they had a disposable factory.

At 8 o'clock on a chilly Wednesday morning the WDA Regional Maintenance Surveyor, Philip Owen, was driving past when he saw the smoke.

There's none without fire. And by 9 o'clock it had all but engulfed the factory.

But Owen was already arranging temporary premises for Celatose, bringing in heating engineers, cleaners and other essential services.

He also provided the distraught management with an office and telephone straight away, so they could at least carry on.

But of course, nothing could be done in the short term about the loss of all Celatose's plant.

Like a good development agency, the WDA planned the housing of a new production line in another factory.

But the Welsh workforce had a more constructive suggestion for the interim period.

Even though they could no longer produce in Wales, they could still produce.

So every weekend they commuted to Celatose's other factories, one near the East German border and one in France, to take advantage of spare capacity.

And the moral of the story is, it takes more than a minor disaster to stop the Welsh. Even if they do have to travel a little further to work.

Whether you're expanding your business or establishing a new one, send the coupon and see what Wales has to offer.

the hot line to a support role in capital electronics

In selling to major customers at home and overseas our client accepts responsibility for providing long term product support. Support so comprehensive that it has a specialist unit employing several hundred people.

The expansion of this British company—a market leader world-wide—is creating opportunities for men and women of diverse skills.

As you might expect, many vacancies are for experienced engineers to provide direct support over the entire product range—from antennas to computers and displays.

In particular we are seeking HTEC/HNC qualified engineers in the fields of:-

INSTALLATION AND MAINTENANCE

Involving major capital electronic systems on customer sites. Covers the whole spectrum of electronics equipment with both military and civil applications.

LOGISTIC SUPPORT SERVICES

Requiring the application of practical knowledge in electronics, and life cycle costing to projects covering all aspects of logistics—especially spares proposed at tender stage. You should have an engineering background with ideally some knowledge of computer modelling techniques/commercial operations.

TECHNICAL DOCUMENTATION

To provide support documentation for all company products. Previous writing experience is less important than the demonstrable ability to present technical information in easily assimilated form. A services/practical engineering background is appropriate.

POST DESIGN ENGINEERING

The updating and modification of existing equipment—transmitters, receivers, signal processors, displays etc. Calls for 5—7 years' post qualifying experience in a related electronics field, though applicants with less experience may be considered.

TEST EQUIPMENT MAINTENANCE

The calibration and repair of our wealth of modern test equipment—calls for substantial experience in a relevant industrial environment.

Top Sales Performers

Earn More Than £20,000 + CAR

Few new products in recent years have captured the imagination in quite the same way as mobile cellular radio, the telephone of the future. The potential is enormous and, as you would expect, the competition is fierce. My brief is to recruit a team of aggressive high performers to knock the competition into a cocked hat.

Currently mobile cellular radio is most commonly perceived as a phone in a car. It is however very different from the traditional radio phone in that the technology already permits telephone communication across a wide area of the UK without any loss of quality. Furthermore, anticipated future developments offer exceptional expansion opportunities. The new phones will soon be adapted to transmit data, so revolutionising the way we communicate at work or on the move.

After product training, you will take total responsibility for a geographic area and embark on an energetic programme of sales visits to business users. You will be encouraged to use your initiative and share your ideas with your colleagues. Although we are seeking self-starters, you will be backed by a telesales team and imaginative product advertising. You will have the further advantage of being part of a leading consumer electronics company with a nationwide high street presence.

Now aged 23 to 35, ideally you have three years' sales experience in a competitive sector, such as office equipment, micro computers, or the motor trade. Industrial experience is secondary to the proven ability to sell. First class rewards include basic salary c.£12,000 pa, car and an excellent bonus scheme with no ceiling which should yield total earnings well over £20,000pa. We have current vacancies in London, Birmingham, Manchester and Bristol, but new areas will be opened up later this year. Relocation assistance is on offer.

Cash in on certain sales growth by writing, with full Curriculum Vitae and details of current remuneration, to Patrick Hill, Senior Consultant, Cripps, Sears and Associates Limited, Personnel Management Consultants, Westminster House, 2 Minster Street, Reading, RG1 2JA. Telephone: (0734) 582583 (24 hours).

Business Research Analyst/Statistician

Attractive negotiable salary
London

BUPA—market leaders in private medical insurance—ranks as the most successful and diversified provider of independent health care in Britain.

For a numerate graduate with at least 5 years' experience in statistical analysis plus proven strengths in business modelling, this job presents a genuine challenge. Our small Business Research Team provides a whole range of consultancy services—from computer modelling to analytical research. This team also carries out various ad-hoc projects for users whilst providing expertise for other statistical assignments within the insurance company.

Our team is given the creative scope to provide innovative solutions to real business problems. It also gets the support of a management that is committed to project research, personnel training and to providing the high-level computer facilities that are so vital.

This is the sort of opportunity that would appeal to a professional who welcomes a consultancy style position. Someone who wants to be involved at every stage—from problem identification and formulation right through to the development of analytical methods and the actual presentation and implementation of positive solutions. It's a demanding role but it's one in which your originality and initiative will be well rewarded... the negotiable salary and benefits package, which includes free BUPA, free life assurance and a mortgage subsidy, will certainly attract the high calibre of talent for which we are now looking.

If you have the necessary qualities and qualifications please contact us in the strictest confidence.

CONTROL OF WATER SUPPLY SYSTEMS.

WRc Engineering, based in Swindon, Wiltshire, is part of the largest water research organisation in the world, providing research support to the UK Water Industry.

Opportunities have arisen to join an expanding team working on the management and operational control of water supply systems. These positions involve working in research and development and in its practical application.

Mathematical Modellers

Concerned with the development of modelling and optimisation techniques and the specification of algorithms suitable for the production of robust computer programs. Current priorities include: scheduling of pumps, simulation of water networks, short term demand prediction and the analysis of data for leakage control purposes. The implementation of these techniques in specific supply and distribution systems is an additional feature of the work.

Distribution and Operation Engineers

To develop further the policy and practice of monitoring and control of water supply systems including leakage control and pressure control. The evaluation of costs, benefits, operational advantages and difficulties of network control schemes is an important aspect. The successful applicants will combine practical experience with an open minded approach to the topics.

Control Engineer

To investigate the control problems associated with water supply and distribution and to assist the Water Industry with the implementation and evaluation of systems. Guidelines on the control of distributed plant and the design of solutions to specific problems in the control of valves and pumps are required. Some knowledge of communication aspects would be an advantage. All applicants should be qualified to degree level or equivalent in relevant disciplines. The posts will involve active liaison and collaborative ventures with the Water Industry. An appreciation of the applicability of computing is desirable.

Excellent conditions of employment include a contributory pension scheme and assistance with relocation expenses where appropriate. Salaries will be commensurate with qualifications and experience but will not be less than £10,000 pa. Ring Elizabeth Bunting on Swindon (0793) 488301 for an application form or alternatively write giving full career details to Elizabeth Bunting, WRc Engineering, PO Box 85, Swindon, Wiltshire SN5 8YR. Account Manager

Salesmen, optimise your sound commercial experience...

...with American Can (U.K.) Limited, a dynamic division of a multi-national group engaged in the manufacture of cans for the food, petfood and beverage markets. It's a progressive, fast-moving environment with an emphasis on successful achievement.

We are now seeking an Account Manager, principally to maximise business across our existing customer base but also to investigate new areas for sales. Your role will be that of the prime interface between the Company and our customers at all levels and in looking for opportunities to increase can sales, you will devise commercial packages, suggest new ideas for production or technical developments and instigate marketing and promotional initiatives. Within these areas you will play a leading role but will receive all the support, and technical back-up from relevant experts that you need. You will also have a significant input into business decisions taken by the sales team.

What experience will you need?

You should be in your mid 20's, educated to degree level, numerate and, essentially, have sound commercial acumen. Your career background will probably be in sales representation within the packaging industry or an environment with fast moving high volume industrial products. Self-motivation, excellent communication skills to liaise and negotiate effectively at all levels and a high degree of personal credibility are also essential.

In return, you can expect a starting salary of £13,500, plus incentive scheme, 2 litre executive car, BUPA, life assurance and relocation expenses to the Cheshire area where appropriate.

If you have the sound commercial background we're seeking and the motivation to succeed in this challenging role, then write, with full details of career to date, to:—Mr. K. M. McCoy, Personnel Director, American Can (U.K.) Limited, Woodside Park, Chelford Road, Congleton, Cheshire CW12 2LY.

We are an equal opportunity employer.

ENGINEERS

find out the facts first hand...

...If you're the type of engineer we're looking for, you'll want to find out the facts about British Nuclear Fuels for yourself.

Here are a few of those facts to be going on with. British Nuclear Fuels plc is the world's leading supplier of nuclear fuel services, with a current investment programme totalling £3.5 billion and our order books take us well into the 21st century. Our high integrity plants are among the biggest and most advanced process plants in Europe today and our engineering standards have to exceed those in most other industries.

British Nuclear Fuels can therefore offer engineers unrivalled challenge and opportunity to work to the highest engineering standards, on the most advanced equipment and in an industry with a clear future. We're now looking to offer these opportunities to engineers with experience in the following disciplines to complement our current substantial development programme.

We're looking for engineers (male/female), with a degree or corporate membership of an appropriate Institution.

JOIN OUR SWINDON PROJECT

Honda, the world's largest manufacturer of motorcycles and a major producer of quality cars, has acquired a 367-acre site on the outskirts of Swindon. There, the Company is building a car delivery centre and a parts assembly plant.

In this facility we intend to create an active and dynamic working climate along with a co-operative team effort in order to achieve our Company's objective of high quality products. Hence the importance attached to the following new positions whose holders will be key members of our management team:

MANAGER, PERSONNEL

Flexibility, sensibility, a talent for innovation and top level communications skills are prime requirements. You must also display particular strength in employee relations together with demonstrable ability to guide line managers and formulate labour management policies. You should be MIPM qualified with at least five years' personnel experience (not less than three years' at junior-to-mid management level) in manufacturing environments. The right age to take up and grow with the challenge is probably between 30 and 40 years.

MANAGER, CAR DELIVERY CENTRE AND PARTS ASSEMBLY PRODUCTION AND QUALITY CONTROL

You know automobiles inside out. You've covered the whole production process, possibly in our industry. Your commitment to delivering high quality products on time will be fully recognised and rewarded by Honda.

You'll need to be good enough to manage all quality control verification for cars, and handle the production parts operation including welding and assembly, with major emphasis on good employee relations and teamwork.

To cope with the challenges you'll need to be a graduate or equivalent in mechanical or production engineering with at least five years' experience (three at mid-management level). Aged 30 to 40, you should display a talent for innovation and first class communications skills.

Both positions carry very competitive salaries, plus a comprehensive benefits package including company car and relocation expenses. You can also expect several weeks' familiarisation in Japan as a flying start to your future with us.

Please write, enclosing a full c.v. to: Personnel Department, Swindon Project, Honda of the UK Manufacturing Limited, 4 Power Road, Chiswick, London W4 5YT.

CONSULTANCY IN SALES AND MANAGEMENT

The Mercuri Goldmann Group is today, one of the world's largest and most successful training and development organisations with over 300 consultants in Europe alone, offering a depth of experience which cannot be matched.

To sustain our U.K. expansion our 3 offices now require additional consultants of the highest calibre.

The work of Mercuri Goldmann begins with selling our services at top management level. Specialist training programmes are devised and provided through both public and in-company seminars, where dealing with "real life" situations is a key element. The work of our consultants also encompasses their role as professional trainers.

Candidates aged between 28 and 45 years, are required to be articulate and intelligent and have an impressive record in their careers to date with evidence of success in the sales and sales management functions. The capacity to negotiate at board level and to work independently is essential.

In addition to a high basic salary and earnings potential of £25,000 to £30,000 there are opportunities for personal growth which include in the first instance a thorough induction course and the equivalent of five weeks own training each year.

Prospects of advancement within the organisation are available for successful consultants possessing management capabilities.

Please write, in confidence, in the first instance enclosing your c.v. showing how your career and experience to date matches the above, and remember to include your home telephone number, to:

ELECTRONIC AND ELECTRICAL DESIGN AND DEVELOPMENT ENGINEERS

Pleasant UK Base — Attractive Salary + Car

World wide travel opportunities as Technical Support and Liaison Engineers with a major UK Engineering group

Our client, part of a highly successful British engineering group, has won many export orders through the excellence of their Marketing, Design and Manufacturing expertise.

It is the company's policy to develop and maintain close technical links with their customers to ensure that any engineering or production queries are quickly resolved.

Business expansion has created two vacancies for Electronic/Electrical engineers.

These jobs demand a background in design, development, or application engineering relating to electrical/electronic control systems associated with sophisticated Process Plant, Machine Tools, Large Electrical Machines, Packaging Machinery etc.

The nature of these jobs offer excellent career broadening opporunities with exposure to Sales, Marketing, R & D, Manufacturing and other operations both in the parent and customer companies.

You should be a good communicator, able to relate effectively to people at many differing levels and nationalities. The considerable overseas travel content of the jobs requires these skills.

It is essential that you should be technically/professionally qualified (Degree or HNC +) with 3/7 years design/development experience and possess the proven ability to resolve any engineering problems effectively and with dispatch. Age indicator is flexible, probably late twenties/thirties. It is important that you should have broad experience in modern Control and Systems Technology.

High volume production — to £18,000 + 2 litre car

With a reputation second to none for technical excellence and quality, this £75m turnover subsidiary of a major industrial group manufactures an up market consumer product range which is at the forefront of its market sector.

The need to maintain this lead, in a market where reputation stands or falls on product reliability and innovation, ensures that the company is constantly seeking the very best in manufacturing technology. The next two years will see £5m of further capital investment in the prestigious purpose built plant which was only opened 12 years ago.

You will control one of a number of manufacturing divisions, with responsibility for 300 people, in an operation characterised by high level automation in some areas but still dependent on labour intensive tasks in others. Additionally you will be a member of the senior executive team.

Your career must offer experience of:
- production engineering in a high volume batch and flowline environment.
- the practical application of industrial engineering techniques.
- controlling a labour force of at least 150 through line managers.
- day to day involvement with trade unions.

Aged about 35 and of graduate calibre, you will have experience in the consumer electronics industry or alternatively an electronics qualification and experience with other consumer products.

The company has a rural/coastal location in the south, with moderately priced housing and excellent road and rail communications. A generous relocation package is available.

Please forward a comprehensive CV (or telephone for a personal history form) quoting Ref. MD634 to Dennis Fielding at Macmillan Davies, The Old Vaults, Parliament Square, Hertford, Herts. SG14 1PU. (0992) 552552.

A FOUNDATION FOR OUR FUTURE

Petroleum Engineers

Production Operations

The Amoco Production Company is a wholly owned subsidiary of Amoco Corporation, one of the world's leading energy companies.

Amoco has significant production activities in the UK, Netherlands, Norway and Gabon, and currently operates eight fields which are in various stages of development. In addition, we are actively evaluating other recent discoveries for development in the near future.

Our exploration programme is one of the most active in the industry. Currently we have seven rigs drilling exploration wells in conjunction with an aggressive seismic programme in the UK, Spain, Denmark, Liberia, Sierra Leone, and the Congo.

Such expansion and development activity provide what must be some of the most outstanding Petroleum Engineering career opportunities available in the industry.

As a Production or Operations Engineer with Amoco you should have:

- Initiative, drive and the ability to perform at a high level in a dynamic environment.
- A degree in engineering.
- At least five years' relevant petroleum engineering experience.

Initial assignments will be in the Regional Production Engineering Group in London.

The successful applicants will be involved in existing and new field operations and developments, artificial lift studies and working with our Exploration Group on new ventures.

Amoco operates worldwide and opportunities exist for overseas assignments for those engineers who demonstrate the ability to work in differing environments with a minimum of supervision.

Salary and benefits packages will be specially tailored to attract the best Petroleum Engineering talent available in the industry.

Mrs. L. T. Nee, Employee Relations Department, Amoco Europe and West Africa Inc., Amoco House, 1 Stephen Street, Tottenham Court Rd, London, W1P 2AU. Telephone: 01-631 3131.

AMOCO

OFF-SHORE ENGINEERING

EVER MORE DEMANDING . . . EVEN MORE CHALLENGING

Conoco are a major energy concern supplying 10% of the UK's gas needs. We are the first North Sea company to bring 3 fields on in one year — Hutton, Kotter and Victor. We are poised for further development over the next 5 years.

We now require two Engineers for Structural and Inspection work to plan for the operation of new fields and to ensure the continued safe, efficient operation of our existing gas fields. To apply for either of these posts you must have a degree or be a chartered engineer.

Structural Engineering

As we develop to meet changing energy demands, we are faced with new problems and challenges to comply with more exacting Certification requirements. This presents an excellent career move for an ambitious Stuctural Engineer. You will ensure continuing certification through structural re-analysis. You will recommend under and above water structural inspection programmes, be responsible for any remedial work arising from them, and will assist in the design of all structural alternatives from riser guards through to accommodation upgrades.

Ideally you will have 10 years experience in Structural Engineering covering design, construction and certification related activities.

Inspection Engineering

Working closely with our Structural, Pipeline and Process Engineers, you will be responsible for the detailed planning and implementation of above and below water inspections and the review, analysis, and documentation of results, including system definition for future databases. You will initiate development tests for new equipment and techniques and will analyse operating equipment failures to identify causes and propose solutions.

Ideally you will have a broad range of skills in the following areas: under and above water NDT inspections, cathodic protection systems, welding engineering and materials science. The post will involve a combination of practical offshore and onshore analytical work.

In addition to attractive salaries, we offer a wide range of benefits including non-contributory pension scheme, stock ownership plan and generous relocation expenses to this attractive part of Lincolnshire.

For an application form please telephone or write to: Mrs. M. G. Boncey, Personnel Officer, Conoco (U.K.) Limited, Viking Gas Terminal, Theddlethorpe, Lincs. LN12 1NQ. Tel: 0521 77386 (answer phone).

At the very forefront of electronics design

CASE

Already European leaders in the design and manufacture of sophisticated computer communications equipment, and with an annual turnover of £100m, CASE continues to advance levels of technology in complex systems and products that are fast gaining dominance of world markets.

The significance of electronics design expertise in product development is obvious. However, equally vital is a similar level of competence in our Test Planning function, where increasing demand for innovative test methods now creates an opening for an accomplished Test or Electronics Design Engineer.

It is, in fact, in close liaison with product development teams that you will create and implement test philosophies to match CASE product advances. With excellent facilities and generous resourcing, this will involve the planning and development of test procedures and facilities from initial testability requirements to production of test equipment and methods for use on the shop floor.

A Project/Team Leader (or your company's equivalent), aged mid 20's/early 30's and degree qualified, your background, not necessarily in communications or a related technology, should be either of the following:

- An Electronics Design Engineer with 4-6 years' experience in electronic product Development.
  or
- A Test Planning Engineer with 4-6 years' experience in test equipment design.

As the technical reference point for a small team of dedicated engineers under your control, and within a company that encourages personal development, progression to a management role will be natural. The rewards, including an appropriate salary, bonus and exceptional benefits, will reflect the importance of your contribution.

Team Leader

To head up a small team in Test Software Development

c. £14,000 pa

Solartron Instruments, one of the world's leading designers and manufacturers of advanced digital and analogue instrumentation systems are part of the world renowned Schlumberger Group of Companies.

Our state-of-the-art test and measurement products have placed us at the forefront of this technology. And today we are market leaders for equipment with such diverse applications as aeronautical engineering and medical research.

Our Test Engineering Department comprises dedicated teams of engineers who work closely alongside the R & D function, developing Test Programs and Test Methods for use by manufacturing.

This is a new position where you'll be leading a small team developing the software used to test complete products via both the RS232 and IEEE 488 interfaces. In addition to project managing the efforts of the team, you'll be expected to monitor projects to ensure the highest standards of software and to undertake a 'hands-on' design, development and implementation role where required.

Qualified to degree level or equivalent in Electronic Engineering or Computer Sciences, you should have a sound working knowledge of RSX/VMS; together with a high level language such as FORTRAN. Of equal importance is the demonstrable ability to provide full systems management capability to meet test programme requirements.

For someone with the obvious potential for leading a team or previous supervisory experience, this is an excellent career step within an expanding function. A salary of c.£14,000 pa and full benefits package adds to the attraction, with generous relocation where appropriate.

Please telephone or write with full CV to Alison Eastham, Solartron Instruments, Victoria Road, Farnborough, Hants GU14 7PW. Tel: Farnborough (0252) 544433.

Sales and Purchase Ledger

A managerial role for a part-qualified accountant

A world leading name in the field of advanced control systems, we are continually developing our computerised accounting systems to meet the needs of our expanding business. A key member of our Accounting Services function, you'll have full man-management responsibility for a 12-strong team involved in the operation and development of Sales and Bought Ledger.

A challenging role, and one which will allow you to fully assert your personality and professional skills in a service central to maintaining the company's growth. On a more specific level, you'll be responsible for the preparation of reports and management information, with particular emphasis on systems appraisal and development.

To qualify, you'll be a highly capable accountant, probably part-qualified, with solid exposure to a Sales or Purchase Ledger environment. Beyond this, we'll be looking for excellent communication skills and the enthusiasm and commitment to achieve results – man management skills are essential.

In return, we offer an excellent salary and benefits package and the career development prospects you'd expect of a world leader in this high technology field. In addition, we'll help you progress on to full professional qualifications.

Contact Steve Rowe on (0344) 416640 or send a brief CV to Rob Smith at: Macmillan Davies Personnel Consultants, The Old Vaults, Parliament Square, Hertford, Herts.

Together, we can find the answers.

Move into a career in Export Sales Management

Middle Eastern Markets (UK based)
Attractive salary + bonus + car

Marley Floors Limited, the market leaders in resilient PVC floor coverings, and based at Lenham (Kent), are looking for a sales professional of high calibre to be responsible for their sales to Middle Eastern markets.

Aged 25 plus, you must either:

a) have previous export sales experience, and be looking for a move into management (or)
b) be a newcomer to export, but possess a detailed knowledge of the UK contract floor coverings industry with at least 3 years' successful sales experience in this field. Full training in export procedures will be given.

Trips of 3-4 weeks' duration – for a total of approximately 4 months per annum will be made to service and motivate our distributors and to seek new major project business.

Please write in the first instance giving full details of your career, plus your age and salary to Mr. C. A. Reeder, Personnel Executive, Marley plc, PO Box 32, Riverhead, Sevenoaks, Kent.

TODAY'S SOLUTIONS TO TOMORROW'S AUTOMATION PROBLEMS.

SENIOR SOFTWARE DESIGNERS

At Cincinnati, we're tackling the factory automation problems of the future today. As a leader in high-technology automation, including CNC, FMS and Robotics, we're identifying the future needs of industry and gearing up to meet those demands.

Staying well ahead of the field means recruiting people with the right blend of vision, skill and innovation to make a vital contribution to our development, and these are amongst the essential qualities we shall be seeking in candidates for our Senior Software Designer vacancies.

Educated to Degree level, we will expect you to be able to demonstrate a minimum of 3-5 years' experience in software design, including familiarity with Pascal or PL/M languages. You will have worked on Real Time Systems Design Programming, preferably on Intel Microprocessor hardware.

A good communicator, you'll be a practically minded person, able to work as part of a small team requiring minimal supervision on complete projects rather than task-oriented work. You will benefit from total involvement in Numerical Control Systems development, FMS and many other projects, seeing your work through to completion. You will be working on the most up-to-the-minute automation equipment, with enormous scope for you to bring your creativity to bear in a challenging work environment.

Our products are developed jointly with Cincinnati in the USA, and as the only European member of our group involved in this specialised area of operation, we provide overseas support, with interesting travel prospects.

We offer a good salary package plus relocation expenses in a company where the future is limited only by the scope of your imagination and skill.

If you're ready for the challenge these positions provide, write with full curriculum vitae to: Ian Good, Manager of UK Human Resources, Cincinnati Milacron Ltd., Dells Lane, Biggleswade, Beds SG18 8LB, or telephone Ian Taylor, Engineering Manager on 0767 313504, ext. 210.

CINCINNATI MILACRON

MADAME TUSSAUD'S

Accountant in Tourism to £15,000

The growth of this world famous, family entertainment company, a member of the Pearson Group, necessitates the appointment of an additional accountant, reporting to the Chief Accountant, to join a small, friendly department accounting for Madame Tussaud's and the London Planetarium and dealing with returns from other interests in the UK and abroad.

Applications are invited from qualified, or part qualified, accountants with good all round accounting experience and some specialised emphasis on taxation, statutory accounts and control of capital expenditure. Some exposure to micro computers would be an advantage. This is a job for a youngish accountant, man or woman, who is interested in all aspects of financial and management accounting.

Benefits include a non-contributory pension and life assurance scheme, four weeks' annual holiday and an opportunity to contribute to the further development of a unique company in the growth industry of tourism.

Please write with full curriculum vitae to Mrs. P. A. Anders, Madame Tussaud's Ltd., Marylebone Road, London NW1 5LR.

ELECTRO-CRAFT LIMITED

TECHNICAL SALES ENGINEER

A unique opportunity now exists for a Technical Sales Engineer to promote our system products of brush and brushless servo motors and amplifiers, positioners and optical encoders. The engineer should be familiar with components of this type and preferably have sales experience. The potential for early promotion exists with this expanding company. A generous remuneration, company car, BUPA membership and company pension scheme are included in the total package for this important position.

Please send full C.V. to the Personnel Manager, Electro-Craft Ltd, Third Avenue, Crewe CW1 1XU.

Export Sales Manager

Australia and Far East
Based Manchester Area

Our Client manufactures a range of vinyl wallcoverings (brand leading names) and flexible/rigid vinyl and PVC sheets used in the Home Decorative, Seating, Automotive and Book Binding industries.

The Deep Sea markets of Australia and the Far East, including Japan, Indonesia and Hong Kong, are of some considerable importance to the Company and the challenge of this job is to strengthen and widen commercial relationships with existing distributors and to motivate agents; there will be some prospecting involved.

You will be 25—40, male/female, with a sound knowlege of Export Sales practices and procedures with the maturity to deal at Managing Director level. A foreign language would be useful as would a technical aptitude.

The package comprises a salary of c£15,000, Pension/Life Assurance/Medical schemes, 4 weeks' holiday and relocation costs where applicable.

To learn more of this superb opportunity simply telephone John Duxbery—061-834 5118 over the next seven days.

THE ARTS

THEATRE / 'Troilus and Cressida'

Shakespeare dislocated

TWO DIRECTORIAL changes imposed upon "Troilus and Cressida" weaken the Royal Shakespeare Company's new production at Stratford. Thanks to some dynamic performances, the play survives the first fairly well — a typically gimmicky RSC dislocation of scene. The second constitutes a misinterpretation of Shakespeare's purpose.

First, the action is transferred from the plains of Hellenic Troy to (approximately) Sevastopol in the Crimean War. Everything takes place in a dilapidated mansion occupied alternately by Greeks in field grey and Trojans in Ruritanian maroon. Beneath its shattered ceiling pictures hang awry and a door is off its hinges. Tickertape, field telephones and a tinny much-heard piano only add to the dreariness of the scene.

Uprooting the play from its classical setting imparts a grim vigour and may help those illiterates to whom Troy is a fairy tale. Howard Davies directs to give a modern and near-Marxist slant to the poet's examination of strife, lechery, crime, rage and lust, which here are his whole concern.

But, in attributing these vices to the Victorians, he destroys that universality which belongs to a great myth and makes it hurt us where we live. Thus women in the play become blowsy and bedraggled camp-followers and the quarrelling generals recall Dickensian Bumbles and Gradgrinds. So the production seems to blame the decadence on 19th century social conditions—and indeed Peter Jeffrey's Ulysses looks like Mr Gladstone.

The more serious distortion is a question of tone. There is nothing wrong with Anton Lesser's hysterical little Troilus, lunatically obsessed with Juliet Stevenson's slack-limbed and morbidly convincing Cressida, who want only betrays him an hour after she has pledged herself his forever.

Other compelling portraits are also on view—Alan Rickman's sulky, conceited and world-weary Achilles (although he never suggests a great warrior), David Burke's vain and self-indulgent Hector and Clive Merrison's Pandarus, a dissipated schoolmaster up to mischief.

But in writing of these savage and mercilessly studied events, Shakespeare's attitude was surely that of his scurrilous Greek observer, Thersites, to whom the cynical behaviour of both warriors and their doxies was terrifyingly funny. It is his laughter which makes this ironic satire so formidable. In the part Alun Armstrong only gags with spilled beer cans, or sticks a saucepan on his head.

Unlike his author, Mr Davies has not detached himself from the horrors, so there is no aloof death's head grin. As Helen, Lindsay Duncan gets no chance to be comical as well as contemptible. Throughout, the mood is narrow-minded political anger. What was needed was mockery and a cosmic disgust with mankind.

John Barber

Bresslaw's rough magic

NO NEED to fear at the Ludlow Festival the forecasts of the meteorologists. With Bernard Bresslaw's Prospero—his bald dome looming beneath the battlements of the castle's open air stage—to cast the spells in Philip Grout's revival of "The Tempest," we feel assured both of the weather and of the man's ability to work his "rough magic" as he wishes.

When did this role last find such an easy potency in the art that Shakespeare seems to compare to his own? At first it may look like curious casting but this actor's gigantic and benevolent manner conveys a rare authority over people as well as the climate. The clap of stage thunder for the opening shipwreck (rather absurdly preceded by a bout of mid-Victorian singsong aboard the doomed vessel to make you wonder if you had come to the right play) makes us shudder as we shiver beneath the night sky. Is it fact or fiction?

Mr Bresslaw's slightly oriental and bearded charm, with that high shiny pate and ponderous way with the verse, puts us safely in his power.

Towards the end of the evening you feel the "beating" of his mind over the plot to overthrow him and his release of Ariel (Timothy Roland) is very moving as the actor rushes off across the grass to the liberating night.

Otherwise the production seems to be tilted, in favour of a farce about "a few odd lads"—two drunken sailors and an enviously over-clothed if genial native with a green face in rags and tatters. Frank Windsor's Caliban and Sylvester McCoy's Stephano has much to be said for them.

Sean Cavanagh as designer supplies a timbered mid-stage pyramid which creakingly opens like a cactus to form a nautical interior or Prospero's cell or a focus for the masque celebrating the lovers' ritual. It has an electrical lift behind it which hums.

If Mr Grout seems to defy Coleridge's warning, quoted in the programme, about overdoing scenic effects because the play "addresses itself entirely to the imagination faculty," the play achieves finally a proper note of magnanimous magic and reconciliation, largely owing to the huge, heartening presence of Mr Bresslaw and his majestic lumbering visions.

BALLET /

Yoko Shimizu

ROBERT DE WARREN'S ballet "A Midsummer Night's Dream," when created by him for Northern Ballet Theatre in 1981, suffered from gargantuan padding (intended to make the ballet last a complete evening), very conventional choreography, and a rather ill-assorted assemblage of pieces by Mendelssohn.

His new version, given its premiere at the Palace Theatre, Manchester, on Tuesday night, suffered from much the same defects but it was graced by fine performances by the Japanese artist Yoko Shimizu (as Titania) and the Venezuelan guest artist Franklin Gamero (as Puck).

Ideally, Titania should radiate a mysterious quality appropriate to the Queen of the Fairies. Yoko Shimizu, however, is essentially a soubrette, with the short legs normal in Japanese girls and so, very sensibly, she tranformed the role into something suited to her temperament and physique.

Franklin Gamero transformed the choreography allotted to Puck in much the same way, sometimes shooting out his legs to the side at odd angles and clearly suggesting Puck's mischievous character, regrettably, the designer Clive Lavagne gave him a large blue wig, ornamented with spangles, which did not match the quality of his movements.

Fernau Hall

TELEVISION / Director's memorial

Stylistic scheme

NOT ALL ambitious film makers relish the possibility that a composer of genial music, and a miraculous flow of blissful tunes, might also be a genial man. Last Easter, in their "God Rot Tunbridge Wells", Tony Palmer and John Osborne reduced Handel to an earlier day "Disgusted of Tunbridge Wells". While the music spoke of harmony the pictures advanced dissonance and the words maintained whinge.

This makes it the more welcome that the same channel should also have commissioned last night's Honour, Profit and Pleasure (C-4) for George Frederick's tercentenary. This was unreservedly a celebration, with a warmingly widespread choice of musical quotations and a composer who admitted to liking England because "I am happy, successful and I make money".

It is a melancholy irony that this life enhancing film should have been written (with Peter Luke) and directed by the late Anna Ambrose. She worked on it with extraordinary care and energy in the last painful stages of cancer. Just 40 she lived only long enough to see and approve the final version. It became a double memorial.

Her stylistic scheme put the biography into the framework of 18th century theatre. There was even a credit for the expert in "baroque movement" whatever that might be. The Irish actor James Quin (Alan Devlin) was an appreciative narrator and the deliberate artificiality nearly overcame the problem that the intervals between the music left little time for revealing characterisation.

Simon Callow's Handel allowed himself a realistic German accent and became mildy exasperated about sopranos whose beautiful voices were not matched by beautiful minds. Generally he was a gentle figure, well turned out, well disposed and a long way from the ranting Trevor Howard composer of the Palmer film. If anything he was too passive for an artist of such abundant energy.

The ever valuable "Open Space" returned with Mike Cornford's Balham Dogwatch (BBC-2), a jokey protest about dog excretion in public places. An entertainment to "stop the viewers switching to the crap on other side", we were assured. Some who tried to escape will have slipped on Christopher Hird's Another Fine Mess (C-4), a jokey protest about dog excretion in public places.

The latter report was slightly the more useful in detailing the health risks as well as the nastiness caused by the largely uncontrolled daily 700 tons of excrement deposited by British dogs, and in going on to other good reasons for restricting the canine population. It seemed a pity that both programmes left open the option that this problem can still be laughed away.

After his self effacement in "The Visit" of the previous week Desmond Wilcox allowed a fleeting glimpse of his concerned features while filming the story of Don Clark, otherwise Triathlon Man (BBC-1). In gratitude to the hospital that removed his spinal tumour, wilful, cigarette addicted Don now raises money for it by sponsorship of his extreme athletic activity.

There were also signs of a death wish among the entertainers who joined Calum Kennedy's Commando Course (BBC-2), a theatre troupe on a shoestring tour in the Scottish Highlands and Islands. This was an amusingly dry film by the team of Michael Begg (director) and Ian Wooldridge (narrator) that also made the much less revealing "Behind the Lines" series. Why such a sad and funny documentary should have had to wait so many years for a showing is a mystery.

MUSIC /

Sensuous Elgar, Previn

ELGAR AS impressionist is an unlikely concept but one unexpectedly conjured up by Andre Previn in his concert with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra devoted to his music at the Festival Hall on Tuesday evening. Previn has always been a master of texture and here, in "Cockaigne", the Cello Concerto and First Symphony he constantly drew our attention to the variety and sensuous texture of Elgar's instrumental writing.

Yet, somewhat paradoxically, in the Concerto, structural strength was given just as marked an emphasis by the conductor and soloist, Yo Yo Ma, who achieved what all cellists in this work should aspire to, namely an ideal balance between emotion and line.

They achieved that by scrupulously attending to the small print of the score, to Elgar's detailed dynamic range, his calls for portamento, staccato and the like.

Previn rightly made the Adagio the heart of the symphony. Again its feelings were aptly expressed without the need for exaggeration. The Scherzo was light-fingered, almost effervescent. In the outer movements, Previn once more controlled structure to a nicety but tended to give the R.P.O. brass more than the look they needed to encourage them to upset balance, the conductor's sole miscalculation which made the peroration more obvious than it need be. That came as a surprise after the restrained and measured treatment of the overture at the start.

ART /

Old Master prints

A RARITY of the most sriking kind makes doubly remarkable what would in any case be an enormously distinguished exhibition of Old Master prints at Colnaghi's, Old Bond Street, until July 13. It is a set of five engravings by Cherubino Alberti (1552-1615) printed on contemporary, hand-woven heavy golden coloured satin.

This makes the set of real importance for the history of printmaking. What is more, it is only one of several varieties in this exhibition. All are described in scrupulous fashion and illustrated in the most useful catalogue which is a tribute to Ruth Bromberg, now the head of Colnaghi's prints department.

Represented by examples of their work which are familiar, but today are rare on the art market, are several of the world's greatest printmakers. Notable among them are Dürer, Rembrandt, G.B. Tiepolo, Canaletto and Goya.

Yet this is not just an exhibition of great names: it is for instance a delight and instructive to see a group of etchings by Odoardo Fialetti, a charming little master who bridges the 16th and 17th Centuries.

The exhibition ends on an impressive note for there are enough fine English mezzotints to suggest the heights that art reached in the 18th Century. It is also good to be reminded, thanks to four Whistlers, that one of the finest exponents of the art of etching did not die until 1903.

WAY OF THE WORLD

Responsibility

WEST German police are said to be investigating a "claim of responsibility" for an explosion at Frankfurt airport in which a man and two children were killed and more than 30 people injured.

The "claim of responsibility"—whether formal or otherwise is not stated—a kind of hideous etiquette is being developed in these matters—was made in a letter from a "previously unknown radical environmental group."

The letter added: "It does not bother us if women and children are killed. There is no innocence."

"There is no innocence. We are all guilty." These statements are interchangeable. For the fanatics of environmentalism they are literally true. Anybody who has ever used a plastic artefact or switched on a light powered by nuclear energy or travelled in a petrol-driven vehicle deserves the death penalty.

This necessarily includes the radical environmentalists themselves. Even their bombs are an affront to the "environment." From their crazed logic there is no escape for anybody. What do the mild, well-meaning people who discovered or invented the "environment" some 25 years ago think about it now?

Last Ditchwater

WHILE railway fares, described by a spokesman as "fiercely competitive," rise in a manner more furtive than fierce, it is reported that British Rail, as I suppose we must call it, is enthusiastically opening up its stations to private investment.

There is a £1 million project to turn part of the great piazza at Euston, where up to now nobody has been able to sit down at all, into a "400-seat Continental-style" restaurant. Casey Jones hamburger bars, Travellers' Fare cafes and Pizzaland complexes are all crowding in.

"Relaxed licensing laws . . . cashing in on the tourist boom . . . face-lifts for local stations . . ." These are some of the repellent phrases used by people to whom ancient traditions mean less than nothing.

For the inefficiency and even squalor of the railways, once an affront, has now become a thing of ritual and tradition, one of our last-ditch defences against the horror of tourism which will, if it is not checked, turn all England into a wretched, patronised parody of a country.

But there is danger even here. We may hope that Marylebone which, though it has lost its tea-room and other memorials of a noble past, is still essentially (in George Meredith's words, or was it Hubert Crackenthorpe?) "the stationmaster's station," may be preserved.

We may hope that even Bog Lane Halt, on the old LMS line from Stretchford Junction to Lampton-on-Hoke, with its single perilous wooden platform, its vandalised ladies' waiting-room, its rusting cough-drop machines—all in the last stages of decay and partly under water—may be preserved.

But even if they are, won't they become, like poor old Ironbridge itself, "cradle of the industrial revolution," museums of relics, tourist-attractions ("I just love your old English railroad squalor"), pizza-infested hamburger-surrounded infernos of Travellers' Fare and worse?

Rather than that . . . dynamite or cleansing fire?

Is This the Answer?

THE search for a profession that cannot possibly be "bent" which has taken up so much columnar space lately and almost caused a strike in the ablative absolute turning shed, where some of the more diehard hands regard it as a threat to their moral principles, may be over.

A Warwickshire reader suggests a professional contortionist. I myself cannot see any way such a person could be "bent." But I asked Mr Grylls, the aged clergyman who looks after Ughtred St John Mainwaring, the columnar computer (no vulgar "Ted" or "Bert" for us) if he would set the august machine to work on the problem.

He held up mittened hands in horror, "Oh no, sir, he"—Mr Grylls always talks of the computer in this way—"I am sure he would never consent to have anything to do with such a tasteless proposition."

Sure enough, a growling noise came from the computer and the temperature in the room began to fall alarmingly, indicating a literally freezing hauteur.

But Mr Grylls, who although he is asleep most of the time is resourceful in his own way, poured a glass of his best vintage port into the machine and the growl turned into a reassuring purr.

TASTING THE HIGH LIFE IN NEW YORK'S LUXURY STORE

Picture by KENNETH MASON

BY ANN CHUBB

STOPPING off at Tiffany's Fifth Avenue store is one of New York's most luxurious shopping experiences and was so long before Audrey Hepburn breakfasted there.

It is a great American institution. 147 years old and still full of old-fashioned charm and service. Millionaires shop there for their diamonds, brides for porcelain and silver and the fashion followers for a silver pen or anything else by Elsa Peretti.

While there are eight Tiffany branches in America, as well as the New York store, there has not been a London branch since it closed in 1941 after 75 years.

Now the big news is that Tiffany has plans to open in Europe—London and Paris in particular—before the end of next year. Last year, a conglomerate of businessmen, headed by chairman William R. Chaney, bought the business from Avon cosmetics and European expansion is very much on their minds.

Publicity director Arlette Brisson, who is something of an Anglophile and wears clothes designed by both Bruce Oldfield and Victor Edelstein, confirmed this when we recently visited the store to photograph the latest jewellery by Paloma Picasso, who has been designing for Tiffany since 1980.

Her designs are dramatic and distinctive, often in gold and with both precious and semi-precious stones. There are gold and diamond watches, too, with a striking shape reminiscent of a compass, while her famous "Love and Kisses" range of gold brooches, earrings and pendants is a best seller.

The Peretti line is simple and sculptural and very chic. In silver and gold it ranges from tiny heart earrings to silver-topped canes and shaving brushes, belts, key rings, even tableware, plus a stunning new series of cutlery.

While Arlette Brisson admits that at Tiffany "the sky is the limit" as far as prices go, it is possible to buy original and inexpensive presents there. For instance, Tiffany-marked porcelain egg cups sell for less than £5, black metal Peretti pens for £25, and tiny Peretti hearts on chains (ideal presents for little girls) for around £20. One friend of mine always shops there for silver toothpaste keys which Tiffany will engrave with a name or crest.

Best of all, everything—however small or inexpensive — is beautifully wrapped and boxed in Tiffany's famous sky-blue boxes and tied up with white satin ribbon before it is popped into its miniature Tiffany carrier bag.

EATING IN WITH JANET LAURENCE

SOME SIMPLE THOUGHTS ON SINGLE PORTIONS

SIMPLE methods and imaginative planning can make cooking for one or two both interesting and enjoyable.

Tin-foil packets, as used in Cottage-packed chicken, can cut down on both fat and washing up. Pork chops can be cooked the same way, wrapped on a bed of sliced mushrooms or chopped chicory. Add a little stock, wine or orange juice and reduce the cooking time by 10 to 15 minutes.

Ingredients not easy to get in small quantities can make two very different dishes.

Salads combining hot and cold ingredients are very chic just now and quite delicious.

One night's cooking can provide more than one meal. Twice Times Soup uses the same base for both a fish and vegetable soup. Each is substantial enough for a light supper.

Each recipe serves one and can be doubled for two.

THE RECIPES

COTTAGE-PACKED CHICKEN

INGREDIENTS: 2oz cottage cheese; 2 tablespoons freshly chopped herbs; salt and freshly ground black pepper; 1 clove garlic, crushed (optional); 1 large chicken leg.

METHOD: mix the cheese with the herbs and garlic (if using) and season well. Ease the skin away from the chicken flesh but leave attached, then push the cheese stuffing into the space between the skin and the flesh. Pull the skin back over the stuffing and place the leg on a piece of tin foil.

Season the skin, wrap loosely in foil and place in pre-heated oven at 375F (Gas 5) for about 50min or until a sharp knife slipped into the thigh releases clear juices. Serve with a green salad and brown rice.

CHICKEN LIVER SALAD

INGREDIENTS: 2oz mange-tout peas, trimmed; 2oz stringless green beans, trimmed; salt; 1 small chicory head, trimmed and leaves separated; few leaves iceberg lettuce, torn in pieces; 2oz very fresh mushrooms, wiped and sliced; 2oz grapes, cut in half and de-pipped; 1 teaspoon oil or butter; pinch of tarragon; 2 rashers smoked streaky bacon, rind removed and rashers cut in slivers; 4oz chicken livers, cleaned and large pieces halved; about 2 tablespoons good French dressing; 1 tablespoon chopped mixed fresh herbs or parsley.

METHOD: cook the mange-tout peas and green beans separately in salted boiling water until tender but still slightly crunchy, about 3 to 5min. Drain immediately and refresh in cold water.

Arrange the chicory leaves on a plate in a circle pointing outwards. Place torn iceberg leaves in the centre and add the beans, mushrooms and grapes.

Heat the oil in a pan with the tarragon and fry the bacon pieces. When cooked, move to sides of pan and add the livers. Cook briskly 2 to 3min until just done—liver should still be slightly soft to touch. Stir livers and bacon together and add to salad mound.

Arrange mange-tout peas wigwam fashion round the other ingredients, spoon over the french dressing, sprinkle on the herbs and eat immediately.

LAMB CHOPS WITH MELON

INGREDIENTS: 3oz stringless green beans, topped and tailed; 2 lamb chops, trimmed of excess fat; half a small ogen or galia melon, flesh scooped into balls, remaining flesh spooned out and chopped or processed; grated rind of a small orange plus 2 tablespoons juice; salt and freshly ground black pepper; 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

METHOD: boil the beans in salted water for 5min. Drain and refresh in cold water, drain again and set on one side. Seal the lamb chops on each side, either dry in a non-stick pan or with a brushing of oil. Add the chopped or processed melon, the orange rind and juice and salt and pepper to taste.

Lower the heat, cover and simmer for 20 to 30mins or until the chops are almost cooked. Add the pre-cooked beans and simmer for a further 2mins, then add the melon balls and continue cooking for another min. Check seasoning. Arrange on a heated plate or serving dish, add chopped parsley and eat with new potatoes.

TWICE TIMES SOUP

INGREDIENTS FOR BASIC SOUP: ½oz butter or margarine; 1 medium onion, finely chopped; 6oz potato, peeled and diced; 15fl oz milk; salt and freshly ground black pepper.

INGREDIENTS FOR CHOWDER: 2 rashers streaky bacon, rind removed and rashers diced; 5oz cod fillet without skin; 2 tablespoons cream or evaporated milk.

INGREDIENTS FOR VEGETABLE SOUP: 1 small courgette, coarsely grated; 1 carrot, grated; 2oz salami or garlic sausage (optional); a little stock; 1 tablespoon chopped parsley.

METHOD: melt the fat, add the onion and cook gently until transparent. Add the potato, stir with the onion for 1 to 2min then add the milk and season. Bring rapidly to the boil then lower the heat and simmer gently, uncovered, for 10 to 15 min until the potato is just cooked. Put half the mixture aside for another night.

METHOD FOR CHOWDER: fry the bacon gently till crisp, remove from pan, add the fish and brown lightly in bacon fat. Quarter the fish and add to hot basic soup mixture. Continue to simmer until fish is just cooked. Add the cream or evaporated milk (traditional with chowder), check the seasoning and serve in a hot bowl with the bacon on top.

METHOD FOR VEGETABLE SOUP: add diced sausage (if using) to hot basic soup mixture and heat right through. Add the grated vegetables and simmer for 2min. Add a little stock to thin the soup, if necessary. Check seasoning and serve in a hot bowl topped with freshly chopped parsley.

BOOK REVIEW

WE'RE all addicted to something, whether we admit it or not. It may be that couple of cups of coffee to get us going in the morning, frequent top-ups of tea in the office, or periodic bars of chocolate.

Dr Richard Mackarness, a pioneer in the discovery of links between certain foods and allergies has in his latest book "A Little of What You Fancy" (Fontana Original, £1·95), turned his attention to addictions.

Although he does focus on smoking, he equally claims that cola-type drinks can set up an addiction (from childhood on, presumably) and that derivatives of the cola plant do relieve fatigue.

One of the more complicated elements he dwells on is that even drugs which are highly addictive to most people, are virtually never addictive to everyone—so there are always the exceptions who can boast they have survived hard drugs.

Dr Mackarness points out that it is foolish to deny the pleasure which people get from their addiction—significantly, the areas of the brain associated with pleasurable sensations are located close to those affected by drugs which produce the sensation of being "high."

In some areas he reports success in combating cravings by using a "hair of the dog" technique, giving regular and very small neutralising doses of the drug being combated.

About this technique, which he says can be used to kick the smoking habit, he admits honestly that he does not know how it works.

These methods, applied in clinics he has pioneered, are likely to be as hotly debated as his early food-linked allergy discoveries, most of which are now taken very seriously.

HOW SOON BEFORE THE BIRDS OF PARADISE LOSE THEIR PLUMAGE?

Quite a long while, we can safely assure you. And how can we be so confident?

Believe it or not, because of something called the Martindale Rub Test.

It measures the wear characteristics of every single fabric and gives each one a number, the higher the better.

A bit like you sitting down on your sofa a thousand times an hour for a whole day just to see if the fabric wears out.

The Birds of Paradise in our picture have a 20,000 rating. Anything over 18,000 is good.

(Amazingly, some new Sanderson fabrics have a quite outstanding 70,000 rating.)

So when we make a suite for you, we can help you select the fabric too.

That's another feather in our cap, not to mention on our sofa.

TOMORROW'S EUROPE

THE MAIN SUBJECT under discussion at the European Summit which begins in Milan tomorrow will be European union. But it is not European union as it was once boldly presented to us. In the good old days fervent pro-Europeans argued unashamedly in favour of political union for its own sake. That idea has lost ground. Now the characteristic federalist argument, which is put forward by DAVID STEEL on this page, is that Europe will not recover economically without a degree of political integration. Mr STEEL puts the argument very neatly when he writes that "the internal market cannot be achieved without some concessions of national sovereignty".

If this is indeed so, then the answer must be that we will have to do without the benefits of an internal market. Most people in this country (though perhaps not most people who support Mr STEEL's Alliance) do quite deeply believe in the importance of national sovereignty. But is Mr STEEL's argument in fact true? He concedes himself that some of the obstacles to an effective internal market are merely bureaucratic and can therefore be dismantled quite easily. Beyond that there are, it is true, many barriers which can only be removed as a result of political action on the part of all the member states. As Mr STEEL and the federalists argue it, the present national veto, which is the safeguard of national sovereignty, will hamper such action. And yet there is every reason to hope that many common measures can be unanimously agreed in favour of an internal market without any single country feeling that its national self-interest is sacrificed.

Mr STEEL argues genuinely, but there is an element of humbug in the federalist case, as events showed earlier this month. Then the West Germans, the most passionate advocates of getting rid of the national veto, invoked it without much apparent shame in order to block a rise in cereal prices which was too slender for well-padded Bavarian farmers. Whatever fine words are spoken in Milan the fact remains that all European Governments still think nationally. Mr STEEL, were he more Machiavellian, might be accused of trying to introduce federalism through the back door by the economic argument. Even so, his ingenuity on behalf of the cause of European union could be misplaced, for at the end of the day politicians in power are not sustained by grand notions.

THE CLIQUE

MR RAY HONEYFORD has been cleared of the McCarthyite charge of racial prejudice disgracefully laid against him. That is one good thing and we should rejoice that a good and devoted teacher will not actually be crucified, though he has been brought to the place of execution by his local Pharisees. However one quite sees why the attempt should have been made. The articles complained of in the SALISBURY REVIEW argued rationally, among other things, against the notion of instruction in an immigrant language. If Urdu why not Polish? he asked. Such elementary good sense should hardly call up a lynch party. "English," said Mr HONEYFORD, "is the key of such a child's future in the Western workplace." Most of us thought that such views pertained to the happy acceptance of immigrants and their children into this country. This is deeply offensive to those trading in unhappiness. What got Mr Honeyford into his ordeal was surely his analysis of the race relations industry, of Aunt Eth-Min:

"The multi-culturists are a curious mixture: well meaning liberals and clergymen suffering from a rapidly dating post-imperial guilt: teachers building a career by jumping on the latest educational bandwagon a small but increasing group of 'professional' Asian and West Indian intellectuals and a hard-core of Left-wing political extremists. . . . The same people often welcome race riots as signs of healthy revolt, rather than as the criminal violence of a small proportion of adolescent thugs." How can he expect to live? Mr HONEYFORD has defined an enemy, an enemy while we are about it, of good and happy race relations. Such professionals in the service of Eth-Min, are authoritarians. They picked on Mr HONEYFORD precisely because he was not a racialist, in the sincere hope that they would put a juddering fear into educational administrators, other teachers, anyone who might ever introduce rational argument into sacred territory. They have a subtle racism of their own, directed always at "the English", not the British, whom they wish to hurt, humiliate and make ashamed. There is a sort of spiritual quislingism here quite alient to a normal desire to treat people of all races equally. They use race as a weapon in the exercise of power, and their little expulsions and persecutions function to impose a bloodless emotional terror. Let us start taking them seriously.

MEDICAL PROSCRIPTIONS

TIME WAS when the British Medical Association surfaced but rarely to the nation's notice. In recent years, however, it has assumed an altogether grander role. It has taken the lead in a moral crusade against the evils of tobacco. It has campaigned for a national ban on tobacco advertising: and yesterday it broadened its morality to denounce the advertising of drink as well. Cynics might be almost driven to suppose that it hoped to reach a perfect state where its members could draw their fees in idleness.

Such cynicism would be unworthy. Yet the BMA's targetry does seem a mite selective. The evidence of medical research has long since shown that drink and tobacco are but two of the devils that lie in wait for those who seek longevity. An addiction to rich cream cakes, fast cars, and sports such as horse-riding and hang-gliding can also land us prematurely in the mortuaries. There are even those who warn against the potential consequences of over-enthusiastic indulgence in sex. Will the BMA come to our rescue against those who push these temptations in our paths as well?

There is a more fundamental question to which the Association should perhaps one day address itself. It may be that if we were all spared the perils pressed upon us by the advertisers of drink, tobacco, food, sport, speed and sex, we would survive our biblical life-span into a miserable old age. At that point we would really begin to tax the skills and resources of the medical profession (not to mention the actuarial calculations of those who seek to fund our pensions). The burden of the NHS as national life expectancy soared up towards the 90s hardly bears contemplation. Has the BMA thought of that?

Madame Non must say 'Yes'

DAVID STEEL, MP, says Mrs Thatcher must accept greater political union if Europe is to pull out of economic decline

IT has been a bumpy ride for the European wagon-train in recent months, straggling along the long trail towards a united Europe. The British wagon, ostensibly near the head of the column, with Mrs Thatcher and Sir Geoffrey Howe at the reins, has been obstructing progress with a smile. Yet when they arrive breathless and shaken in Milan this week for the summit meeting of EEC heads of State (in Mrs Thatcher's case, head of Government) they will find our major EEC partners still champing at the bit to push ahead with the development of the Community.

True, last week's German veto encouraged the obstructionists. There has been a distinct neighing and snorting along the column to let off steam. But the logic of European union is inexorable if Europe is to pull away from economic decline. The sooner our wagoners recognise this, the better prepared and the more comfortable will be the ride for Britain.

The nostrum "if America sneezes, Europe catches cold" holds as true as ever. It does not apply in reverse. In the past two years America and Japan have soared while Europe falters.

Economic indicators paint a sorry picture of decline. Our car industries, each with a small share of a market where capacity outstrips demand, still need large injections of public funds. Three indigenous mainframe computer companies still scramble for two per cent. of the world market each while IBM alone has 70 per cent. and upwards. Ten European companies are spending over $7 billion each on different digital telephone exchange systems: in America only three companies compete in this market.

In short, a trading community which has a larger population than the USA or Japan, which accounts for nearly a quarter of world trade and is richer than either of its competitors, is falling miserably behind them. Notably, European unemployment is nearly double, and economic growth rates less than half, those of our free world competitors.

The problem is that without genuine European co-operation and integrated decision making no single European country can achieve the technological development or exercise the political and economic influence effectively to overcome the problems of unemployment and inadequate social provision in an economic recession.

Thatcher and Mitterrand : is Britain talking the same language over the EEC?

An obvious first step towards a solution—the creation of a single large market in Europe by 1992—is up for discussion in Milan. The European Commission has come forward with a White Paper, "Completing the Internal Market," which defines the goal as nothing less than the removal of all intra-European frontier formalities by 1992. The Commission has identified 300 major decisions which must be made in the next seven years—a hefty agenda for the member States. They involve harmonisation of rates of indirect taxation (particularly VAT) and of industrial standards. They are the sine qua non for the lifting of frontier restrictions.

The objections that will be raised are such that only a huge effort of political will can push through these all-too-necessary measures. But shock therapy is needed if European economies are to hold their own and to recreate opportunities for investment.

If the European leaders accept the Commission's proposals—with all their difficult implications in areas such as immigration policy, the policing of drugs trafficking and the supervision of financial services—it will signify a quantum leap in mutual trust.

This is where the Thatcher factor comes into play. "Madame Non" is happy to talk about the purely mechanical side of an internal market in the Community and to discuss how it might be achieved. Some of the obstacles to the free movement of goods, services and capital are purely bureaucratic and can easily be removed provided common sense prevails.

These Mrs Thatcher will go along with. The removal of others—those affecting national economic interests—need more than that: they require a lucid perception of what "national interests" are in the longer term.

The most difficult barriers to overcome, however, are those affecting the sovereignty of the member States. The internal market cannot be achieved without some concessions of national sovereignty. This is where Mrs Thatcher has thus far repeatedly given the thumbs down.

The British Government has used the absence of the free internal market implicit in the Treaty of Rome to justify its refusal to press ahead with political union: it wants the economic advantages without the political concessions. Mrs Thatcher is lobbying hard in Europe against proposals for greater political unity, and to do so she has had to produce some positive-sounding proposals for mechanistic change. But if the other countries, tired of Britain's continued reluctance, call her bluff and move towards a united Europe without us, Mrs Thatcher's rock of national sovereignty will be the rock on which we founder.

I believe that Britain's real interests lie in playing a whole-hearted role in the development of the Community. Our Government's proposals for Milan, which abandon any vision of a united Europe, are said to be "pragmatic," our European partners see them as yet further evidence that Britain cannot see beyond a narrow national self-interest.

Britain cannot share with the EEC the benefits of a market of 320 million people without substantial concessions of national sovereignty. The European will to move ahead is clear—only Britain, Denmark and Greece resist the development of common political structures without which the internal market will never be created.

A British Government genuinely concerned with the best interests of our people would start by taking us into the European Monetary System as recommended by its supporters in the CBI and the Bank of England. A British Government truly committed to safeguarding our economy would be pushing for the rapid development of the internal market.

A Government which is committed to a future characterised by hope rather than pessimism about our European future would welcome moves to democratise the Community (through abandoning the veto, relaxing the unanimity rule and giving the Parliament wider powers) and thus to let it get ahead. Will Mrs Thatcher show the statesmanship required to embrace such moves?

LONDON DAY BY DAY

Loudspeakers to keep MPs in their rooms

AFTER THE sorry performance by Labour MPs on Monday night when at times as few as eight of them bothered to attend a debate on a critical motion tabled by Neil Kinnock, I have the further news that the Commons Chamber could soon resemble a mausoleum.

The Commons Broadcasting Committee has received the results of a private poll of members, which by a majority of 185 has voted to put loud speakers in their rooms to receive Parliamentary debates.

A technical study has now been commissioned by the committee and it will not be long before MPs will scarcely need to put in an appearance.

While many shun the mundane debates, particularly late at night, complaints have also arisen because among those who do turn up, some take in their own pocket televisions to watch the Test match. One MP told me yesterday: "Now members will get on with the mail and make an appearance only when asked to speak or vote. They will spend the rest of their time in the tiny overheated dungeons which are sometimes described as offices."

How Eton "popped"

MORE DETAILS emerged yesterday of the unseemly events at Eton which, as I disclosed yesterday, have forced the headmaster, Eric Anderson, to remove the independent status of "Pop" — the self-electing body of 24 senior boys.

As I reported, this unprecedented action was taken after it was discovered that many of the "Pop" boys had been using their common room as a smoking den.

The rub, as far as the Eton staff are concerned, is the way in which the misconduct was discovered. The "Pop" common room has always been, by mutual understanding, a "no-go" area for members of the staff and it was only when an exasperated cleaner made a request for a large number of ash trays that the awful truth dawned.

The British Embassy in Moscow, well used to some pretty odd requests, recently received a letter from an astrologer in England seeking the exact time of Mr Gorbachev's birth, to assist the working out of his horoscope. Our diplomats politely suggested he should try the Soviet Embassy in London. They always were optimists.

High style

THE EXPRESSION "high tech" took on a new meaning yesterday when mountaineer Chris Bonington claimed to be the only person to have used a computer more than 22,000 feet up a mountain.

A Sherpa on his expedition to Everest earlier this year, during which Bonington temporarily held another world record as the only 50-year-old to have conquered the summit, had the uneuviable task of carrying the climber's word processor up to Camp Two so he could continue writing his book.

A fellow guest at the Foyle's lunch where Bonington was speaking was Norris McWirter, the compiler of the "Guinness Book of Records." He is now checking Bonington's claim very carefully.

Tickets please

THE ATTEMPTS by British Rail's Southern Region to contain the incessent invasion of its first-class accommodation by the massed ranks of traveller from places like St Mary Cray are, if not particularly effective, at least endearing.

The other night a ticket inspector, known by the ticket-cheats as a "jumper," joined a train from Holborn to Ashford and took to disappearing into the lavatory on the approach to each station. As the passengers climbed aboard, he sallied forth like a spider and surcharged them before retreating again to await the next crop.

"It works fine until the lock jams," he told his captives brightly. The passengers, knowing that Southern Region has just 15 inspectors, grinned back, paid up and said: "See you next year."

End of story

GOOD NEWS and bad news for Radio 4 listeners. The good news is that "Rollercoaster," the controversial magazine experiment which the audience failed to take to its heart is being axed. I gather it was doomed by sackfuls of hate mail, to which the Controller, David Hatch, has the reputation of being extremely responsive.

The bad news is that in October, after many years of the tea-time serial slot "Story Time" is also to go. Perhaps Hatch ought to look again at the programme's high appreciation figures lest, come the autumn, his audience may make him wish that he had.

One flew over . . .

MEMBERS of the Labour party's National Executive, stupefied by yet another exceedingly lengthy meeting at their Walworth Road headquarters yesterday, greatly welcomed the interlude that followed a speech by Anthony Wedgwood Benn.

Just as he sat down, the engineers chose to test the building's fire-alarm system. The sound that was emitted bore a striking resemblance to the cooing of the common cuckoo.

Catching the big ones

suspected of the Brighton bombing, is, appropriately, an experienced big game fisherman.

Like most of that breed, he is also an extremely patient player of the waiting game. With his brother he once fished all day off the Florida Keys and caught just two fish. One was a stingray weighing 405lb, the other a hammerhead shark of 325lb.

Rowe of honour

APART FROM the Fellowships for Lords Olivier and Brabourne, unquestionably the most popular of the 1985 laurels given by the British Film Institute on Tuesday night was the special award for "a lifetime's achievement in the British film and television industry" to Bill Rowe, head of post-production at Elstree Studios.

So highly is this wizard of the dubbing theatre regarded by his peers that even the reclusive director Stanley Kubrick whose "A Clockwork Orange" and "Barry Lyndon" were both completed at Elstree, recorded a warm tribute which was played to the audience at the National Film Theatre.

On the same congratulatory tape were David Puttnam — who sent his message from the Colombian jungle where he is filming "The Mission" — Peter Yates, the Muppets and Alan Parker, who all have reasons to thank Rowe. Parker said delightedly that giving awards to the unsung heroes of the back room was "like Pete Townshend winning the Eurovision Song Contest."

Carte blanche

A DELEGATE at the TGWU conference in Bournemouth, who was asked why he had not yet reported the loss of his credit card, was overheard by a colleague explaining: "Whoever finds it cannot possibly spend more than my wife."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dual mandate, not a bloodbath

SIR—Your unhelpful leader on Ireland (June 25) does not offer any genuine answer to the difficulties faced by people in Northern Ireland. For those of us who abhor terrorist violence a solution requires more than the accession by Dr Fitzgerald to the demands of Mrs Thatcher.

Surprisingly, it also requires some flexibility by the British Government as well as by Dublin. The joint authority option which is now adhered to by the Government in Dublin and the Social Democratic and Labour Party in Northern Ireland actually offers a major shift in position from the "united Ireland or nothing" position previously held to with rigidity.

Joint authority offers Ulster Unionists the identity of being British, but also offers those who wish to be Irish the chance to have that identity recognised. Indeed, it is such a sensible option that one is surprised that the British Government has been so uncompromising in response.

It almost seems that the Government here wants the situation to continue unabated with an IRA able to draw immense support from disaffected nationalists and a hard line loyalist position becoming the norm rather than the exception on the other side. Your leader, in urging lack of compromise, merely perpetuates the problem.

The situation in Cyprus and Sri Lanka today are testimonies to the type of policy you advocate. It is likely a British Government would leave Northern Ireland in the future. Popular opinion is already looking that way. It would be far better for all concerned to have a negotiated and permanent dual mandate over the six counties now rather than a bloodbath later.

Let competition be fair for railways

SIR—The chairman of the Railway Conversion League, Mr Angus Dalgliesh, has asserted yet again (June 22) that railways "can be easily and cheaply converted into excellent roads."

There are already far too many major roads carrying long-distance traffic through residential areas, and his assumption of easy conversion is quite unfounded.

A modern railway uses far less space to carry its traffic than the equivalent road, and thus conversion would involve widening the formation, as well as difficult and costly rebuilding of bridges and other lineside structures. These rail to road schemes have been discredited many times.

What is needed in these days of "free market forces" is for the inequalities of competition between road and rail to be made less marked. Juggernauts do untold damage to the fabric of roads themselves, but much more to the various services underneath them—gas, water, and sewage pipes, and so on. They help to shake our towns apart.

The tax that they pay may go some way towards maintenance of the highway itself but they make no contribution to repair of the other destruction they wreak. It is the users of gas, of water, of the sewage facilities who pick up the bill in the form of higher tariffs and rates.

The express coach operator fares even better, paying much less road tax than the private motorist. Unlike the railways, which have all of their permanent way and signalling costs set against them, the coach operator pays practically nothing and gets free use of the roads. Let there be competition, but at least let it be fair to both sides.

Hope for the countryside's defenders

SIR—The implications of the news that house prices have ceased to rise so fast (report, June 18) should not be missed by Mr Patrick Jenkin and those officials at the Department of the Environment who advise him on housing requirements in county structure plans.

The Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors report states that there is a good supply of houses on the market and this would indicate that demand and supply are more or less in equilibrium.

This contradicts all the figures with which the Housebuilders' Federation have so successfully lobbied the Minister and makes the housing land requirements he has proposed in counties such as Hampshire, Berkshire, Wiltshire and Avon look absurdly high.

For example, in the county of Avon, the Ministers propose modifications to the structure plan to seek to increase the annual output of houses at least fourfold within the next few years despite the fact that there are no indications that population growth will accelerate beyond present levels.

In order to meet targets, enormous areas of open countryside are to be identified for development.

Accordingly, the RICS report gives hope to those who are fighting to save our countryside from development by proving that in the case of a county like Avon, the current rate of house building is adequate to meet demand and that the figures which have been fed to the Minister by the Housebuilders Federation are the product of vested interest.

GERALD HARFORD
Chipping Sodbury, Avon.

Dutch example

SIR—Please let me congratulate Sir Philip Goodhart (June 20) on bringing to the fore and recommending the Dutch example of cutting youth unemployment.

At the same time, however, it would be wise to correct a few misunderstandings of the Dutch situation.

First, in cutting the minimum wage of those below 23 we should note the Dutch start off from a higher base than ourselves. It is also interesting to note they have a statutory minimum wage; we do not. At the same time their cost of living is lower.

Second, dole money in Holland is significantly higher than in this country, therefore the minimum 15 per cent. between those working and not working is an even greater margin than in the United Kingdom.

Last, and this is based upon my experience of working as a senior civil servant in a Dutch Ministry, the impetus for work-sharing came not from the private sector as implied in the article, but from the trade unions and the public sector. Already in 1983 government bodies were taking on employees of all ages for 32 hours a week and offering job splitting.

It is also important to emphasise that change has come about because of co-operation between the Dutch Government, the unions and private industry. The Government has a great responsibility here in creating a climate of co-operation.

Mrs Thatcher, are you listening?

JOHN A. L. BARNES,
Docking, Norfolk.

Polytechnics hit

SIR—Your leader (June 20) began "The Audit Commission's report on polytechnics and colleges of further education makes sombre reading." How true.

This report is likely to have considerable influence on public opinion and Government thinking. How surprising, therefore, that it freely animadverts on polytechnics without once referring to the demands of employers, of professional institutions and of students which the polytechnics have to satisfy. The report discusses "value for money" without once comparing the cost or effectiveness of polytechnics with that of other institutions providing degree courses such as universities.

Your leader stated that "The Audit Commissioners are not the Government's poodles." Yet this report will reinforce the intention of the Government, stated in the recent Green Paper on Higher Education, of giving maximum financial support to the most costly institutions while cutting the resources of those that work most cost-effectively, namely the polytechnics.

The motives of the Audit Commissioners do not matter but, as a publicly financed and accredited body, their consequences do.

(Dr) A. J. POINTON
Nat. Sec., Assn of Polytechnic Teachers,
Portsmouth.

Football policing

SIR—Mr Roger Malone's report (June 14) quotes Mrs Verite Baker who claims that an unnamed "senior police officer" stated that Chelsea Football Club generally cut in half the police's estimate of the number of officers required for each match.

This is untrue and I am surprised that this statement was not checked with Chelsea FC before it was printed. The fact is that in August 1984, Chief Supt Bown met me and produced a list of every home match which he placed into two categories, "A" and "B" matches. He then indicated the number of officers he thought would be appropriate at each game. I accepted his proposals without reservation and the whole matter was resolved in ten minutes. I am becoming increasingly suspicious of remarks attributed to "unnamed senior police officers."

With regard to urinals, Chelsea FC has spent over £60,000 in the last two years increasing the toilet facilities at Stamford Bridge. Within a one mile radius of the stadium there are over 200 establishments selling alcohol and neither Fulham nor Chelsea Councils, while enjoying the high rateable income from these premises, provides public toilets which is an abdication of their public responsibilities.

K. W. BATES

One law for all

SIR—Your recent report of the ritual torture of bulls in Coria reminds one of many similar acts of cruelty persisting in Spain, apparently not outside the law.

But now that Spain is joining the Common Market can there be no appeal to the European Court? Or does this only protect disobedient schoolboys from being whacked and not animals from being tortured to death?

PHILIP JONES
Bungay, Suffolk.

Optimist of the year

SIR—Prize for the optimist of the year surely should go to Mr Maurice Wooller of Maidenhead (June 22).

Did he really believe any good would have come of a broadcast appeal to spectators to keep off the ground at the end of the Headingley Test? It would have had no more effect than do such notices and adjurations as "No bathing"; "No fishing"; "Keep Britain tidy"; "Keep off the grass"; "Keep your dog on a lead"; "Keep to the left (or right)"; "Slow, dangerous bend"; "No parking"; "Don't drink and drive."

No. Tell people they can't do these things and must not do that, and the challenge always will be accepted.

ERIC D. TODD
Manchester.

There for the beer

SIR—May I comment on your leader (June 24) headed "Time to stop louts" and J. Chamberlain's letter "Cricket 'violence'" of the same date?

Last year at Luton in the John Player League game there was a beer tent which the louts attempted to pull down and some 30 police had to be called to sort the problem out.

On Sunday last I again went to this game and what a difference. There was no beer tent, no football-type "singing" and barracking. I saw one policeman in the ground and three directing traffic after the game.

(Mrs) CHRISTINE MEADOWS
Luton, Beds.

Strange omission

SIR—Is it possible that Mr Chamberlain has a different edition of THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in Burnham?

I, for one, certainly missed the headlines about the deaths of 38 Australian cricket fans at the hands of their English counterparts at Headingley, that riot police had to be called in to segregate the rivals, that Yorkshire shopkeepers and householders were attacked and had their property damaged or that special trains laid on for the match had been smashed up in an orgy of drunken violence.

Equality groups 'do serious harm to race relations'

By VALERIE ELLIOTT Political Staff

RACE relations in Britain are being seriously damaged by groups working on behalf of the ethnic minorities, according to the committee of the all-party group of MPs.

Mr John Wheeler, Conservative MP for Westminster North, specifically named the Commission for Racial Equality and the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants while describing the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service as "an honourable body".

He accused those two groups of perpetrating myths and innuendo about the integrity of civil servants who worked as immigration officers, when in most cases the claims could not be proved.

Mr Wheeler was presenting a report compiled on the methods and efficiency of the immigration and Nationality Department at the Home Office.

Their main recommendation is for the swift establishment of a new complaints procedure so that any allegations about individual immigration officers can be investigated and, if substantiated, appropriate action taken.

But while there was not a proper procedure the myths were allowed to continue.

'Immense harm'

Mr Wheeler, who chaired the group, said yesterday: "We wish to make it clear that it is reprehensible that a body of civil servants, immigration officers, should be put under a cloud by ill-founded allegations and unsubstantiated anecdotes.

"It must be wrong that large numbers of hard-working and dedicated civil servants should be subjected to innuendo in this way.

"The organisations perpetrating these myths do immense htarm to race relations and immense disservice to members of ethnic communities."

'Immensely impressed'

The committee heard evidence from the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service, the Joint Council for the Welfare of Immigrants, and the Commission for Racial Equality, some of which was not complimentary of the Immigration Department.

But Mr Wheeler discounted the complaints, saying: "We certainly do not give much credence to it. In the course of our inquiry we found that those asked to give evidence were really unable to give prof of improper conduct on the part of officers and often the evidence given was of a value, unsubstantiated nature based on rumour and third-hand experience."

He went on to praise the staff of the department and said: "We were imensely impressed by the growing quality of their work and dedication to this important service, their efficiency in reducing delays and above all their efforts with the ethnic groups."

WETTEST JUNE FOR 14 YEARS

By KENNETH CLARKE

WITH another three days to go "flaming awful June" had, by yesterday, established itself as the wettest since 1971. In London, all but two of the last 22 days have brought at least a shower.

Weathermen say that there are more to come in the next few days, although it may be drier in the South than in the North during the weekend.

The bookmakers William Hill are offering odds of 5-1 against anyone predicting the next 48-hour dry period in London. "We are hoping not to soak the punters," said a spokesman. "Optimistic customers are placing bets on a dry weekend."

The rain and cold have hit farming. Most crops, including strawberries, are two to three weeks behind, although growers say that they should still be plentiful.

Waterlogged ground has prevented machines from harvesting new potatoes which in some Eastern areas are reported to be rotting in the soil. Rain has also battered down tall cereal crops, some of which may have been permanently damaged.

About 3,000 championship racing pigeons, including three from the Queen's lofts in Norfolk, have been stranded at Ledwick in the Shetland Islands after bad weather halted the start of the 500-mile King's Cup Race, better known as the "Pigeon Derby."

YOUNG KILLER DRIVER GIVEN JAIL REPRIEVE

A teenage motorist whose reckless driving killed a 15-year-old girl just three weeks after he passed his test was shown mercy by Judge John Slack at Aylesbury Crown Court yesterday.

Dawn Pullman, of Goodlake Court, Denham, Bucks, died after John Wakefield, 18, lost control of his car in Slough, as he showed off to her and four other teenage passengers. Wakefield, of Uxbridge Road, Slough, denied causing death by reckless driving but was convicted by a jury.

Sentencing him to 200 hours of community service instead of imprisonment and banning him from driving for five years, the Judge told him: "I think you were in a sense like a child with a newt toy. Pnfortunately for you and particularly for Dawn and her family it proved to be a letahal toy."

TRAVEL FIRM FAILS

About 800 holidaymakers have been hit by the collapse of Kramer Travel, of Maldon Road, Colchester, Essex, with debts of £100,000. Barry Belsham, 36, the managing director, is believed to have gone to Switzerland after drawing £6,500 from the firm's account on Thursday.

The Earl of Stockton, 91, Chancellor of Oxford University, arriving for yesterday's annual honorary degree ceremony. He has been Chancellor since 1960.

HINDUS AND SIKHS CLASH AT SERVICE

By ERIC DOWD in Toronto

SCUFFLES broke out between Hindus and Sikhs at an inter-faith memorial service in Toronto for the 329 people killed in an Air India jet believed to have been destroyed by a bomb near Ireland at the weekend.

Two Sikhs are supected of having planted the bomb and another which exploded the same day in Toyko and is believed to have been intended to destroy a second Air India jet.

A Hindu priest told a crowd of about 500 that the jet disaster was an act of terrorism, criminal and inhumane. He also criticised those "threatening to divide mother India."

Sikhs protested against the priest's comments, and Hindus screamed "Murderers!" at Sikhs until police separated the groups.

'How it was done'

The two Sikh suspects, Lal Singh and Ammand Singh, are wanted concerning an alleged Sikh plot to kill the Indian Prime Minister, Mr Gandhi, on a visit to the United States.

Air India officials have confirmed that an L. Singh and an A. Singh were booked on the Canadian Pacific jet which carried to Tokyo a bomb that exploded and killed two baggage handlers.

The pair were also booked to transfer to an Air India flight from Tokyo, and it is suspected they got a bomb on the Air India flight to London in someone else's luggage and sent the second in luggage under their own names to Tokyo en route to Bombay.

It is thought that if the Tokyo bomb had exploded two hurs later, two Air India jets would have been blown up at almost the same time on opposite sides of the world.

Race-row head relaxes after confidence vote

By JOHN IZBICKI Education Correspondent

MR RAY HONEYFORD, Bradford's race row headmaster, looked completely relaxed yesterday for the first time in months, following Tuesday night's vote of confidence in him by a special three-day board of inquiry.

"You have no idea how undignified it feels to be suspended from your job and how awful it feels to receive ratepayers' money for sitting on your bum," he said.

Mr Honeyford, 51, was suspended from the headship of Drummond Middle School in April following a no-confidence resolution by the education schools sub-committee.

He wrote an article in a Right-wing journal in which he maintained that English children who were in a predominantly black school would become the ethnic minority and be disadvantaged in language and other lessons. He also said that pupils from Asian backgrounds were also disadvantaged by parents who took them to India or Pakistan for prolonged holidays during term time.

These views sparked off a campaign by the race lobby that tried to hound him out of his £15,000-a-year job.

'Walking and walking

"I have just finished painting the outside of the house and I couldn't find any more odd jobs to do inside. I was feeling completely at a loss. I spent my time walking and walking.

"New I just want toget back to school and do my job unmolested," he said.

"I have been inundated with calls from well-wishes, many of them professional colleagues. The phone hasn't stopped," said Mr Honeyford.

His supporters were busy yesterday trying to persuade the Tory-controlled authority to reinstate him as quickly as possible, following Tuesday's "verdict" from the 11-strong board of governors (out of 18, four Left-wingers boycotted the proceedings and three were absent).

Mr Honeyford's union, the National Association of Head Teachers, wants to meet Mr Norman Roper, Bradford's assistant director of education.

Mr David Hart, general secretary of the NAHT, said yesterday: "We won't need more than 24 hours to prepare for a meeting with Mr Roper. I shall put to him that, in my view, the result of the governors' inquiry means that Mr Honeyford should be reinstated as quickly as possible."

Final decision

Should he be sacked, Mr Honeyford may still appeal. This would be heard by a panel of thre Bradford councillors who have had no previous connection with the case. Only this panel would have the power to overturn Mr Roper's final decision.

According to Councillor Eric Pickles, education committee chairman, any other result than complete vindication of Mr Honeyford would have been a "slap in the face of justice."

Mr Honeyford's opponents are still after his blood and demand his instant dismissal, cleamin gthat the governors were biased in his favour and insisting that he is a "racist."

Job prospects better for graduates

By MARGOT NORMAN Education Staff

JOB prospects for graduates are now markedly better than at the start of the year, with 20 per cent of vacancies still unfilled and waiting for this summer's crop of new graduates, the three main graduate employment bodies announced yesterday.

Compared with a year ago, graduate unemployment is down about two per cent (to 9·5 per cent.), and starting salaries have picked up well. The overall average is now about £7,200, having moved slightly ahead of inflation, with pay for those going into industry considerably higher than that average.

Combined message

A combined message from AGCAS (Association of Graduate Careers Advisory Services), CSU (Central Services Unit for Careers and Appointments Services) and SCOEG (Standing Conference of Employers of Graduates) yesterday sounded the most optimistic note for years.

The message is heartening for graduates in all subjects, not just the high-demand ones like electronics. The three bodies stressed that about one-third of employers are taking on graduates in any discipline.

They are also looking for "personal skills" as much as for academic aptitude, and are taking careful note of what students do in their spare time for a clue to these skills.

"We are very pleased to hear it confirmed that the activities, clubs and societies organised through student unions help to set students up for life," commented the National Union of Students.

"The employers clearly recognise that. We only wish the Education Secretary would recognise it, too, instead of attacking student unions as he did in the higher education green paper."

There was one serious note of warning, though. The number of graduates in mathematics and science going into teacher training si dropping sharply.

These are already shortage subjects, and unless steps are taken to tempt mathematics science graduates into teaching, the school standards will drop, and industry will be even more desperate than at present about the lack of technical high-flyers.

MoD LOSES HIPPIES BATTLE

By LIN JENKINS

EFFORTS by the Ministry of Defence to evict up to 1,000 hippies from land above the White Horse monument at Westbury, Wiltshire, failed yesterday on a technicality after a three-day High Court hearing.

Mr Justice Hutchison said: "I refuse to make the order with regret, because I have been unable to detect even the beginnings of an argument which would pustify the occupation of the land by those presently occupying it."

The MoD's action had failed because it had referred to persons unknown and had omitted to name as defendants six hippies those names were known to the MoD.

However, the judge granted a possession order to English Heritage, which owns part of the Stone Age site.

An English Heritage spokesman commented: "We could effect the order, but they would only have to move to the parts owned by the MoD, which would be pointless. We intend to wait until the MoD sort out their problems and re-apply to the court."

The judge had been told that a lot of damage had been done by people digging latrines and lighting fires at the Stone Age site. He told the victorious hippies: "I hope those who are in occupation will refrain from any act which will cause damage or spoil the amenity value of the area."

However, the hippies, part of the "peace convoy" which gathered on the site after being prevented from going to Stonehenge for a midsummer pop festival, are planning to move on next week anyhow.

MILITARY CAMP REPRIEVED

There was relief among Brecon and Radnor Tories last night when Mr Hesseltine announced the partial reprieve of the Cwrt-y-Gollen military camp at Crickhowell. He said the barracks would be retained for training purposes and would provide a Teritorial Army centre for a hospital detachment to save the cost of building one elsewhere.

Inquiry into CND death throws out conspiracy theories

By CHARLES LAURENCE

THERE is "not one shred" of evidence that British Intelligence was involved in the death of Miss Hilda Murrell, an anti-nuclear campaigner found murdered near her home in Shrewsbury, an independent police inquiry concluded yesterday.

Miss Hilda Murrell: British Intelligence cleared of involvement in her murder.

Another theory, that the 78-year-old was killed by a private detective investigating opponents of nuclear power, was also dismissed.

The inquiry was called by West Mercia Police after allegations of cover-ups and incompetence in their investigations.

The report is to remain confidential while the murder inquiry continues but he outlined his findings at a press conference at West Mercia police headquarters yesterday.

Rose grower

Miss Murrell, a respected rose grower, died on March 21 last year from exposure after being stabbed and dumped in a wood.

The death triggered a number of theories, including one from Mr Tam Dalyell, the Labour MP who has questioned the Government's motives for sinking the Belgrano during the Falklands War.

Miss Murrell was a veteran supporter of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament who was actively campaigning against the Sizewell B power station project.

Mr Dalyell suggested that she died because British Intelligence, investigating Government leaks concerning the Belgrano sinking, wrongly believed that she was holding papers for her nephew, Navy Commander Rob Green, who had been at naval HQ during the conflict.

Bag of worms

During the 10-week police inquiry, Mr Smith said he interviewed the "highest echelons" of the Intelligence services. He spent three hours with Mr Dalyell, who had not named his source, and had not been able to persuade his source to talk to the police.

Mr Smith said: "This is probably one of the most bizarre murders I have come across. I agree that there are many coincidences and it looks like a bag of worms. But when held up to the light, there is not a shred of evidence that British Intelligence was involved."

The second theory emerged when it was discovered that a firm of private detectives had been hired by an undisclosed "corporate employer," to investigate opponents of the Sizewell B. One detective, Mr Barrie Peachman committed suicide shortly after Miss Murrell's death.

This led to the theory that Mr Peachman had been caught searching her home, had panicked and killed her, then suffered intolerable remorse.

Mr Smith said yesterday that Mr Peachman had been proved to have been with three other people far from Shrewsbury at the time of the death.

His agency had been involved in the Sizewell B investigation in January 1983, while Miss Murrell had become involved in the planning inquiry only in August 1983. Mr Smith had seen the list of targets and Miss Murrell was not on it.

Mr Smith made three criticisms of West Mercia's handling of the case: that they failed to find Miss Murrell's body for three days, hampering the initial investigations; that there was failings in checking the alleged connection with Mr Peachman; and that the police should have handled media speculation over the affair more firmly, with a single senior officer answering all inquiries to ensure consistency.

Official's error

The report shows that after Miss Murrell's car was found at a roadside, an inexperienced officer was sent to her house. Despite finding the lights on and a door open he did not become suspicious or look inside.

The alarm was raised the next day after another officer found signs of burglary and a struggle.

Mr Tony Mullett, West Mercia Chief Constable, said: "I accept these criticisms and regret them. But it comforts me to think that a totally independent officer of great experience has found only these areas to criticise."

The report is not being published because the burder inquiry continues.

NELSON WREATH FOR MUSEUM

A wreath of flowers made by Lady Hamilton, apparently from her own hair and that of her famous lover, Lord Nelson, is to be given to the National Maritime Museum at Greenwich. The bequest comes from a leading figure in the acting world, Mr Aelwyn Howard-Williams, of Lyme Regis, Dorset, who died on March 26.

Mr Howard-Williams was a principal instructor at RADA and a world authority on period costumes and manners. In his will, published yesterday, he left estate valued at £68,285 gross, £67,115 net.

Platinum – a unique investment

Platinum is one of the rarest metals on earth and one of the most valuable. It is produced in exceptionally small quantities and the total world output is only around 80 tonnes annually, compared with about 1,200 tonnes of gold.

Much of the platinum produced is used in a rapidly growing range of high technology applications and a significant proportion is made into jewellery. Consequently the metal is always in demand. It is also a readily tradeable commodity.

Now Johnson Matthey platinum bars are available to the private investor.

Of course, like any other investment, the value of platinum can fall as well as rise, particularly in the short term. But the price in sterling has nearly quadrupled during the past decade and over a similar period it has easily outperformed inflation, too.

Johnson Matthey platinum bars are produced in eight sizes up to 10oz troy, each one being individually numbered.

You can take possession of the bars in the UK, in which case VAT must be charged. Alternatively, they can be held in safe keeping at our vaults in Jersey or Zurich, in which case no VAT is payable on the value of the bars.

Should you wish to sell your bars we guarantee to repurchase them at any time. For full information on Johnson Matthey platinum bars, and an application form, simply complete and send the coupon by Freepost.

RENEWED weakness in the electrical sector, where Thorn E M I came under fire following a profits downgrading by stockbrokers Scrimgeour, further undermined the overall tone in London stock markets yesterday.

Growing nervousness on the part of small investors was reflected in increased profit-taking on the "bird in the hand" theory and, with the traumatic trading account drawing to a close, buyers were few and far between. A notable exception was Allied Lyons, which ended 10 higher at 222p on vague suggestions of important expansion moves, perhaps involving a takeover offer for Ranks Hovis McDougall. Although dealers were sceptical about this gossip, Rank Hovis shares improved 4 to 154p.

Speculative holders of Thorn E M I, who had taken up positions against the background of takeover suggestions, were aghast at the adverse brokers' circular and the Thorn price plunged to 370p before closing 36 down on the day at 378p.

Plessey shares plumbed a new low of 120p, but subsequent cheap buying brought a rally to 124p, a net loss of only 2, but a number of hi-tech stocks remained on offer, with Micro Focus 20 down at 185p, Applied Computer Techniques, 25 lower at 120p, and Atlantic Computers 15 off at 315p.

The rise in Allied-Lyons was a minor saving grace for the main market indices, but there was little sign of recovery in other leading issues. The "30" Share Index finished at the worst of the day down 15·6 at 936·5, its lowest level since January 4, when it was 928·7. The "100" Index ended 11·8 off at 1236·5, after 1234·3.

Racal Electronics, which upset the market on Tuesday with its first-half profit warning, remained friendless and fell 8 more to a new low of 148p. S T C were again on offer down to 124p, but a few brave buyers were taking the view that the recent sharp fall had been overdone, hence a modest rally to 128p, a net fall of 6.

In contrast to the drab conditions in equities, government securities maintained their poise throughout normal trading hours, albeit in a low volume of business.

Merchant banking group Schroders sprang to life in late dealings on further consideration of the link with a Japanese bank and closed 25 higher at 785p. Takeover speculators were in the market for Maynards, 25 up at 540p, and Chapman Industries, 10 better at 235p, while bid whispers were also heard in Glynwed, 5 better at 194p.

Following Tuesday's sharp fluctuations and net fall of 67 on profit-taking, Pentland Industries rallied to 975p, but reacted afresh to 928p before closing 25 down on the day at 935p.

The results from Cable & Wireless were much in line with market expectations, but the shares suffered from the general weakness in electricals and ended 20 down at 495p, after 485p. In similar circumstances, Ferranti closed 5 down at 112p, after 104p, in the wake of their results.

Dealers were impressed with the excellent interim report from Morgan Holdings, hence a rise of 4 to 222p, after 224p, in the company's share price. Other statements to bring share price gains came from Birmingham Mint, 7 up at 240p, Braithwaite Engineering, 6 better at 132p, and Eldridge Pope, 5 firmer at 204p.

Pending the outcome of the Strasbourg court hearing on the companies' compensation claims, traders in Vickers and Vosper were unnerved by deteriorating market conditions. In the event, sellers left Vickers 12 down at 258p and Vosper 37 lower at 220p. Other recent favourites to meet profit-taking were Siebe, 20 down at 620p, and T I Group, 6 off at 252p.

The insurance section remained in the doldrums, although losses were usually limited to around 5p. Exceptionally, Abbey Life, the recent new issue, maintained a firm appearance and ended 2 better at 228p, compared with he offer price of 180p.

In line with the overall pattern concerning the liquidation of speculative positions, Debenhams and Burton Group were under increased pressure. Debenhams were finally 22 down at 360p and Burton 12 lower at 444p. Elsewhere in stores, Great Universal "A" dropped 14 to 750p and Boots 7 to 181p. Adverse Press comment brought weakness in Sumrie Clothes, which ended 16 down at 28p.

Final prices for leading oil shares showed little notable alteration, but British Petroleum rallied from 520p to close only marginally easier at 523p following the announcement of a gas find. "Shell" Transport, a good market late on Tuesday, rose afresh to 705p before closing 2 better at 700p.

Gold shares trended easier on lack of investment interest, but bullion closed 75 cents firmer at $317·25.

Tailpiece

WE HAVE received a number of requests for an up-date on our old speculative favourite, Barker & Dobson Group, the confectionary company. Originally recommended here at 6½p, the shares have had their ups and downs over recent years as hopes for a revival in trading fortunes met with disappointments.

Early in May, the market price advanced to around 15p on interest created by the appointment of John Fletcher as chairman and chief executive of the group. Mr Fletcher, the former Asda Stores managing director, has a very challenging new job on his hands since Barker & Dobson's annual figures, announced last week, proved even worse than expected — pre-tax losses totalled £2·8 million, against the expected figure of £1·5 million.

Some of our readers took profits in the May run-up and now seek advice on whether to buy back at the current 9¾p. New management cannot work miracles overnight, but the group could be restored to health on the longer-term and the shares seem a reasonable speculation.

BP finds gas off Ireland

A GAS discovery by British Petroleum, almost 14 miles off Cork, yesterday provided a badly-needed boost to Irish hopes of further discoveries in the area.

BP described the find in block 48/18 as "encouraging," a clear indication that the group is confident further exploration will produce a commercial discovery.

The find, under 300 feet of waterwater, is 17½ miles from the Kinsale gas field. Gas flowed at the rate of 13·7 million cubic feet a day during tests

BP has a 20 p.c. stake in the operating consortium.

Trafalgar oil deal

TRAFALGAR House is paying $26·5m (£20·4m) to increase its oil holdings in the United States with the purchase of around nine million barrels of proved oil reserves in the Spraberry Field in Texas from USENCO.

The deal includes working interests in more than 500 producing wells and significant undeveloped acreage and royalty interests. Over the past 15 months Trafalgar House Oil and Gas based in Houston has been a partner in 100 wells drilled in Texas, Louisiana and the Gulf Coast.

C & W up 29pc

A 29 P.C. INCREASE in pre-tax profits is reported by Cable & Wireless for the year to March 31, 1985, with the figure up from £190m to £245m.

The dividend is lifted 20 p.c. from 6·5p to 7·8p with a 4·9p final, payable Oct. 1. The dividend is covered 4·1 times (3·8 times) by earnings.

Ferranti ahead

ELECTRONICS group Ferranti increased full year profits to March 31 by 19 p.c. before tax to £46m. Turnover rose 26 p.c. to £567·9m with the strongest performance from electronics reflecting a large backlog of orders.

The final goes up from 0·88p net on Sept. 19 to 1·04p for an 18 p.c. increase in the total to 1·56p.

Suter lifts stake

DAVID ABELL'S Suter has again raised its stake in foundry group F. H. Lloyd and now owns 22·85 p.c. of the shares.

Lloyd took the unusual step of saying it believes Suter wants to acquire control and said shareholders would be "ill-advised" to sell at current prices.

The shares rose 1p to 60½p.

Stormgard buys

STORMGARD, Jennifer d'Abo's vehicle in her bid for Selincourt, has started buying its target's shares in the market. The group, which claimed effective control of 41·3 p.c. of Selincourt's equity last Friday, paid up to 30p a share for 3·9 p.c. of the fashion wear and fabric group's equity on Tuesday. This compares with the 31·2p-a-share value attached to Stormgard's paper offer and 29p, down ¾, for Selincourt shares in the market yesterday.

The offer is due to close on Friday.

Royal paying £94m cash for Lloyd's Life

By MICHAEL BECKET

ROYAL INSURANCE yesterday emerged as the winner in the contest to take over Lloyd's Life Assurance with a bid of £94 million cash. In February, Lloyd's announced the intention to sell its life assurance company for around £100 million and after a month it had drawn up a shortlist of six acceptable bidders.

Royal chief executive Alan Horsford yesterday said: "It has been one of Royal's strategic aims to put greater emphasis on the development of our life assurance operations." The purchase represents "one of a series of moves for the development of life business" and related activities like unit trusts.

Peter Miller, chairman of Lloyd's, said the price was close to the upper limit of the range expected. Lloyd's has held the life company's shares in trust for the membership and the proceeds will be counted as part of their capital gains in the next set of accounts, which in the three-year lag of Lloyd's accounting will be for the 1983 underwriting year.

Lloyd's Life was started in 1971, and since 1975 its new premium income has grown at 55 p.c. a year, reaching £103·4 million in the year to end — September last. Its life and annuity funds have grown to over £300 million.

The surplus for the year 1983-84 was £2·5 million but that was after the cost of around £500,000 of moving the company to Peterborough. During the current year the surplus is expected by Royal to be around £4·5 million with the historic growth rates continuing.

At the start of 1981 Royal raised £116 million through a rights issue to fund acquisitions, and since then it has made four purchases: two property-casualty companies in America, a reinsurance business and a Spanish insurance company, but it failed to make the planned life company takeovers.

At present only about an eighth of Royal's premium income comes from life business. Much of Lloyd's Life "is in product lines or from areas where our life company Royal Life is not at present active," said Mr Horsford. So the combined resources "will provide a wider base for continued expansion of our life operations".

The plan is to grow in life assurance not just in Britain, but also in America, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, all of which have some Royal life business already. A condition of the deal is that the purchased company changes its name but Royal has not yet decided on the new label.

Funds for the purchase are coming from existing cash resources and available banking facilities, the company said. With a solvency margin around 60 p.c. Royal reckons to be able to afford the deal.

The Royal acquisition comes hard on the heels of Prudential Corporation buying the life offshoot of the troubled Insurance Corporation of Ireland. General insurance companies and banks have also indicated an interest in getting a share of the remunerative market, and this has been intensified following the British government move to phase out earnings-related pensions.

Lloyd's chief sees at least £50m profit

By MICHAEL BECKET

LLOYD'S will report a profit of at least £50 million later this year, said chairman Peter Miller yesterday, when he announced an investigation into why the PCW syndicates plunged into the red so deeply in the past year that losses are now put at £130 million, after the £40 million stolen had been repaid.

His profit forecast is in sharp contrast to the £70 million losses expected by some observers on the results of syndicates reporting earlier, and in the light of insurers' results elsewhere in the world the outcome is "satisfactory," Mr Miller said.

A "very severe crisis" in international insurance means "we face a storm rising to whirlwind which has destroyed, particularly in America, more than a few insurance institutions," and may destroy or cripple many more, he added.

He instanced the loss by the top ten United Kingdom composites and by the giant Munich Reinsurance while Swiss Reinsurance has withdrawn from American casualty business.

But he was shocked when told of the heavy loss from "shatteringly bad underwriting" at the PCW syndicates. "I think the names are entitled to know why the position has deteriorated so dramatically in the past year, so although there is no evidence of malfeasance by the syndicates' current managers, Lloyd's is setting up a factfinding inquiry".

Raymond Pettitt, chairman of Minet Holdings, the subsidiary of which has managed PCW, said in view of the background, publicity and pressure created on Lloyd's such an inquiry was understandable and Minet would co-operate with it.

But Mr Miller made it clear there is no question of a financial lifeboat for the PCW members, and if they do not pay their liabilities they will be suspended from Lloyd's. The Sasse syndicates which were rescued by Lloyd's some years ago presents "no precedent at all."

Lloyd's is confident the director of public prosecutions will take the necessary action and, Mr Miller said, "I hope it won't be too long delayed," before the criminals involved in the many Lloyd's scandals are brought to justice.

Despite the adverse publicity on fraud and losses the numbers applying to join is 20 p.c. higher than this time last year and with exusting members increasing premium limits, the capacity of Lloyd's will again increase by about 30 p.c. this year. Resignations are only 143 compared with 164 at this time last year.

FNFC dividends hope

BID favourite First National Finance Corporation yesterday reported a rise from £7·7 million to £9·12 million in profits for the six months to end-April, 1985—and repeated an earlier promise of a resumption of dividend payments.

First National, which had to be rescued by a consortium of major banks ten years ago, has now paid off all support group loans and would therefore be in a position to pay a dividend immediately if it chose.

Chairman Richard Langdon made it clear yesterday that the company prefers to wait until the annual results before making a final decision. He hinted that the dividend will be "reasonable."

The rise in profits is due mainly to bouyant conditions in the company's traditional consumer finance operations. Profits of the consumer credit arm, First National Securities, rose by 40 p.c. to £8·7 million at the trading level.

First National is understood to have increased its consumer loan portfolio by around £50 million over the six-month period in response to booming demand.

First National paid no tax at the interim stage because of the huge tax losses available from the days when it had to be rescued.

Argentine directive dampens Wall Street

By LAUREN CHAMBLISS in Washington

The Dow closed 0·78 higher at 1325·81.

Reports circulating in New York *that federal banking regu*lators ordered United States banks to adopt conservative accounting procedures on Arg*entine loans, an action that* could lead to lower bank earnings, sparked the bank share declines.

Although there was some uncertainty surrounding the confidential directive from United States government bank regulators, it is believed that the new accounting rules will force banks to use interest payments received from Argentina to establish loan-loss reserves against loans to the country.

Government banking officials periodically review the creditworthiness of the countries to which United States banks have lent money, but this is the first time regulators have taken such action against the loans from a major debtor nation.

On Tuesday commercial credit customers withdrew several million dollars in deposits in spite of assurances

ALMOST all the gains in share prices achieved earlier this year have now been eradicated. Falling 15·6 points yesterday the FT 30 share index closed at 936·5, its lowest level since January 3.

Of immediate concern is the fate of two large equity issues. By 3 pm on Monday, shareholders in English China Clays have to decide whether to subscribe £86·3-million cash for new shares priced at 220p. But yesterday English China Clays were trading at 218p, indicating the possibility of an under-subscription and, therefore, a call upon the underwriters of the issue.

Three days after English China Clays' issue shareholders in Hanson Trust are due to respond to their company's call for £519 mil*lion of new money*, the biggest rights issue in the United Kingdom. New Ordinary shares are being offered at 185p, but the existing shares were trading last night below that level, closing at 180p. Again the underwriters must prepare to do their duty.

It is also worth noting that Burton Group has secured underwriting at 435p a share for its Debenham's takeover offer.

In these circumstances, it can be no surprise that the investment institutions, including the underwriters, pension funds and insurance companies, have become unwilling to enter into fresh commitments. And when they hang back from the stockmarket, prices tend to decline faster.

The weakness among electrical, engineering and electronics shares started the slide. Racal's comments on the immediate future earlier this week confirmed that the sector faces tough trading conditions. And adding to the weakness of the stock market yesterday was a bearish circular on Thorn EMI by stockbrokers Scimgeour. Nor does a glance across the Atlantic, where IBM is predicting flat profits, help to encourage British investors in high technology issues.

Political factors, too, are less than favourable at the moment with the Government failing to inspire confidence. The City can also see that Mrs Thatcher's two rivals, Messrs Kinnock and Owen, are beginning to gain credibility. And although the Chancellor of the Exchequer may be right to maintain high interest rates, equities suffer by comparison.

CITY COMMENT

Stock markets begin to lose confidence

Bank lending races ahead

HOPES were high in the City yesterday that details of bank lending over the past three months would confirm that monetary conditions have been distorted by special factors, thus enabling the authorities to take a more relaxed view of interest rate prospects.

As suspected, the figures published by the Bank of England reveal that demand for credit has been artificially boosted by companies rushing to take advantage of generous tax allowances on leased assets before the end of the financial year.

Lending to financial companies, particularly leasing companies, raced ahead in the three months to May, with advances rising by £1·7 billion or 11 p.c. On the leasing-side alone lending rose by £1·2 billion or 25 p.c., prompting the bank to describe the increase as "exceptional."

Sadly, hard evidence of an unusually large build-up of company borrowing has failed to persuade the authorities that underlying conditions on the monetary front are satisfactory. Credit conditions remain inexplicably buoyant and there is no case for dropping one's guard as far as interest rates are concerned.

Overall, the analysis of bank advances shows that the personal sector remains active, with banks lending an extra £1·2 billion or 3 p.c. to their personal customers. Roughly half the money lent to personal customers went towards buying houses, with the rest accounted for by consumer loans and extended overdraft facilities.

Loans to central and local government rose by a surprising £263 million or 15 p.c. between February and May, while demand for credit from the service sector and agriculture was also strong.

The only major area of slack, according to the figures, was in lending to manufacturing which increased by just 1 p.c. The Bank notes that there was a big fall in loans made to electrical and electronic engineering companies dur*ing the quarter*.

Statistical black hole

WANTED by the authorities: any *information on a missing £10 bil*lion of financial assets Britain's companies acquired last year without telling anybody.

This extraordinary sum — equivalent to more than a quarter of the funds raised internally and *from borrowing, represents the un*identified gap between recorded company income and spending in the official statistics.

According to a special pre-released article in today's Bank of England QUARTERLY BULLETIN, the company sector ran a record £9·5 billion financial surplus last year.

Profits for both North Sea and non-North Sea companies leapt by 22 p.c. The real pre-tax rate of return for companies outside the North Sea sector, at nearly 7 p.c., was the highest since the heady Barber boom days of 1973.

Here is the puzzle. Companies have indeed stepped up investment, but by nowhere near the increase in profits — hence the record financial surplus. Yet they borrowed massively from the banking system to the tune of over £7 billion.

At the sametime the financial transactions identified in the statistics add up to a tiny increase of £200 million in net liabilities. Somewhere £10 billion in asset purchases has gone missing.

The Bank comes up with three suggestions on what has been happening, but concedes that the first two — overstatement of profits and underestimating investment and stockbuilding — could not realistically explain more than a fraction of the discrepancy.

*The third suggestion is more in*teresting. This is that companies have been extending substantial amounts of trade credit, which is not well picked up in the statistics, as a profitable use of idle cash balances.

Another area of uncertainty, the Bank says, is direct and portfolio investment abroad, where the abolition of exchange controls has *made collecting accurate informa*tion more difficult at the same time as rapid innovation in international financial markets has made it easier for companies to put money abroad.

A statistical black hole of this size makes it virtually impossible to interpret what companies are up to. The special investigation now being mounted by the Bank and the Central Statistical Office may not leave us much the wiser.

Westland appoints Cuckney chairman

SIR Basil Blackwell, 63, who became chairman of Westland in February, yesterday decided to "take early retirement" and resigned from the board. The company immediately announced his successor as Sir John Cuckney, 60 next month, chairman of Thomas Cook and John Brown.

Westland was on the receiving end of an unwanted bid by Bristow, withdrawn at the last moment a week ago, leaving the troubled helicopter maker searching for an alternative partner and backer. It has also begun an investigation to discover whether Bristow's claims of financial problems are justified.

In the last accounts, when Sir Basil was vice-chairman, he received a salary of £77,000 and his contract ran until September 1987.

The company's share price rose 10p last night to 83p.

Pharmaceutical jobs warning

A WARNING that jobs in the pharmaceutical industry will be lost to Britain because of the inadequate return on manufacturing investment allowed by National Health Service pricing comes from Robert Gunn, chairman of The Boots Company.

Mr Gunn, writing in the annual report, says: "The further severe reduction in the allowed return on capital to a level which is quite insufficient for a high risk, research-based industry must be expected to have a serious impact on the level of investment by pharmaceutical companies in this country."

He says that Boots pharmaceutical interests had a good year, the gains coming from overseas. "But the future is uncertain because of government policies in many countries."

The full accounts disclose that the pay of the chairman increased by 25 p.c. from £99,000 to £124,000. The chairman during the trading year was Dr Peter Main who retired on March 31, 1985.

Rotork £17·5m for Protech

TWO men who helped found an instrument-making company 13 years ago because they feared redundancy yesterday sold Protech to Rotork, the valve control producer, in a deal that could be worth £17·5 million.

The executives, Dr Brian Cook, 41, chairman of Protech and Arthur Mead, 50, managing director, who formerly worked for Kent Instruments, get an initial £8·6 million in cash and shares and plan to share part of the benefits with the 80 employees of the Luton-based process control business.

Dr Cook and Mr Mead will keep 2·5 million of the shares and the balance were placed in the market by merchant bankers Robert Fleming through Rowe & Pitman for 114p, a 6p discount on the opening price, providing £5·6 million cash for the duo.

Further payments up to a total of £17·5 million will be based on Protech's net pre-tax profit performance up to Dec. 31, 1990. Dr Cook and Mr Mead will initially have just under 10 p.c. stake in Rotork and could increase their holding to a combined 15 p.c.

Britoil stake for Continental investors

By ROLAND GRIBBEN

A SIZEABLE tranche of the Government's 48 p.c. stake in Britoil will be sold to Continental investors, principally in West Germany, Holland and Switzerland, when the shares are offered for sale, probably next month.

The United States has been ruled out of the marketing exercise because of the complications and problems involved in preparing all the documentation.

But Lazard Brothers, the merchant bankers handling the sale for the government, denied the Continental move was being made because of worries about the success of a flotation overshadowed by worries about oil prices.

A spokesman said: "We don't need to go abroad but we have had people falling over themselves to get hold of the stock on the Continent. We haven't made a decision on what proportion will be sold abroad."

Market estimates are that about 20 p.c. of the total issue could find its way across the channel with the Swiss Banking Corporation masterminding the operation. Decisions have yet to be made about whether to offer some of the stock to Japanese investors.

The overseas sale is the second to be mounted for a state issue. The first, the massive British Telecom sale, has seen US investors quickly bailing out while Japanese stockholders have largely held on to their stake.

The domestic marketing exercise is gathering pace. Promotional advertising is now under way, emphasising the international nature of the group and discussions with institutions are starting shortly.

Burton to extend Debenhams offer

BURTON Group is expected to announce this morning that it had received virtually no acceptances for its Debenhams offer by yesterday's first closing date and has decided to extend its terms for another fortnight.

Debenhams' shares were down 22p to 360p but still well above Burton's share swap deal worth 316½p a share or £443 million with its own shares falling 8p to 448p.

Burton may not have picked up stock but House of Fraser has edged its holding up to 8·13 p.c. with Sir Philip Harris and Gerald Ronson each believed to have just under 5 p.c.

WITHOUT OUR ADVICE, YOUR NEXT ACQUISITION MAY NEVER TAKE OFF.

It is clear that company acquisitions are an excellent way to achieve rapid growth. But there are attendant risks; many of the acquisitions in this country are later regarded as failures by the acquiring management.

Clearly, unbiased and expert advice would be a real help.

Ideally, this advice should come early in the acquisitions process—perhaps even before you decide on whether to go for acquisitions as a means for growth.

Deloitte Haskins & Sells can provide that advice. Our Corporate Finance Division can help you establish acquisition criteria, undertake searches and short-listing, approach existing owners, value the businesses, determine tax implications, structure offers and negotiate the purchase agreement.

Because we are not only one of Britain's leading accountancy firms, but leading management consultants too, we can cover marketing, distribution and production, as well as finance. We look at every aspect thoroughly. As a result, our in depth reviews of acquisition targets are exceptionally professional.

All this will reduce the risk in company acquisitions. We're able to work fast, and you will gain access to our national and international network.

If you don't want your next acquisition to go down like the proverbial lead balloon, complete the coupon now. We will send you a brochure and arrange for an informal, no commitment, meeting at your convenience.

Or telephone John Hargreaves now on 01-248 3913.

Sapphire was incorporated in April, 1981 to provide investors with access to a broad spread of US oil and gas exploration and production opportunities. Sapphire has properties in Colorado, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, Oklahoma, Texas and Wyoming and has interests in 113 producing wells. As a result of a period of successful exploration, Sapphire has begun the appraisal and development of 16 fields or field extensions which have been discovered. In addition, Sapphire will continue to pursue an active programme of exploration, and its policy is to maintain a balanced range of prospects.

The application lists will open at 10.00 a.m. on 2nd July, 1985 and may be closed at any time thereafter.

COMPANIES

Stockley in £16m deal with P&O

FAST-DEVELOPING Stoockley yesterday formed a joint company with P&O, each side putting in £8 million, to take a long lease to redevelop Beaufort House on the fringe of the City.

The former P&O headquarters has 170,000 sq. ft of lettable space but "the site is said to be capable of supporting a substantial new office building in excess of 200,000 sq. ft."

A G Barr

TIMING delays in advertising expenditure and costs of installation of machinery totalling some £250,000 benefited A. G. Barr in the opening half but this temporary shortfall will be reversed in the second half.

Pre-tax profits for the period are up from £655,000 to £1·54m, struck after rationalisation costs of around £100,000, but the board warns that trading since the end of April has been disappointing.

There is a same again interim dividend of 1·75p on Aug. 9 from earnings of 14·35p (7·19p).

Brickhouse Dudley

PRE-TAX profits of Brickhouse Dudley rose from £919,000 to £1·71m in the year to March 31 despite static turnover of £37·1m. Earnings are 2·42p ahead at 6·58p and the dividend total is lifted from 3·2p to 3·45p with a 2·5p final.

Birmingham Mint

ON TURNOVER more than than doubled from £10·7m to £25·5m, Birmingham Mint's pre-tax profits recovered strongly from £554,000 to £957,000 in the year to March 30. Earnings come out at 28·6p (12·4p) and the dividend goes up a penny to 11·5p with a 8p final on Sept. 6.

Prospects for the current year appear more promising than at any time in the last few years, says the board.

An order for 500m coins, the largest in the group's history, has been received from the government of India. The contract extends until March 1986 with a sales value of some £12m.

BPB Industries

THE slowdown in the British construction industry hit BPB Industries in the closing months of 1984-85, for profits dipped from £43m to £38·2m. This leaves the full year pre-tax outturn some £1·1m lower at £38·6m, desnite turnover £56·2m ahead at £564·5m.

A higher tax charge means earnings are down from 29p to 25·1p but the total dividend rises from 7p to 7·7p with a 4·6p (4·2p) final on Aug 16.

Glass Glover

GLASS GLOVER Group, the fruit and vegetable distributor, has met its profits forecast—made at the time of May's £2·5m acquisition of Louis Reece—with a 15·5 p.c. rise in opening half pre-tax profits to £752,000 (£651,000). Turnover was unchanged at £50·9m.

There is an interim dividend of 1·6p (1·375p), payable Sept. 30, on the capital as increased by the one-for-three £7·53m rights issue in March. Earnings were 4·62p (4·12p).

London & Midland

LONDON & Midland Industrials, the industrial holding company that recently failed with bids for Hoskins & Horton and Allied Textile Companies, has met its revised forecast profits forecast for 1984-85 with £7·75m against £5·02m pre-tax, and is lifting the dividend 19 p.c. with a 5·25p final making 9·5p for the year.

Morceau Holdings

DESPITE poor weather conditions, fire protection specialists Morceau Holdings achieved a good level of activity on all contracts in the half-year ended March 31. Pre-tax profits almost doubled from £677,000 to £1·31m on the back of turnover of £6·89m (£4·35m).

Earnings are up from 4·8p to 9·5p and the interim dividend is doubled to 1·2p, payable July 31.

Scantronic

ANOTHER record result is reported by Scantronic Holdings in its first full year on the unlisted securities market. Turnover is up from £1·64m to £2·55m, and pre-tax profits from £422,000 to £709,000.

Earnings come out at 6·5p (4·2p) and a 1·2p final dividend makes 1·9p (1p). Holders also get a three-for-one scrip and the 2p shares are being consolidated into shares of 10p each.

IN BRIEF

John Booth (Bolton): Full-year pre-tax profit £112,000 (£207,000). Turnover £10·7m (£11·2m). Eps 12·21p (15·89p); dividend 2p (same), pay Aug. 19.

Braithwaite Engineers: Full-year pre-tax profit £149,000 £356,000). Turnover £11·4m (£7·64m). Eps 3·6p (8·9p); final dividend 3·1p, pay July 31, making 9·1p (same).

Western Motor Holdings: Full-year pre-tax loss £475,000 (loss £755,000). Turnover £37·8m (£39·7m). Eps 21·11p (29·27p); no dividend (same).

Hardy & Hansons: First half pre-tax profit £1·46m (£1·29m). Turnover £9·02m (£8·28m). Interim dividend 5p (4·5p), pay Aug. 5. Trade generally similar to last year though recent bad weather has been unhelpful.

Eldridge, Pope & Co: First half pre-tax profit £939,000 (£749,000). Turnover £10·9m (£9·88m). Eps 7·1p (5·2p); interim dividend 2·4p (2·1p). Unlikely that momentum established during first half will be maintained during summer.

Oriflame in £14m retail move

ORIFLAME International, the Scandinavian direct-sale cosmetics and specialised mail-order group, with a London quotation, is moving into the retail jewellary market with the acquisition of a 90 p.c. stake in Guldfynd, Sweden's largest jewellery retailer, in a cash and loan notes deal worth £14·8 million.

Guldfynd, with 97 stores specialising in high quality jewellery claims about 30 p.c. of the market in Sweden but has produced disappointing results in recent years, partly as a result of a decline in the gold price and difficult consumer market conditions.

Oriflame, however, intends to speed up development of the company and plans 60 new stores in Finland and Norway.

Sapphire Petroleum set for USM

SAPPHIRE Petroleum, formed four years ago to over British investors access to United States oil and gas interests, is coming on to the unlisted securities market with an over of six million shares at 150p each.

The over puts a valuation of just under £32 million on the company which has interests in 113 producing wells and between 190p and 235p of net assets.

The company raised £10 million from mainly institutional shareholders when it was formed and £3 million from a rights issue two years ago. Stockbrokers Williams de the company to the USM.

Lander wins Windsor control

THE bitter fight for control of insurance brokers Windsor Securities ended yesterday with the effective boardroom takeover of the company on a vote which gave the new directors from private company Lander Securities the support of up to 56 p.c. of the Windsor equity.

Lander had started off with 14·9 p.c. of Windsor, backed by three large blocks of shares, taking the total to more than 45 p.c. In all, 78 shareholders voted for the resolutions and 284 voted against.

Windsor chairman Maurice Fullerton described the situation at the start of the meeting as "one of the most distasteful the City has seen for many years"

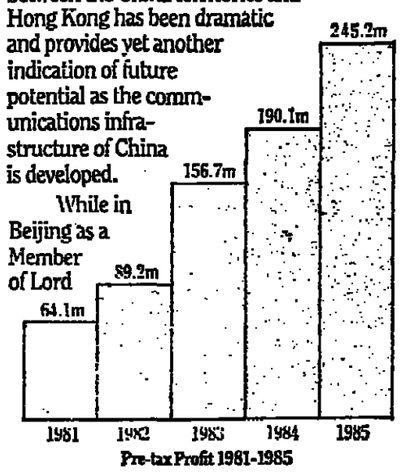
"STEADY, PLANNED, SUSTAINED GROWTH IN PROFIT."

"This is our fourth year since privatisation. I am pleased to announce record profits and turnover for the fourth successive year. Pre-tax profit increased by 29 per cent from £190 million to £245 million and turnover increased by 28% to £862 million.

This year has seen significant Group activity in the implementation of our global strategy. Investment expenditure was £262 million, of which £88 million was in the UK and £23 million in the United States.

The Far East, which now includes Hong Kong Telephone Company, continues to contribute substantial growth to Group revenue and profits. Telecommunication traffic between the mainland of China and Hong Kong is increasing dramatically. Hong Kong is now the principal destination for external calls from the southern provinces of China and from the Shanghai area. Much of the growth has resulted from the continuing number of joint projects which the Group undertakes such as the inauguration of direct dialling between Guangzhou, the provincial capital of Guangdong, on 20 August, 1984. The progress of our Shenda joint venture telephone company in Shenzhen, the largest of China's special economic zones, where direct dialling to and from Hong Kong was introduced on 10 December, 1984, also contributed to the growth. The increase in the volume of telecommunication use between the China territories and Hong Kong has been dramatic and provides yet another indication of future potential as the communications infrastructure of China is developed.



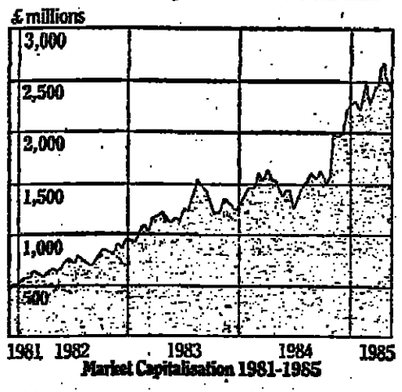
Pre-tax Profit 1981-1985

While in Beijing as a Member of Lord Young's Trade Mission, I signed Letters of Intent with the PT Ministry. The objectives are to co-operate in the telecommunications development of the Yangtze Delta area and to establish a telecommunication centre, probably to be located in Shanghai. During the mission I also signed a joint project agreement with Director Yuan Jiawen of Guangdong Posts and Telecommunication Administrative Bureau (GPTB), to instal digital telephone systems in three major cities of the Pearl Delta area. Subsequently another agreement has been reached between GPTB and Cable and Wireless (HK) Limited, which will rapidly extend to another 10 cities in the area the ability to dial directly to Hong Kong.

The expansion of telecommunication services in the Pearl Delta will mean that the existing 2700 channel microwave system between Hong Kong, Shenzhen and Guangzhou will be fully utilised by 1988. Cable and Wireless (HK) Limited is already discussing a new optical fibre system with GPTB to handle the extra traffic.

The Pacific Basin has been identified as a major growth area for telecommunication and we are actively seeking out opportunities for strengthening the group presence throughout the Pacific Basin as well as in China.

Mercury Communications Limited forms the substance of our development in the UK. It was, therefore, in pursuance of our strategic objective that we grasped the opportunity to establish Mercury as a 100 per cent owned Cable and Wireless subsidiary by purchasing 50 per cent of its shares from BP towards the end of 1984. Since then the newly appointed management and board of Mercury have accelerated vigorously the expansion of the network and have been notably successful in completing fibre optic cable links from Manchester through Leeds to Birmingham and from Birmingham through London to Bristol. Earth stations have been established in the London Docklands and Oxfordshire to provide communications via the Atlantic and Indian Ocean satellites to the west and east. Now that it has both terrestrial and satellite facilities to offer, Mercury is attracting increasing numbers of customers. It is also offering increasing numbers of different services, the latest of which is a private line facility with AT&T, the major long-distance and international operator in the USA. This provides immediate access to a wide variety of AT&T's telecommunication services and the many international customers who use them and we look forward to expanding this agreement to include other services in the future. Mercury has also completed the purchase of the network of pipes under London which were used until 1977 by the London Hydraulic Power Company. Fibre optic cables are now being laid in these pipes. By the end of the year a digital switched service will be available to the city using this new network, thus extending significantly the services Mercury can offer on a competitive and high quality basis.



Market Capitalisation 1981-1985

The largest inter-continental traffic stream is between the UK and the US. The decision of the Federal Communications Commission, with the agreement of the US Secretary of State, to grant the application by Tel-Optik – our US partner – to land two fibre optic cables in the US clears all the regulatory and legal requirements and enables us to proceed in the design and commissioning of the first private transatlantic telecommunication cables for decades. Their use will add a new dimension to the security, reliability, speed and cost of transatlantic communications. They will also provide Mercury with secure transatlantic cables complementing its satellite links.

Developments within the US are proceeding to plan. The fibre optic cable facility which the Group leases from Amtrak between Washington and New York has proved very successful and additional capacity is planned on this route. An agreement has been signed with Lightnet to purchase substantial fibre optic cable capacity between Washington and Chicago, one of the busiest routes in the world. The agreement includes options for the purchase of additional routes as and when needed. Construction of the fibre optic cable system in Texas linking Dallas, Austin, San Antonio and Houston is well under way and contracts for substantial amounts of capacity have already been signed up.

The appointments, to the Court of Directors, of Tom Chellew as Director, Bermuda and Caribbean, and John Ormsby as Director, Middle East, Indian Ocean and Africa bring representation at Court of all the major geographic regions in which the Group operates. Together with Brian Pemberton, who becomes Chief Operating Officer on 1 July, 1985, they will provide continuity at Court for more than the next decade. Alan Clements becomes a non-executive director on 1 July. We are sure his experience as Finance Director of ICI will assist in the further strengthening of our Group. I wish also to record my appreciation for the contribution made by Alan Wheatley, whose resignation takes effect from 1 July, and wish him success in his new appointments.

In conclusion, I thank my fellow directors and the managers and staff throughout the world for their support and commitment in maintaining and strengthening the pre-eminent position of the Group as the world's leading international operator of telecommunication services. We will continue to grow and to grow profitably."

THE QUESTOR COLUMN

An encouraging message by Cable

OLD pipes running underneath London, which once delivered hydraulic power to City offices, are finding a new life as conduits for optical cables.

In a few months time City businesses will be able to use the network to speak to each other by telephone or computer. Local calls will be free, trunk calls cheaper than through British Telecom.

At that time stand by for a resurgence of interest in shares of Cable & Wireless, which is laying down the digital London network through its Mercury Communications subsidiary. British Telecom, by contrast, may find a lack of enthusiasm among City folk.

Meanwhile nothing can drum up any enthusiasm for either Cable & Wireless or British Telecom. Cable & Wireless yesterday came in with pre-tax profits of £245 million for the year to March 31 against £190 million. The shares fell 20p to 495p.

Once again it was the Far East and South Pacic which produced the bulk of the profits and the best of the growth. Currency factors played a part, inflating profits by £20 million before tax.

But even leaving aside the currency effect — which has lifted pre-tax profits by an average of 17 p.c. per annum since the company was privatised — Cable & Wireless is locked into a growth pattern which seems set to continue for years ahead.

The Mercury network is now going ahead rapidly and should be making significant profits within the next few years. Deals are being hatched in China and Japan, two private transatlantic cables are already on order and United States activity is growing.

Until those medium-term projects begin to earn their keep there is enough extra traffic expected from its additional operationsto push pre-tax profits up to around £290 million in the current year and even £350 million in 1986-87.

Capital spending hit £260 million last year and borrowings rose £90 million. But capital budgets look like stabilising around last year's level, so fresh outside capital may not be needed.

Sooner or later the Government will unload its remaining 23 p.c. stake, but nevertheless the shares deserve a bettr rating than the 13 times prospective earnings on which they stand currently.

Ferranti price threatened

PREMIUM ratings are hard to hang on to in the present nervous market—particularly for electronic groups. Ferranti may well be maintaining one of the steadiest growth rates in the sector —profits to March 31 are 19 p.c. higher at £46 million—but its shares are unable to avoid the general nervousness and lost 5p yesterday to 112p.

Sound as Ferranti is the market is now taking nothing electronic on trust and it surely noticed that the best performance within Ferranti's operating profits is not sustainable.

Significantly, this was the electronics division which increased its contribution from £6·4 million to £10·5 million.

That was an exceptionally bolstered figure. In anticipation of the introduction of new technology last year this division built up a huge backlog of orders.

The servicing of this backlog provided at least half of last year's electronics profits improvements.

The other divisions made more reasonable progress, defence systems increased profits by £4 million to £24·2 million while computer systems improved by £2·5 million to £15·6 million. Instrumentation saw slower progress edging up from £2·1 million to £2·5 million.

The electronics side will see little if any growth this time—it could even see a slight downturn—but elsewhere the group should feel the benefits of recent heavy capital expenditure which is now being scaled down to indicate a cash inflow at the end of the current year.

Last year's main acquisition, TRW Controls of Houston, should provide a meaningful contribution in 1985-86 and the group appears capable of maintaining its own long-term target of achieving at least 15 p.c. underlying growth a year. That suggests a pre-tax profit of around £56 million but still leaves it selling well above the sector on a prospective earnings multiple of just under 14.

Plessey, Racal and GEC are all selling between nine and 10 times prospective earnings and although Ferranti remains a good long-term bet it could see its premium trimmed back a little over the next few weeks.

Hogg Robinson has attractions

INSURANCE broking is now looking up and Hogg Robinson is looking up further than most — its own recession did, after all, run deeper and longer than that which beset the industry.

Pre-tax profits to March 31, showing a 34 p.c. increase to £14.8 million, confirm that the new management installed in 1982 set the group on a more steady course.

Lloyd's underwriting agencies have been reduced in importance from 27 p.c. of pre-tax profits to 18 p.c. while insurance broking has increased its contribution from £7·8 million to £9·6 million, reflecting better volume, hardening rates and a three points improvement in the expense ratio.

Travel has also expanded sharply with profits 40 p.c. higher at just over £5 million after taking in a full contribution from Wakefield Fortune acquired at the end of 1983.

Hogg has increased its market share in both business and holiday travel and despite a quiet start to the latter in the current year now reports a dramatic upturn in the last two months.

The group is interested in furthering its retail operations through the travel agency branches by introducing one-stop personal financial services. This all adds to a more colourful picture for Hogg than was ever obvious before.

A current profits target of around £20 million must be possible, to put the shares on a prospective earnings multiple of 8·7 at 228p a clear two points below the sector.

The plans to expand further into the United States following the purchase of the remaining 50 p.c. in Republic Hogg Robinson provides an added attraction since the United States insurance recovery is still in only the early stages.

The share may not move completely into line with the majors given the group's chequered history but the gap should close.

Building gloom

A 25 P.C. RISE in new commercial orders and a 19 p.c. increase in work for private industry only just offset the decline in other parts of the construction industry, the Environment Department said last night in comparing the February-April period with a year earlier.

Public housing orders fell by 28 p.c., private housing dipped by 11 p.c. and general public works had a drop of 13 p.c.

125 YEARS 1810 1985

Brown Shipley

Group Result

The profits of both our banking and insurance broking groups were materially higher than in previous years and your Board regards these results as together forming a good basis for further growth in our Anniversary year.

We are pleased to have been able to record increased earnings per share for the year in which you subscribed a substantial amount of new capital. Your Board recommends a final dividend of 5.75p per share which would increase the year's total from 8.5p to 9.25p per share.

Banking

The banking result is encouraging. The greater emphasis on fee and commission earning business is making its mark and our Corporate Finance division had a notably successful year. The Investment division has moved into separate premises in Eldon Street, E.C.2 and a strong marketing effort has greatly improved public awareness of our Unit Trusts.

In the traditional areas we were particularly active in trade finance, the Channel Island companies performed well and the Treasury division continued the profitable development of its customer-based dealing and advisory services. Medens Trust again substantially increased its contribution to our profit.

Insurance

Profit growth in the insurance group was well spread and a number of factors have combined to produce this continued improvement.

School fees insurance business, both here and in the United States, has maintained its progress; growth of the United Kingdom economy has helped our domestic customers and this, combined with the sharp increase in rates of premium, has improved the general broking result here. Overseas business placed at Lloyd's has been profitable, with currency movements favouring this predominantly dollar-based activity.

Despite adverse currency movements, the continued growth of our general broking business in South Africa again contributed an important part of the insurance result.

The Future

In our Anniversary year the prospects both for banking and for insurance are encouraging. We look forward to closer collaboration when the headquarters of both parts of the Group are combined in Founders Court and we expect to complete our celebrations with further growth in the year ahead.

At Whitbread, we've just published our Annual Report and Accounts for the year to March 2nd, 1985.

We think you'll find it refreshing.

Profits during 1984/1985 were up 15.8% to £110.1 m., from consolidated turnover of £1,444.0 m. (1983/1984: £1,185.7 m.).

Shareholders can look forward to a final dividend of 4.9p, making a total for the year of 6.95p; an 11.2% increase.

So, what were the ingredients of this highly satisfying year?

BEER, BREWING & WHOLESALING

Beer, Brewing & Wholesaling increased its turnover by 9% to £510.5 m.; operating profits advanced to £70.5 m., an increase of 28%: 49% of total operating profit.

Closure of the Luton Brewery caused short-term supply problems, but immediate steps were taken to realign production to reflect market demand more accurately.

Although sales in the total UK beer market are fairly static, we remain strong in this business, with Whitbread Best Bitter achieving a 17.5% growth rate in the South of England and Trophy Bitter increasing its share of the market in the North. Strong support for local ales continued, particularly for our Flowers bitter range and Chesters.

More people are drinking lager in the UK these days, which now accounts for 44% of Whitbread's total beer sales, well above the industry average. Draught Heineken substantially increased sales; Stella Artois enjoyed a 25% growth and Kaltenberg Diat Pils a 35% increase in sales.

RETAILING

In this area expansion has been the keynote. Turnover was up 32% to £560.1 m., producing operating profits of £47.2 m.: 33% of total operating profit.

Our reorganisation of Whitbread Inns is now complete; plans to increase investment in both people and property will help to enhance profit potential.

Whitbread Retailing acquired a further 82 off-licences, bringing the total to just under 800, making us one of the largest off-licence chains in the UK. Over the next two years we'll be bringing them all under the Thresher name.

Beefeater Restaurants have shown significant growth, Henekey Steak Bars provided a satisfactory first full year contribution and Roast Inns now operate in 34 locations. Our joint venture in Belgium opened the first two Pizza Huts and the first Beefeater in Brussels. Pizza Hut is now the largest pizza restaurant chain in London. 'Whitbread Coaching Inns' is the new identity for our integrated hotel operations. Aureon Entertainments now manages 33 discotheques with excellent growth potential.

WINES AND SPIRITS

Wines and Spirits turnover increased by 19% to £524.1 m. Operating profits advanced to £26.3 m. (up 13%), accounting for 18% of the total operating profit.

Whitbread North America was established as a separate division, incorporating The Buckingham Corporation, Julius Wile, Fleischmann, Highland Distillers of California, and our 49% holding in All Brand Importers. These companies all had a good year, with increasing sales and good potential for the future. Whitbread wine companies performed well, under pressure from low margins.

Calvet's overall volume was up 13%, with good progress in Canada and Japan. Langenbach performed well in West Germany and had a 35% increase in sales to the UK.

Stowells of Chelsea now handles over 29 million litres of wine a year across all its ranges, while increasing its share of the boxed wine market.

Long John International continued to perform well in the important West European markets with particularly satisfactory gains in France and Italy. A sustained drive in the Duty Free sector yielded excellent results for Long John and Laphroaig malt whisky.

THE FUTURE

Our reorganisation has given us a great opportunity to increase our productivity and efficiency, and we will continue to trade profitably in the UK.

Overseas, we will be concentrating on consolidating our newly acquired American business.

And we're confident of another satisfying result in 1986.

We think you'll raise your glass to that.

MONEY & EXCHANGES

THE POUND went ahead on the exchanges yesterday after the Chancellor effectively ruled out any early cut in United Kingdom interest rates in response to a plea for cheaper money from the Confederation of British Industry.

By the close, sterling had gained nearly a cent, rising from $1·2855 to $1·2950. Its international value also improved from 80·5 to 80·6 despite a slight easing in terms of the German mark.

Money costs in London remained broadly unchanged, although the rise in sterling prompted some easing in longer-term money rates.

The Bank of England acted promptly to relieve a £950m cash shortage in the banking system through normal bill operations. But very short-term money remained expensive in spite of the Bank's generosity in providing relief.

Capital growth PLUS a rising "tax-free" return. It isn't magic. It's Munipayer.

Munipayer is an investment programme from the UK's best-performing General Trust over 3, 5 and 7 years*.

You choose a level of withdrawals — of which up to £5,900 a year could be free of Capital Gains Tax. An investment of £10,000 made five years ago in Munipayer with half-yearly withdrawals of 10% per annum could have given you 113% more in regular withdrawals than the same type of investment in a Building Society Share Account — and capital growth of 201% into the bargain! The minimum investment is £3,000.

All figures are on an offer to bid basis. *As listed in Money Management, June 1985

Mechanical CAD/CAM Quality Assurance and Technical Publications

Stevenage

Prime CAD/CAM, based in Stevenage and developing software systems for the Mechanical Engineering Industries, epitomises Prime's excellence throughout a range of hardware and applications software solutions. We now need several talented innovators with strong backgrounds in mechanical engineering:

Mechanical Engineers for Software Quality Assurance

Carrying out challenging quality assurance for CAD/CAM systems, you will set standards, assess specifications for new features and products, develop and perform tests. Additionally, you may be involved in controlling the QA procedures of third party software suppliers. Previous QA experience is not essential, but an appreciation of the importance of this function, an innovative approach to testing and at least two years' mechanical engineering experience in a design or manufacturing environment is: therefore in addition to a degree or an equivalent qualification, you should have some first hand experience of CAD/CAM systems. An understanding of end user requirements is an underlying strength of Prime.

Technical Authors for CAD/CAM Engineering

As a member of our Technical Publications Group you will be producing user manuals, reference guides and product casebooks, in line with the Prime style and format. Ideally you'll be experienced in writing technical documentation for CAD/CAM systems; or you might have 5 years' experience of mechanical engineering and a career interest in the preparation of high quality technical documentation. An excellent communicator, you should be highly self motivated and keen to use this opportunity to develop your technical skills.

For the above positions, full training on Company products and systems will be given, and you will also have the opportunity to take part in programmes designed to develop your interpersonal and communication skills.

Highly attractive salaries, are supported by free BUPA, pensions and life assurance schemes, long term disability insurance, stock purchase plan and relocation assistance where appropriate; in the more senior positions, a company car is also offered. If you only ask the best for yourself, telephone Mike Newstead, on 0438 356122 or write to him at Prime Computer CAD/CAM Ltd., Walkern Road, Stevenage, Herts SG1 3QP.

Operations Director — Vacuum Technology

... a major commercial role in high-tech manufacturing

NORTH WEST: c.£22,500 + CAR

HAY-MSL MANAGEMENT SELECTION

Design innovation, high growth rate and substantial investment in new facilities are the characteristics of this recently established company already recognised in world markets as being at the forefront of vacuum coating technology.

To strengthen its resources an Operations Director is sought to take executive responsibility for performance against contract from acceptance of order to successful commissioning on site. Projects will range in value from £200,000 to several £million — with a world-wide customer base.

Candidates — probably aged 35 to 45 — will be educated to degree level in either business studies or an appropriate technical discipline. Substantial experience of project management in a major precision engineering company in the mechanical or electrical/electronic sectors is a prerequisite. Commercial expertise will be more highly valued than pure technical ability.

This is a very real opportunity for career and personal progression at a key point in the company's development. Salary is for discussion as indicated and the comprehensive benefits package could include equity participation; relocation expenses where appropriate.

Please write — in confidence — with full details. A. L. Brown ref. D.62053. HAY-MSL Management Selection, Oak House, Park Lane, Leeds LS3 1EL.

Production Manager

'a market leader whose full potential has yet to be realised'

FMCG — to £20,000 + bonus + car

The commitment to future growth can be no more graphically demonstrated than by the heavy capital investment planned over the next three years.

Your role, encompassing both manufacturing and packaging operations will be central to the Company's plans. It will be demanding and highly visible – not an appointment for the faint hearted.

It will make heavy demands on your:

- skills in improving man and machine productivity.
- ability to utilize effectively the latest in manufacturing technology.
- expertise in process production methods and high speed packaging.
- flexibility in organising a multi-shift operation.
- man-management and intellectual skills.
- ability to positively contribute to executive team decision making.

The vehicle for the enhancement of your career – a house-hold name in its fmcg field – is a profitable subsidiary of a major group. It needs experience and professionalism to take it forward, age being a secondary consideration except for a lower limit of 35. A pre-requisite, however, is an impressive track record in a manufacturing environment where the ability to consistently achieve plan within tight quality parameters is critical.

The appointment has a Northern Home Counties location.

Please forward a comprehensive CV (or telephone for a personal history form) quoting Ref. MD626 to Dennis Fielding at Macmillan Davies, The Old Vaults, Parliament Square, Hertford, Herts. SG14 1PU. (0992) 552552.

Senior Appointments in Turbine Aerodynamics

GEC Turbine Generators Limited is the most successful manufacturer of large steam turbines in the United Kingdom and has an excellent reputation worldwide in this technically demanding industry. The introduction of improved subsonic and supersonic blading into existing and new machines is part of the Company's ongoing programme of development, maintaining its leadership. Blading development at the laboratories in Manchester and Rugby is central to the work of the Aerodynamics Group.

Two appointments offer attractive careers – with later opportunities for management responsibilities – to outstanding graduate engineers. Probably in their late 20's to early 30's, candidates should have at least 2-3 years' experience in blading development in the steam or gas turbine industries.

Based in Manchester, the successful candidates will be responsible for supervising blading development programmes, translating new ideas into future designs. This requires co-ordinating the work of specialist engineers engaged in turbine and cascade testing and advanced 3-dimensional analysis using extensive on-site computer facilities.

Salaries will reflect the high qualities required; determination and enthusiasm will be specially rewarded. Other Company benefits will include pension scheme and relocation assistance, if necessary.

Production Manager

Innovative Flexible Packaging

North Yorkshire
£15,000 to £17,000 + car

My client leads the U.K. market in the development and production of high value, resealable plastics packaging, with uses ranging from consumer goods to pharmaceuticals and engineering. They are not only very well established, but profitable and productive, too. As part of a far-reaching corporate development programme they now require a young and totally professional Production Manager who will be responsible for production engineering, production control and first line quality, in addition to the manufacturing processes, primarily extrusion, conversion and printing.
We are more interested in management ability than technical specialisation, though we think it likely that you will have continuous production process experience in your background. We also seek a high level of education – probably a degree—and for career development reasons the appointee is likely to be aged under 35.
Whilst this may represent your first opportunity to fit all the facets of your manufacturing experience together, it is only the first step we have planned for you. An excellent initial remuneration package, including free BUPA and a contributory pension scheme will grow to match your own development, and relocation assistance is available to this most attractive location.
Please respond urgently by sending a full c.v., or call David Woolf on 01-231 7275 for a confidential discussion.

PHARMACEUTICAL/HEALTHCARE INDUSTRY

HEAD OF PERSONNEL

THE COMPANY

Our client, BOEHRINGER INGELHEIM, is one of the world's most successful and respected pharmaceutical organisations with an outstanding reputation for its international commitment to original research/product development and its progressive philosophies regarding the development of its human resources.

The U.K. Group consists of two ethical pharmaceutical companies, a Hospital Division, an Animal Health Division and a newly founded G.I.T.C. company. The historical record of financial growth of the Group is extremely positive due to the company's commitment to achieving high standards of professionalism and success in each market sector in which it competes.

This record of success has resulted in an ongoing growth in the number of people employed in the U.K. and the current complement is approximately 400 personnel.

THE POSITION

This is an excellent opportunity for a senior personnel professional to soon assume management responsibility for the Group's Personnel Department. The position will become available due to the retirement of the current Director of Personnel who will complete a long and highly successful period of service with the Group within the next 2 years.

The selected candidate will be DIRECTOR OF PERSONNEL (DESIGNATE) and will undergo an in-depth programme of induction and training with the U.K. and the European operation in order to facilitate a smooth and successful transfer of responsibilities and duties in the short-term future.

The position offers some highly attractive benefits to an experienced personnel professional of the correct calibre. The international philosophy of the organisation stresses the critical importance of the personnel function and the Director of Personnel is a key member of the U.K. Operating Committee. The key areas of responsibility involve the development of human resources in the management group and the management of the broader personnel services associated with a major organisation.

The company is committed to achieving results through the effective development of human resources at all levels and this is a particularly vital part of the role in a 'people-oriented' organisation. Moreover, this responsibility does result in a considerable amount of international involvement in the company's International Human Resources and Personnel Groups.

The remuneration package for this senior position is highly attractive and will comprise a competitive basic salary, a non-contributory pension scheme, a company car and other fringe benefits which reflect the quality of the organisation.

THE CANDIDATE

The selected candidate, aged between 35 and 45, will be a successful personnel manager/director with a minimum of 5 years' experience in personnel management in an organisation with a wide variety of functions ranging from marketing to production. Although it is not essential that the candidate should have had previous experience in the pharmaceutical/healthcare industry, this would obviously be highly desirable and previous line management experience would also be advantageous.

The 'ideal' candidate would be a current Personnel Director or Manager of a major pharmaceutical organisation which has a positive commitment to the development of human resources.

For further information and an application form please contact John Davies in the strictest confidence.

Move fast to beat the louts

THE increasingly nauseating behaviour of some spectators on English cricket grounds, especially the invasion of the playing area at the end of the first Test, will be an important if undesirable side-issue of today's game at Lord's, writes Michael Carey.

At least by taking place at the start of the series, the events at Headingley have forcibly reminded the game's authorities that the problem is not going to disappear and must be tackled.

Exactly how remains to be seen. MCC, the controllers of Lord's, have had some success in restoring decorum to one-day finals, and their discussions on the subject this week would no doubt have dwelt on how to improve upon that experience.

In a sense, cricket's governing bodies find themselves in a similar situation to the one that faced soccer a decade or more ago. Then, through a combination of ignorance, short-sightedness and greed, football failed to take any action and is now paying the price.

Alderman case

Cricket ought to know better. We have seen how, as at Perth three years ago, a player can suffer serious injury when he becomes involved with marauding spectators, when Australia's Terry Alderman broke a collarbone.

There have also been episodes in this country which should have alerted the Test and County Cricket Board to the danger.

Some years ago, a policeman broke an arm in a fracas during a Sunday game, and only last summer, a spectator brandished a knife at an umpire at the end of a match involving the West Indies, though this went unpublicised at the time.

Yet these incidents are only the tip of the iceberg. What concerns the average, decent cricket spectator is the day-in, day-out louishness that, while apparently within the law, regularly mars what should be a pleasant trip to a county or Test match.

Oval incidents

At the Oval last year, for instance, people who had paid for Test match seats found them occupied by intruders who refused to budge. Nor did the ground authorities or police offer much help when they complained.

At Headingley the other day, some spectators left in disgust at increasingly boorish behaviour by drunken youths who had no interest in the game. A spectator at Edgbaston for the one-day international writes, in a pained letter in the current issue of Wisden Cricket Monthly, how his day was spoiled by mindless chanting and singing, often obscene.

The point is that although we live in an increasingly permissive age (the trendy might say, more tolerant), behaviour like this has no place on any cricket ground. If it were attempted in any High Street, the perpetrators would quickly get their comeuppance.

This is where the root of the problem lies. These, mostly youthful spectators have no feeling for the game itself and little knowledge of what is going on in the middle. Nor do they care.

Complain to club

Maybe, in the short run, it will be necessary to stage games with police positioned around the boundary until the message gets home. In the long run, however, other measures may be necessary.

The simplest, I would suggest, would be for every ground authority to stipulate from the outset that anti-social behaviour is not acceptable. Individual spectators, meanwhile, can make their point by complaining to club owcials as often and as vehemently as possible.

Some counties, such as Hampshire, have introduced such measures with some success. At Ebbw Vale recently, Glamorgan were obliged to eject a group of visiting supporters for disorderly behaviour, and that was before play began.

There have probably been other episodes up and down the country, not unconnected with the availability of alcohol on cricket grounds. Clearly even at the risk of losing revenue, cricket cannot afford to drag its feet much longer, or it will soon start to lose the genuine follower in vast numbers.

VICTORY MAY NOT SUFFICE FOR GOWER

By MICHAEL CAREY

AS the Lord's groundstaff worked through the night in the hope of ensuring a prompt start to today's second Cornhill Test, England's captain, David Gower, might also have had a few uneasy moments while he pondered his immediate future.

Gower finds himself in the unenviable position of leading his side against Australia, one up in the six-match series, but knowing that even a second successive victory might not be enough to secure his hold on the captaincy.

Incongruous though that may seem, the selectors, in reappointing Gower for only the first two Tests of the series, made it clear that his lack of consistent form since taking over the role was uppermost in their minds.

Thus, while appreciative of his part in England's success in India last winter, they were concerned that he made runs only — albeit crucially — in the last Test and hinted that they were looking for a greater contribution from him.

Failed twice

But he failed twice in the first Test at Headingley, as any batsman might have done on that particular pitch, even though England managed to amass their highest score against Australia for a decade.

Now he leads England on a ground where they have not beaten Australia for more than 50 years, outwardly trying to be as phlegmatic as possible but inwardly doubtless aware that a good ball here, an unlucky decision there might be decisive.

In the past England have retained captains — like Brearley and Illingworth—because of their flair for leadership when form deserted them. But another, Denness, felt obliged to stand down for one Test in Australia when the pressures mounted.

Gower is still serving his apprenticeship as a captain, which is hardly his fault, and I suppose he would have to do everything wonderfully well and stage-manage an England win to counteract the affect of more failures with the bat.

Stay of execution

On the other hand, were England to take a 2-0 lead, the selectors might well be magnanimous enough to acknowledge Gower's part in it and, if so, make a stay of execution in the hope that in a successful side tensions might ease and runs flow. He has scored only 383 in 20 innings as captain.

At the moment, though, all that is flowing at Lord's is water. In the past five days one and a half inches of rain has fallen there and more than four inches in this merry month of June alone.

It rose above the welts of my shoes on a stroll over the outfield yesterday. It was hard to recall a more waterlogged playing area on the eve of a recent Test, hence the need for Mike Hunt, the new groundsman, and his staff to burn the midnight oil.

With the help of floodlights, they planned to spike and mop the playing area, all the time grimly aware that little more rain was needed to disrupt today's proceedings, though spectators can now obtain a refund if not a ball is bowled.

Pitch covered

Throughout all that Mr Hunt's first Test pitch remained covered as it has been all too often lately. So, though it is said to be firm, it will be a surprise if there is nothing in it for the bowlers at the start.

England, I imagine, will want to play both their spinners, Emburey and Edmonds, in the knowledge that it should be a "flat 'un" by the fourth or fifth day, if we ever get that far, and that its lack of preparation might also be a factor.

But they are not blessed with England's all-round strength and may not want to omit a batsman to allow both to play.

Umpires: H. D. Bird and G. D. L. Evans.

As for England's last place, that may go to Sidebottom at the expense of Allott. At their best, there is perhaps not a lot between them, but the timing is right for introduction of a new face. In any case, they could probably do with some cheerful news in Yorkshire this week.

CHAPPELL BOOST FOR MORALE

By ALAN SHIELL

IAN CHAPPELL, Australia's last winning captain in a Lord's Test, has been assisting the Australian cricketers' preparations this week for the key Second Test duel with England.

Chappell coached and coaxed Australia's youngest batsmen Greg Ritchie and David Boon at the Waldorf Hotel on Wednesday evening after they had arrived from Southampton.

He also talked to the team's youngest players, all-rounder Simon O'Donnell, 22, and fast-bowler Craig McDermott, 20.

The invitation for Chappell to have a long talk with Ritchie, 25, and Boon, 24, came from the Australian's assistant team-manager Geoff Dymock, 38, who wanted Chappell to advise them about their confidence, attitude and general approach to cricket.

With Richie Benaud, 54, the "old smoothie" hosting for the B B C, Chappell, 41, is in England as the front man for Channel 9's (Kerry Packer's) live television coverage of The Ashes Series, just as he is the co-compere of a national television sports show in Australia every Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Chappell led Australia to an eight-wicket win at Lord's in 1972, when his younger brother Greg, now 36, scored 131—a classic innings that he rates as probably the finest of his career —and swing bowler Bob Massie took 16 for 137 off 60·1 overs in his Test debut to dismiss England for 272 and 116, to Australia's 308 and 81 for 2.

Australia need to win or draw this Test to keep alive their chances of retaining The Ashes. It is extremely doubtful whether they are good enough and experienced enough to come back from two down.

Allan Border, the Australian captain, has the massive responsibility of healing the bruised morale of his players, who have not had consistent match practice and are fed up with England's depressing weather.

Chris Broad, the "forgotten" Test opener since Nottinghamshire colleague Robinson seized his chance, gave the England selectors a reminder yesterday

Broad rides his luck for 171

By NEIL HALLAM

CHRIS BROAD, the Nottinghamshire opener, overcame a mixed catalogue of misfortune, controversy and luck to graft his way to a career-best 171 as Derbyshire's decision to put them in on a green pitch misfired at Derby yesterday.

Barnett made this decision with some relish but, one bristling pre-lunch spell apart, his seamers failed to take advantage of a hard pitch and missed chances, two of them sparing Broad, allowed Notts to reach 327 all out in 109·2 overs.

The last ball of Holding's first over deviated off the pitch to find an edge before Broad had scored, but Roberts failed to hold a sharp low chance at second slip.

Derbys v Notts

Newell had made three in 15 overs when he was missed by Anderson at third slip.

Derbyshire's frustrations were increased by some indifferent bowling, with the openers happy to allow a high proportion of deliveries to pass by without offering a stroke.

Another escape

Broad escaped again on 40 when Finney's away swing beat him, and Roberts spilled an easy one, and Notts had 61 on the board before external factors intervened to part the openers.

Broad ricked his back, retiring on 45 for treatment, and Derbyshire at last found the accuracy and aggression to claim four wickets in six overs. Randall scoring only five of the 32 runs he needed to reach 1,000 for the season before Finney clipped the inside edge.

Newell's imperceptible progress ended when he played over another lavishly swinging ball from Finney, and Notts lost two more wickets in the last over before lunch as Holding moved up a gear to find some bounce against Johnson and rip out Birch's leg stump with a ferocious yorker.

Broad, who after lunch shared a stand of 80 in 33 overs with Rice, was on 71 when he escaped again. Finney again found an edge and Roberts insisted his catch was clean at second slip, but Broad stood his ground and after the umpires consulted, was permitted to bat on.

The stand was broken when Miller induced a mistimed drive from Rice; Hadlee's indeterminate stroke provided a catch at first slip and Broad's century arrived after 261 minutes, an event which did not bring universal applause among his opponents.

Some enterprise from French enabled the 7th wicket to add 93 in 20 overs, but Notts failed by four runs to claim a fourth batting point and only at this advance stage of his innings did Broad play with real authority, before a weary stroke against the new ball — provided a catch to first slip.

HUMPAGE & DYER TO RESCUE

By A. S. R. WINLAW at Old Trafford

LANCASHIRE'S opening bowlers, David Makinson and Patrick Patterson had Warwickshire in considerable discomfort for much of their innings at Old Trafford yesterday.

But Geoff Humpage and Robin Dyer brought some respectability to the visitors' total of 239, rallying Warwickshire from 41 for three with a partnership of 112.

Lancashire v Warwick

Bad light delayed the start for 40 minutes, play then took place for 40 minutes, before another break of 40 minutes, and finally four overs before lunch, with Warwickshire 35 for two.

At least in those periods there was encouraging play for Lancashire, with the left-arm Makinson having the left-handed Lloyd caught behind, cutting, in the second over and then Patterson dismissing Smith in the next over with a brilliant low slip catch by captain, Abrahams.

Hard struggle

Warwickshire thus lost their first two wickets for nine runs and, though Dyer and Amiss valiantly defended, the pace of Patterson and the outswing bowling of Makinson had them struggling hard for the first two hours. The bowling of the Jamaican Patterson was exceptionally fast.

Patterson continually beat Dyer's forward stroke with sheer speed, Amiss was yorked and bowled with a no-ball, and in his opening spell of 11 overs for 35 runs — seven of those extras — there were some vicious rising deliveries. It was, in the words of Lancashire's coach, Peter Lever, "the fastest bowling of the season at Old Trafford" and was warmly appreciated by the home crowd.

Admirable judgement

Makinson gave Warwickshire little respite with his telling length at the other end, and soon after lunch, he had Amiss lbw. The natural aggressor, Humpage, now joined Dyer, but there was no sign of batting initiative until Patterson came off, at 56 for three after 21 overs.

Humpage batted with most admirable sense and judgment in fine attacking strokeplay. When Patterson returned, he was decidedly short of his earlier speed, and as tea approached, Humpage appeared to have spoilt Lancashire's power.

But off the last ball before tea, Humpage drove a catch from Folley to mid-wicket and Warwickshire were struggling again: 155-4. Dyer's four-hour vigil ended when Makinson had him caught at slip and, with the slow bowlers doing well in poor light plus a fine diving catch by Fairbrother at cover, Lancashire regained control.

Accurate Curran torments Hants

By DAVID GREEN at Bristol

BRITANNIC ASSURANCE championship leaders Gloucester, prevented by rain from bowling a ball in their last match against Sussex, made excellent progress at Bristol yesterday against Hampshire, currently nine points behind them in third place.

The ground was waterlogged after heavy storms during the night but play started at four o'clock. In the 43 overs possible, Hampshire, put into bat, lost eight wickets in making 106, and only Gordon Greenidge with a crisp 43, suggesting permanence.

The architects of Hampshire's discomfort were Gloucestershire's faster bowlers. David Lawrence whose 3-37 brought his season's tally to 42, and Kevin Curran who took 3-23 in an accurate 17-over spell into the wind.

Glos v Hampshire

The third member of the trio, West Indian Test bowler, Courtenay Walsh, corrected an earlier tendency to drop short and bowled a good second spell, finishing with two wickets for 44.

Power and precision

Walsh started with two maidens but later gave Greenidge, one of the best back-foot players in the world, opportunities to hook which the batsman took with his customary power and precision.

Lawrence — smooth in his approach this season, and bowling much straighter — took the first wicket when he made one bounce to Terry's glove, Russell taking a fine catch in front of first slip.

Nicholas, whose early season run glut has temporarily dried up, soon fended another lifter to short leg. Curran, with a bustling approach and a quick arm action, replaced Lawrence and immediately caused concern with movement in the air and off the wicket.

Curran took the valuable wicket of Greenidge, moving one back to have him lbw and dealt similarly, with Chris Smith. Lawrence, now bowling with the wind, forced Hardy to mishook to backward short leg.

Walsh returned to have the younger Smith brilliantly caught one-handed by Athey at second slip and had Marshall caught at the wicket. Curran completed a satisfactory day for Gloucestershire by causing Parks to spoon a catch to short leg.

SOMERSET OPENERS IN TOP FORM

By ERIC HILL at Taunton

SOMERSET'S highest championship opening of the season between Nigel Popplewell, 84, and Peter Roebuck, 59, set the scene for an exciting 76 not out in 66 balls by Vivian Richards as they reached 268 for two in 77 overs against Glamorgan at Cardiff.

A waterlogged infield delayed play until two o'clock and the dry brown pitch was soon revealed to be slow. Roebuck, working hard to fit some form after a month's injury, and Popplewell began their great partnership, eventually worth 142 in 41 overs.

Thomas, Glamorgan's spearhead, was away injured, and Holmes was the best of the fast seamers. Popplewell sliced near extra cover when 32, beside edging Derrick past the keeper when 47, and escaping at 75, a hard return chance to Steele who retired with a broken finger.

There were a few offside adventures, but as Roebuck settled in firmly, Popplewell profiting with some lusty pulling, cutting, and lofted driving, led the way.

Richards' chances

Tea, which brought heavy cloud and a chillier cross wind, also broke the stand. Roebuck was caught behind off Barwick having received 122 balls, and Popplewell lifted Ontong to long off having hit a six and 10 fours from 144 balls.

Ontong and Barwick subdued Felton for a time, while Richards, amid some peerless strokes, looked dangerously indeed. An attempted on-drive against Barwick fell just short of third man, and two fast high edges off McFarlane narrowly escaped the only slips at 29 and 36.

Before long Felton was advancing steadily, and with Richards clipping and driving to sixes and eight fours, the pair added 112 in the final 27 overs of the day.

Cool Bairstow defies Leicestershire

By DEREK HODGSON at Bradford

KEVIN SHARP and David Bairstow brought some shape to Yorkshire's first innings with some sorely-needed sensible but aggressive batting to help the score to 222 for 6 in 106 overs by the close.

Having elected to bat, Yorkshire looked in poor spirit for much of the day. They were fortunate that Leicestershire looked no more efficient. Butcher's catching and Agnew's opening spell apart.

Park Avenue was warm with conversation on the "go slow" at Harrogate on Monday, and with Tony Vann the Cricket chairman saying "The matter is closed" the Boycott faction will be hoping the row will fade away.

Yorks v Leicester

Boycott himself was not there long enough yesterday to attract either praise or blame. He had already snicked Agnew before Butcher, at second slip, took a fine catch, low and right handed, in the ninth over.

Seized up

Meanwhile Moxon seems to have seized up. He is unable to hit the ball, and having seen Blakey go in similar fashion to Boycott, he prodded for 49 overs before cutting Taylor to gully.

As the sun reappeared on a cool afternoon Yorkshire were then saved by Sharp and Love. Sharp relished the spinners and 68 had been added in 24 overs when Love blasted Willey straight to Butcher. In the next over, Sharp, 11 fours, was leg before to Willey.

Bairstow, first with Carrick and then with Swallow, was the model of decorum, being tempted only once to lift Cook onto the football field.

He knows he needs every run, for Leicestershire today will be batting against what may be the most inexperienced attack in Yorkshire's history, containing only one capped bowler:

SENNA STARS AT LOTUS DAY

Ayrton Senna, the new "golden boy" of Formula One racing, will take time off from his busy schedule to be at Brands Hatch, Kent, for the Lotus Race Day on July 28.

The Brazilian, who has won pole position in all seven Grand Prix races this year and who won in Portugal, will fly in specially to drive his John Player Special Lotus 97T around the Kent circuit. After showing off his skills he will fly back to Holland to resume testing at Zandvoort with the Lotus team.

There will be a chance to see Senna's car in a special area of the Brands Hatch paddock where it can be viewed at close quarters, alongside other Lotus cars of outstanding interest from the past.

Former champion

The Lotus Race Day, organised by the British Racing and Sports Car Club, will see a unique gathering of just about every Lotus car ever made, with most of them competing in a packed, eight-race programme.

One of the most exciting events of the day will be the celebrity race in Brands Hatch Racing School Ford Escort XR3i's, including a host of distinguished competitors who will be led off the grid by Sir Jack Brabham, three-times world motor racing champion.

His son Gary, 24, an instructor at the Brands Hatch Racing School, will also be competing the same day in the Thundersports race.

The celebrity race carries a £500 first prize, donated by Motor Circuit Developments, which will go to the winner's chosen charity.

AUSTRALIA LEAD 8-1

By BILL FRINDALL

In 21 Tests at Lord's since 1896 England have beaten Australia only once and suffered eight defeats, their solitary victory coming in Verity's match in 1934. Six of the last seven Lord's Tests against Australia have been drawn, the only decisive result occurring in 1972 (Massie's match).

England's win at Headingley was only their second in the opening match of an Ashes series in 13 attempts since 1930, their last such success being in 1972.

Although Edmonds and Emburey have played a combined total of 51 Tests, they have appeared together for England only once, at Lord's on Emburey's debut against New Zealand in 1978. In that match the Middlesex pair claimed a collective analysis of two for 59 in 41·1 overs.

If Sidebottom makes his Test debut he will be the first Yorkshire player to apear for England since Boycott ended his career at Calcutta in January 1982, some 36 matches ago.

NORTHANTS IN CONTROL

By D. J. RUTNAGUR at Northampton

Except for a dozen overs during which Graham Clinton, grimly disciplined, and Monte Lynch, ebullient as ever — 54 from 36 balls—put on 47 runs, the Northants bowlers held complete sway over Surrey yesterday on the fourth consecutive rainy day at Northampton.

At the close, Surrey, who had chosen to bat, were 71 for four, having been 19 for three at one stage.

Play did not start until there was time for only 30 overs. It had been hoped to start after an early lunch, but two hefty downpours slowed the ground's recovery.

The ball moved about off the seam and in the very first over, Butcher, shuffling across to deflect Mallender, was leg before. There was much rapping of the pads even before Mallender, in his third over, inflicted the same fate on Stewart, the score then being just eight.

Jesty at first found it easier to locate the middle of the bat but soon Walker found its edge and Harper, at second slip, dived to take a remarkable low catch.

Pitch prospects

Surrey would seem to have made a rod for their own back by batting first in damp conditions but their decision may not prove that unwise for, they are playing on an old pitch which could be troublesome later.

LANCE SET TO HIT BACK AFTER ASCOT DEFEAT

By HOTSPUR (Peter Scott)

THE Champagne Stakes, Salisbury's most important two-year-old race, has Veuve Cliquot as its new sponsor today and carries record prize-money. It gives Lance the opportunity to make up for his disappointing Royal Ascot run.

First staged at Stockbridge in 1844, and transferred to Salisbury in 1899 after Stockbridge's Closure, the Champagne Stakes has Brigadier Gerard as easily its most distinguished winner in recent years.

While a prize of today's nature is poorly supported by no more than a four-horse field, three of the runners have winning form.

Lance's success at Kempton Park early this month made his Royal Ascot showing an anti-climax.

After disputing the Chesham Stakes lead there for more than half-a-mile with such fast colts as Bakharoff and Moorgate Man, Lance dropped out to finish fifth.

Lance had been ridden with much more patience at Kempton Park and could benefit from a return to those tactics. Chalk Stream, rather than Moorgate Man's stable-companion, Stratford East, looks the main threat to Lance (nap).

Hefty weight

Pictograph is preferred to his older opponents in Salisbury's Noel Cannon Memorial Trophy. Vintage Toll, fourth in last week's Royal Hunt Cup at Ascot, can defy his big weight in the Dobson Peacock Handicap at Newcastle.

Guy Harwood, who may win Newcastle's Stocksfield Stayers Stakes with Obertura, will give Sergeant Drummer a work-out this morning to decide whether he tackles the Northumberland Plate on Saturday.

Jupiter Island, the Hardwicke Stakes winner, had been readily beaten by Kirmann in the Jockey Club Stakes at Newmarket, seven weeks earlier.

A foot-infection caused Kirmann to miss Royal Ascot but this has now cleared up and Fulke Johnson Houghton will run the Aga Khan's four-year-old in the Grand Prix de Saint Cloud on July 7.

Tom Jones, who won last year's Grand Prix de Paris with At Talaq after that colt's surprise fourth to Secreto in the Derby, has the Royal Ascot winner Wassl Merbayeh as a possible challenger for Sunday's Longchamp race.

This 15 furlong test will come only 11 days after Wassl Merbayeh won the two-mile Queen's Vase at Royal Ascot, but with an eight-horse first acceptance, weak in both numbers and quality, his trainer must feel tempted to saddle this improving colt.

The Grand Prix de Paris has lost considerable status since Phil Drake and My Love added it to their Derby triumphs. Glint of Gold is easily its most distinguished recent winner.

Second in Shergar's 1981 Derby a few weeks earlier, Glint of Gold became the first English-trained Grand Prix de Paris winner for 60 years. He certainly changed the English luck because At Talaq's success was preceded by Yawa's win in 1983.

Kohaylan, the other English acceptor for Sunday's race, was a poor seventh to Lanfranco at Royal Ascot and makes much less appeal than Wassl Merbayeh.

Course Notes & Hints

PICTOGRAPH IS BEST OF DAY

By Our Course Correspondent

IAN BALDING, whose stable is in good form, may complete a Salisbury treble today with Chalk Stream, PICTOGRAPH* and Tolga.

Pat Eddery, who rides Chalk Stream and Tolga is unable to do the weight on Pictograph in the Noel Cannon Memorial Trophy (4.15).

But Ernie Johnson, who has been riding well lately without much success, is an ideal partner for this progressive three-year-old who is at the foot of the handicap with 7st 12lb.

Pictograph carried the same weight when Johnson guided him to a half-length victory over Jaggery at Goodwood this month and he is expected to make the most of an 8lb concession by Swift Palm who is also well suited by some give in the ground.

Chalk Stream, who justified odds-on favouritism at Lingfield Park last time, is expected to have the measure of Stratford East in the Veuve Clicquot Champagne Stakes (3.15) and Tolga ran well enough behind Session at Goodwood last month to warrant support in the Tisbury Fillies' Stakes (4.45).

Tournament Leader may take advantage of a lenient weight in the Carnarvon Challenge Cup (3.45). Doug Marks' five-year-old showed his best form this season when runner-up to Dominion Blue at Nottingham recently.

16 IN 'SWEEPS'

The 16 four-day declarations for the Joe McGrath Irish Sweeps Derby, to be run over 1½m at The Curragh on Saturday, are:

Bellemont, Bel Hevram, Damister, Dundalk Bay, Infantry, Law Society, Manor Express, Mouktar, Nemain, Outsider, Rising, Snow Plant, Sun Valley, Theatrical, Alyder's Best, Triptych.

STATE OF GOING

'Flower' blossoms in Laing double

DERRYRING did more than bring off a 33-1 success in yesterday's Pembroke Stakes (Div. 1) at Salisbury. She also gave her trainer Roy Laing the perfect encouragement for his Flower of Tintern in another division of the race half an hour later.

Flower of Tintern had shown more promise than Derryring in recent gallops, and Laing's confidence in a stable double was reflected in the gamble on Flower of Tintern from 6-1 to 7-2.

Ridden by Paul Cook, Flower of Tintern came away in the final furlong to beat Fraulein Tobin by three lengths, justifying the faith that Laing has had in her since she finished third to Slip Anchor at Nottingham last season.

Derryring, the mount of Mark Malham, did not surprise Laing by his prominent running. "He was gelded during the winter and then suffered a heavy bout of coughing," he said.

Cauthen double

After Ypsilantis had gamely defied top weight in the Bibury Cup Handicap, Brittain revealed his optimism for Pebbles in the Coral-Eclipse at Sandown Park a week on Saturday.

"I know she is flying in the face of history, as no filly has ever won the Eclipse, but I'm not superstitious and I'm sure she will take all the beating," said Brittain.

Paul Cole maintained his good run when three-year-old newcomer Parramon justified favouritism at Salisbury, but the stable had an unexpected reverse in the Ladies Derby at Ripon, where odds-on Sheer Heights was beaten six lengths by Fen Tiger.

Fen Tiger was Jennie Goulding's first ride for Reg Hollingshead's stable. Goulding's secretary to Steve Norton, who supplied two unplaced runners in the race.

Jockey Lindsay Charnock also completed a double, on 4-1 chance Hardknockin for Jimmy FitzGerald and the 33-1 chance Off Your Mark to give Geoff Calvert his first winner of the season.

Tommy Fairhurst, whose season has been badly affected by a virus, had his second winner in three days when Elarim took the Baldersby Apprentices' Handicap for the third year running.

Elarim was ridden by Sean Newton, 16, for his first winner in this country. Newton, born at Hexham, went to Australia when he was a year old and has ridden five winners there.

Newton, who joined Fairhurst this year, said: "I will be returning to Australia about mid-October to finish my apprenticeship. When I'm a fully-fledged jockey I hope to come back here to ride."

STRATFORD TO FOLLOW UP

By Our Resident Correspondent

Stratford East justified strong support at Nottingham last time. Ron Boss's colt may follow up in today's Veuve Clicquot Champagne Stakes at Salisbury.

Jeremy Hindley has bright prospects of completing a Newcastle double with Laird O'Montrose (Chesters Stakes) and Agra Knight (Stockfield Stayers Maiden Stakes).

Low Cost Lady was a disappointment at Doncaster last month. Gerry Blum's filly is expected to make amends in the Stagshaw Selling Stakes.

SALISBURY.—2.45, Sundeed; 3.15, Stratford East (nap); 3.45, Asmalwi; 4.45, Finloon Caroline. NEWCASTLE.—3.0, Low Cost Lady; 4.0, Laird O'Montrose; 4.30, Romiosini; 5.0, Agra Knight.

BRITAIN BEATEN

Peter Scudamore, suspended for nine days on Monday for careless riding, rode Gun Fun to victory over hurdles yesterday, but it was not enough to save a four-man British team from defeat by a New Zealand squad in a four-race series.

The series was contested over two hurdle events and two steeplechases at Tauranga on Monday and Auckland's Ellerslie course yesterday. New Zealand won by 83 points to 59.

Scudamore, captain of the British team, was suspended from today until July 8 for elbowing a rival during the hurdle event at Tauranga, and causing interference to another runner in the same race.

FIRST FOR CECIL

Paul Cecil, 17, no relation to Newmarket trainer Henry Cecil, has his first ride on Runager in the Polycell - Willie Carson Apprentice Handicap at Newcastle today. Cecil is aprenticed to Reg Hollingshead.

HOTSPUR'S "TWELVE"

Royal Norfolk Show

'Furry' leads 1–2 for Everest stable

By ALAN SMITH

NICK SKELTON and Everest Furry led a show-jumping one-two for his stable in the Norfolk Area International Trial at the Royal Norfolk Show, Norwich, yesterday.

Geoff Luckett, who has reaped rich rewards in county shows with Skelton and Liz Edgar away on the international circuit, was second on Everest Forsure.

Skelton went last in a four-horse jump-off on Furry, who is usually ridden by Mrs Edgar, and picked his way carefully round the rain-soaked arena.

Annette Lewis and Tutein, winners of the Sussex area International Trial earlier this month, were first to go and were fastest, but they hit the first part of the double.

Watery win

Chris Parker and Rossmore, who has spent more than a decade around the county shows, had a watery win in the Holden Motor Accumulator, run during a cloudburst.

The ground was very soft and there were a number of early retirements, but Rossmore's experience stood him in good stead.

Only three horses jumped faultlessly and Rossmore was 0·07 sec faster than Derek Ricketts and Master Guy, a newcomer to his stable this season.

Michael Mac, who is riding some of his lesser lights here, had bad news of his best horse Packers Hill, who helped Britain into second place in the Nations Cup in Aachen earlier this month. The 12-year-old damaged a tendon so badly in the Grand Prix there that he will have to be put down.

National Hunter Show

FAIRFIELD MANOR IN REPEAT

By HENRY BIRTWISTLE

FAIRFIELD MANOR made the journey from Cornwall to Shrewsbury to win the Edward, Prince of Wales, Challenge Cup at yesterday's National Light Horse Breeding Society Hunter Show.

Reserve to Fairfield Manor, and winner of the Walker-Okeover Cup for the best filly, was Parkwood Pollyanna, while Yorkie was runner-up to Fairfield Manor in the colt or gelding class.

Young stock entries were numerically disappointing, but broodmare sections were well filled and produced a strong lightweight class from which the winner Cluny Castle and runner-up Bright and Fair became champion and reserve for the H.I.S. Challenge Cup.

Castle qualifies

Cluny Castle is a five-year-old out of Cuillin Hills, who was almost unbeatable in the show ring during the late-1970s. Bright and Fair was a Shrewsbury champion and Lloyds Bank finalist as a three-year-old in 1983.

With Fairfield Manor having become eligible for the Lloyds Bank final at the Bath and West Show, yesterday's qualifying round was a foregone conclusion for Cluny Castle, who will follow in her dam's footsteps at Wembley.

In the produce class for groups of three horses by the same sire, the progeny of Current Magic, who stands in Yorkshire, emerged successful ahead of stock by the Shropshire stallion The Chocolate Bean.

NICHOLL WANTED AT THE DELL

By DENIS LOWE

CHRIS NICHOLL, Grimsby's central defender and assistant manager, is among the front runners for the managerial vacancy at Southampton, the club he served with distinction before returning North in 1983.

Dudley Ramsden, Grimsby's chairman, yesterday gave Southampton permission to approach Nicholl, 38, as a likely successor to Lawrie McMenemy, who resigned the manager's job earlier this month.

Southampton now plan talks with Nicholl, who won 51 caps for Northern Ireland. He made 228 League appearances during six years at the Dell.

Nicholl also played for Halifax, Luton and Aston Villa in a lengthy career that began as a youth at Burnley. He has impressed as Dave Booth's assistant at Grimsby over the past two seasons.

New Cup wanted

Ron Noades, the Crystal Palace chairman, has called on the Football League to introduce another cup competition for all First and Second Division clubs next season by using the 11 midweek European dates available following the U E F A ban.

Everton, Manchester United, Liverpool, Tottenham, Southampton and Norwich—the six English clubs barred from European competition—have taken steps to form their own competition with a Wembley final, but Mr Noades, who claims the backing of several chairmen, does not approve.

"A number of clubs do not believe this competition should be organised privately, and we urge the League to look after the interests of all 44 clubs in the top two Divisions."

Port Vale have signed Paul Maguire, 28, the former Stoke and Shrewsbury forward, who has returned to England after completing a season in indoor soccer in the United States.

Negotiations are in hand for the transfers of two Fulham midfield players who have ended their contracts at Craven Cottage. Ray Lewington is expected to join Sheffield United, and Robert Wilson is having talks with Crystal Palace.

Terry Mancini, the former Republic of Ireland defender, whose clubs included Q P R and Arsenal, has resigned as Fulham's assistant manager. Mancini, 42, is looking for a manager's job.

ZIVOJINOVIC'S ACES KNOCK OUT WILANDER

By JOHN PARSONS

SLOBODAN ZIVOJINOVIC's dream of playing on the Centre Court at Wimbledon produced a nightmare for Mats Wilander yesterday as his Grand Slam aspirations were destroyed by the Yugoslav's brutal and relentless power.

The man with probably the most powerful serve in the game these days, who looks more like a lumberjack than a lawn tennis player, struck 15 aces, which more than outweighed his 13 double faults as he defeated the fourth seed 6—2, 5—7, 7—5, 6—0.

Though Wilander has never gone beyond fourth round at Wimbledon he felt more confident than usual this time after recently adding the French Open crown to the Australian Open title he retained in December.

Yet apart possibly from Boris Becker, there were few players likely to cause him greater hardship in early founds, especially while the courts were still damp and the bounces low, than Zivo Jinovic, 21, whose career only began to flourish after he had condemned Britain to Davis Cup relegation by beating John Lloyd and Stephen Shaw on grass at Eastbourne last year.

Unplayable serve

This was the Yugoslav's first appearance at Wimbledon since he reached the quarter-finals of the junior event in 1981, and though Wilander found his serve almost unplayable — except for one spell in the second set when the Swede managed to play his returns earlier — Zivojinovic did not think he served well.

Zivojinovic, who pronounces his name Gee-vo-in-ovich, stressed that at Queen's Club two weeks ago he did not lose his serve once until the semi-finals. He was shocked to learn he had double faulted so often.

Curiously enough, the first of them came on his first serve, after he had won the toss and elected to receive, and the last was on his first match point.

In between, there was a succession of rapid fire, but exhilaratingly robust points as Zivojinovic proved there is far more to his game than just a pounding serve.

His wristy top-spin service returns, brilliant stop-volleys and remarkable agility and speed about the court for someone who is 6ft 3in, weighing more than 14 stones, all helped to impress such experts as Harry Hopman into predicting: "He could develop into a really fine player."

Although Wilander tried hard enough and seemed to have weathered the worst when he took the second set with five successive points in the 12th game, he said later he never really felt as if he was in the match.

"You are all pumped up at 15-30, but then he comes up with two aces and you have lost the game."

Zivojinovic, who wound up by taking nine successive games from 4-5 in the third, including the last four of Wilander's service games, said: "Every player dreams of playing on the Centre Court. Now it is no more a dream."

Meanwhile, Anders Jarryd, the fifth seed, who had looked to be in even greater peril of a first-round defeat than his fellow countryman, when he was two sets down on Tuesday, completed his resolute recovery by defeating Claudio Panatta 4-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

After the excitement of the Wilander upset, the Centre Court crowd sat back and relished the aggressive all-court power and skills of the brilliant young West German, Boris Becker, 17.

He was leading the American Hank Pfister, by two sets to one, and 2-2 in the fourth set, when bad light stopped play.

Jimmy Connors, the third seed, just beat the fading light with a swift, typically confident 6-1, 6-3, 6-4 defeat of Stefan Simonsson.

START AT NOON

Wimbledon officials decided last night that it would be necessary to start play at noon on all courts for the rest of the week, after another day's programme had been curtailed because of rain.

LLOYD'S SOUND VICTORY

JOHN LLOYD provided the patient crowd on Court One with the first British success in the championships, when he served and volleyed most effectively to beat the young West German, Wolfgang Popp, 6-2, 6-4, 7-6, writes John Parsons.

It was a thoroughly solid performance. But the real test for the British No. 1 will come in the next round against the 13th seed, Eliot Teltscher.

Lloyd's problem this year has too often been his failure to follow up a convincing first-round performance with equal confidence in subsequent matches.

After a 90-minute break because of rain, Lloyd—then 4-2 ahead—was particularly sharp around the net and he quickly confirmed his superiority by delivering nine aces, although Popp rallied well in the third set.

Shaw defeated

Stephen Shaw began buoyantly enough, taking a 2-0 lead against Chris Lewis, but the added experience of the agile and athletic New Zealander, who was an unseeded runner-up to John McEnroe two years ago, quickly became apparent.

"I don't think I played to the best of my ability, but I don't think I was allowed to," said Shaw who, despite some excellent volleys off his toes, paid heavily for many errors on his high forehand volleys.

Jason Goodall, JR, the Yorkshire player, was unlucky to find himself up against seventh-seeded Joakim Nystrom, whose victims this year include John McEnroe at the WCT finals in Dallas.

Nevertheless, Goodall fully deserved the wild card which gave him the opportunity to taste the big time by taking the third set before his opponent stepped up the pressure for a 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-0 victory.

Nick Fulwood worked hard for his points and an encouraging number of games before losing 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, to the American David Pate, who is 23rd in the world rankings.

In the women's singles, Clare Wood, from Sussex, lost 6-1, 7-5 to Ann Henricksson, who is 54th in the world list, but many of the first-set rallies were lengthy and several of the games went to deuce.

Then, in the second set, Miss Wood led 5-2 before her nerve failed her when she served for the set in the following game.

Shoe-banging habit is catching on

By ROGER MALONE

THE wet lawn tennis season is sprouting a new habit among players—that of banging the soles of shoes with rackets after almost every point, ostensibly to dislodge any mud or grass torn out by sliding feet.

However, as in many sports, when a habit born of practicality becomes a fetish to calm the nerves, we can stand for shoe-banging to become the new fashion, especially at such a wet Wimbledon.

Certainly some banging was necessary on a damp No. 1 court, but the extent to which the Czechoslovak hammered away so much more often, and for longer at a time than his opponent Mel Purcell, suggested that Lendl has already acquired a new release for nervous tension.

Blowing on hand

Shoe-banging now joins other other tennis fetishes—the forefinger moved across the forehead to remove perspiration, real or imaginary; blowing on the racket hand to cool the fingers, hot or otherwise; plucking up the front of the shirt to prevent it sticking, whether the wearer is perspiring or not; and bouncing the ball before serving until the gallery's nerves twang agonisingly.

As my colleague, John Parsons, reports from his recent observations of the hard courts in Paris and Rome, shoe-banging began on clay courts, to remove pieces of that surface.

Perhaps, it has spread to English grass as a way a player advertises that he or she is a genuine globetrotter.

I first noticed it this month in the tournaments at Manchester and Bristol, with players shoe-banging at times when it clearly was not necessary.

tennis fetishes — the fore—for instance, boxing, with much snorting to clear the nostrils whether or not a punch has just landed on them.

Snorting boxers

Many cricket batsmen adjust the peak of their caps far more often than is required, while Howard Clark, the Ryder Cup golfer, has been known to be unable to stroke a putt without first adjusting his trouser leg about six or seven times.

Lawn tennis, though, seems the top of the twitching league. Perhaps it is because few other sports featuring one antagonist against another require so much explosive athleticism and aggression, yet without the bodily contact of other sports

IT STAYS LAWN TENNIS

ON the day that the Australian Open confirmed their decision to switch to a synthetic surface when they move to their new home in January, 1988, Wimbledon yesterday re-affirmed their undiminished faith in grass, writes John Parsons.

R. E. "Buzzer" Hadingham, the All England Club chairman, etold a gathering of the world's Press yesterday that the Australian change made it all the more necessary and important for Wimbledon to stay with grass.

"With New York on the type of hard courts which we in England call concrete, Paris on clay, Wimbledon on grass and Australia now to be a synthetic surface, whoever wins the Grand Slam in future on four different surfaces will truly be a great champion."

The heavy delays to Wimbledon over the first few days because of the rain have led to the hoary old argument that Wimbledon should dig up the grass.

Teltscher enters

Earlier this week, former champion Arthur Ashe implied that some players might in future give Wimbledon a miss rather than risk serious damage to their world rankings because they are not confident of playing on grass.

On the other hand, this is the first year since regular world rankings began that every player among the world's top 20, both men and women, has entered Wimbledon. Eliot Teltscher, one of the regular absentees in the past, because he does not believe he can play on grass; has entered all three events.

And, as Mr Hadingham pointed out: "Even with synthetic grass, they still would not be able to play if it was raining, and the surface would be just as slippery as real grass immediately after rain."

In other words, Wimbledon's motto remains "Keep ON the Grass."

Wilander's view

Mats Wilander put the whole thing into perspective when, even amid the disappointment of his first round defeat yesterday, he described the notion that Wimbledon should dig up the grass as "a good idea if they want to kill the tournament. In every player's mind this is the biggest tournament, there's a special atmosphere here."

NOAH'S BIRDIE IS OUT OF COURT

Yannick Noah showed none of his Biblical namesake's compassion when a stray sparrow sought refuge alongside him on Court 14 at Wimbledon yesterday. Both Noah and his first-round opponent, Brad Gilbert were not amused.

Noah, the 1983 French champion who is competing at Wimbledon for the first time in three years, tossed his racket at the bird, which finally flew away.

CONNORS MISSES ATP EVENT

Connors has opted for the Executone Hamlet Challenge Cup in Jericho, New York, a special invitation event, Aug. 20-25.

BAN CONFIRMED

The Wimbledon ban on umpire Bob Jenkins, following statements attributed to him by a national newspaper, was confirmed yesterday by referee Alan Mills. Jenkins' actions, he said, were "contrary to the standards expected from officials at a tennis tournament".

£27m FOR NEW CENTRE

The new national lawn tennis centre in Melbourne will be the most advanced in the world, Victorian state premier John Cain said yesterday.

The state government would guarantee more than £27 million for the centre which would have 23 indoor and outdoor syntheic courts and a 15,000 seat sadium wih a retracable roof. It should be ready for the Australian Open in January 1988.

Colin McDonald, the Australian Lawn Tennis Associaion executive director, said h centre woudld be superior to Wimbldon, New York or Paris.

Potter removes No. 12 seed

By ROGER MALONE

CATARINA LINDQVIST, the No. 12 from Sweden, yesterday became Wimbledon's first women's seed to depart from the championships, beaten in straight sets by Barbara Potter, of the United States.

The Centre Court seems in danger of becoming a graveyard for Swedish hopes because Mats Wilander had been toppled there in the previous match.

Miss Lindqvist, despite her ranking, was always likely to be at risk against Miss Potter, who, the more experienced campaigner on grass and at her eighth Wimbledon, beat her Swedish opponent at Eastbourne last week.

"I have learned that you have to come out to play with a certain deck of cards," said the left-handed Miss Potter, ranked 37 on the world computer.

Her trump card proved to be a fast, slinging serve which brought several aces in her 6-0, 7-5 victory.

Powerful shots

Miss Londqvist, 22, who has climbed from a world ranking of 114 to 12 in only 18 months, and early this year registered a win in Florida over Hanna Mandlikova, Wimbledon's No. 3 seed. But yesterday her inexperience, and the pressure of appearing on the world's most famous court, was evident.

She produced some powerful shots, especially with her backhand, but too often struck them out of court. And she never came to terms when Miss Potter served against her backhand.

Miss Potter, after her excellence of the first set, became somewhat introspective, perhaps wondering whether she should shuffle that deck of cards. However, with the capacity to find a big, winning serve when it mattered most, she came through.

A Wimbledon quarter finalist two years ago, and her country's indoor champion of 1982, Miss Potter clearly has strokes to cause other seeds some problems.

Late in the evening, another men's seed fell, Aaron Krickstein, the No. 10, beaten 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4 by Bud Schultz, a fellow-American.

Krickstein, 17, who became the youngest ever to win a Grand Prix men's title two years ago when he won at Tel Aviv, could not produce a game suited to grass. Schultz, 23, powerfully built, took full toll of Krickstein's preferance for playing from the back of the court.

Pepeke proves point for Pritchard-Gordon

GAVIN PRITCHARD-GORDON took exception to these race-card notes at Kempton Park last night, and had his opinion justified as Pepeke started a double for the Newmarket trainer by landing the LBC Fillies' Stakes.

Pritchard-Gorden, who went on to win the Racal-Vodofone Handicap with Scythe, disagreed with the form guide note, "Pepeke does not seem likely to take a hand in the finish."

"That certainly wasn't my opinion beforehand," he said. "Pepeke has been working very well."

Adagio, the even-money favourite, was in front well before the turn for home and fought back when Pepeke, ridden by Willie Ryan, went on a furlong out, but Pepeke held on by a short head. The stewards allowed the placings to stand after inquiring into possible interference.

Cauthen repeat

Steve Cauthen took his score to 78, two ahead of Pat Eddery, when Rethymo raced home 10 lengths clear in the Racal Data Maiden Stakes. Cauthen was also successful for Marcos Lemos and Clive Brittain, the winner's owner and trainer, on Ypsilantis at Salisbury in the afternoon.

Brittan said: "Capt Lemos is on holiday in the Aegean. He instructed me to back both horses so there'll be some corks popping over there under the Greek sky tonight after I've telephoned him."

CRAM GOES FOR 1500 METRES DESPITE INJURY

By KEN MAYS in Oslo

STEVE CRAM, the world 1500 metres champion, runs the distance for the first time this season in the Bislett Games in Oslo tonight despite suffering a calf problem.

Cram, who has run only one serious track race since the Olympics (his defeat by Sebastian Coe in the England match last weekend), is hampered by the kind of injury that affected David Moorcroft for several years. "But I would not be in Norway if I considered it was serious", said Cram yesterday.

"The muscle tightens up but mainly after races, so I am really testing it by running. If it does trouble me during a race, then I will withdraw no matter if am leading."

Cram did exactly that in a low-key 5,000 metres race last month, and he is aware that he could be risking his place in the 3,000 metres for Britain against Czechoslovakia before him home town fans in Gateshead on Saturday.

"But it is serious races that I need . . . races like tonight are the test because it will show me what I need to do to get it right," said Cram.

Adrenalin flows

He went on: "I need to be against top athletes to get the adrenalin flowing, even if I have to get beaten a few times. This race is like that; there will not be any world records but a good competition and a test for Saturday."

With no major championships this season, Cram expects to be back in Norway in a month for what he believes is the race of the season, the Dream Mile at the Oslo Games.

Among his opponents tonight, Cram has Britain's Jack Buckner as well as John Walker and Steve Scott, both of whom have run over 100 sub-four minute miles, and Thomas Wessinghage and Jim Spivey.

Cram flew direct from Newcastle, but the 15-strong British party from London was delayed at Heathrow yesterday and arrived in Norway almost three hours behind schedule.

In the party was Shireen Bailey, from Bromley, who has recovered from a leg injury and is hoping to break two minutes in the 800 metres in preparation for the race Gateshead where she partners Kirsty McDermott, the new British record-holder.

Screen battle

Scotland's Nat Muir has replaced Eammon Martin in the 5,000 metres where Said Aquita is hoping to get close to Moorcroft's world record, and Ingrid Kristiansen is seeking to improve her own world record for the distance by at least ten seconds.

There will also be a battle off the track where the B B C out-bid by I T V for the domestic television athletics this season, will be in direct opposition to the commercial team on home screens and they have brought their top team to Norway as well as several others in an attempt to prove that they can do it better.

Todd Bennett, the European indoor 400 metres champion, runs for Britain in the 4x4/0 metres relay at Gateshead on Saturday. Then he will drive 400 miles to Brighton to turn out in the races next day for Southampton in a British Athletics League Division Three match.

YOUNGSTER EXCELS IN THE RAIN

By LESLIE HOWCROFT

DARREN WILSON, 16, a schoolboy member of Bedford Rifle Club, won the Bryant and May Cup for best overall performance in the Class D aggregate at the Scottish National Smallbore Meeting at St Andrew's yesterday.

Wilson, who will now be promoted to a higher class for next season, scored 1,541 out of a possible 1,600 over three days of competition at 50 metres and 100 yards, often in heavy rain.

In the Class D aggregate the Newcastle Chronicle Cup went to Malcolm Mackillop, 35, a surveyor from Perth.

The championship aggregates for the senior classes are to be completed today with a series of events at 50 metres and 100 yards.

Newcastle Chronicle Cup (Class C Aggregate). — M. Mackillop (Perth) 1,550, 1; B. D. Oldfeld (Thorpe) 1,546, 2; J. Simpson (Stewarton) 1,536, 3.

NON-LEAGUE PLEA TO GOVERNMENT

Non-league soccer officials hope to meet the Prime Minister and the F A to discuss the implications of proposed Government legislation on crowd control and banning the sale of alcohol at football matches.

Peter Hunter, the Gola League Secretary, has written to Mrs Thatcher on behalf of the Gola, Vauxhall Opel, Northern Premier and Southern League, expressing is apprehension that the proposals may be interpreted by magistrates and police as a blanket for all football. He argued that the non-League game does not have many of the problems of top-flight soccer.

Britons in lead then slip behind

By TONY FAIRCHILD in Kiel

THE British contingent, with two hard-earned third places in the Elite Olympic classes, yesterday had their best results so far in Kiel Week, blessed with fresher, if still shifting breezes.

But despite the excellent results, gained by Rob McMillan in the Finn class and Robert White in the Tornadoes, the outcome was still somewhat disappointing.

Both McMillan and White, crewed in Kiel as in Hyeres by Jeremy Newman, had led their respective fleets at the first weather marks of their races, and with the singlehander winning the previous day and White an acknowledged expert, victory seemed the likely outcome.

Alas, McMillan may not be as physically fit as would be ideal in the Finn for down-wind sailing, and White and Newman were handicapped by a boat which lost 35 seconds on the first close reach.

Out of touch

McMillan hung on to his lead up to the second weather mark before Scott Macleod and Brian Ledbetter, both of the United States, got by to finish first and second. White and Newman had fallen back to be second by the second weather mark.

White was out of touch in the second race of the day for the Tornado class which put the catamarans back on schedule after the heat lost in Tuesday's thunder storm. The winner was Norbert Petschel, of Austria, with Ian Gray, eighth, the best-placed Briton.

Meanwhile, Roger Yeoman and Nick Burgin maintained their grip at the front of the Flying Dutchman fleet, yesterday finishing eighth to remain seventh overall—an excellent showing so early in their "career" in the class.

But by recording his second victory yesterday Duncan Lewis, of Canada, made sure of retaining his overall lead on points in the Dutchman class which, like the Finns, is perhaps a little short of the "super-stars" of the class.

Scotland best of British teams

By MICHAEL WILLIAMS in Halmsted

ENGLAND, Ireland, Scotland and Wales all had their moments of despondency as well as satisfaction in the European Amateur Team Championship, at Halmstad yesterday, but but in the end retired for the night content.

The immediate task is to qualify for the top flight of eight teams who will then play one another by knock-out, and after the first of the two stroke-play qualifying rounds, it was a case of so far, so good.

Scotland did best of the four home countries with a five-man total after 18 holes of 375, two strokes better than Ireland and three ahead of both England and Wales.

Each of the 19 teams are in fact made up of six players, but one score can be discarded each day, and Scotland were able to forget an easy run by Angus Moir as Colin Montgomery steered the ship to safer waters with a level par 72.

Scotland might have done even better, but Sandy Stephen took three putts on each of the last two greens for a 74, and that left them seven strokes behind Sweden, the leaders.

Experience counts

It was the steadying hand of Peter McEvoy which pulled England round after uncertain beginnings. Craig Laurence had an 83, which was later discarded, and Peter Baker's 79 did not help the cause.

But McEvoy's experience on a course soaked by heavy overnight rain was invaluable. He had a 71, making light of what for most was one long slog, and with Graham Homewood, runner-up in the Amateur Championship, overcoming international nerves with a 75, England recovered.

Experience also helped Ireland. It was a 71 by Arthur Pierse that got them out of trouble after neither Jim Feeney nor Mark Cannon had succeeded in breaking 80.

Well supported

Cannon's 83 was in the end thrown away and a 74 by the reliable Garth McGimpsey will have reassured the Walker Cup selectors. This is the time of the final reckoning, for the team to play the United States at Pine Valley in August is to be chosen next week.

Paul Mayo, the one Welshman with a faint chance of being in that Walker Cup side, did his prospects no harm with a 72 and was well supported by Michael Macara (75) and Neil Roderick (74).

For a time Wales lead, but Sweden, a rising force, particularly on their home ground, were admirably consistent, all five of their counting scores being between 72 and 75.

The best individual score of the day was nevertheless by Erkki Valinna, of Finland, with a 67.

368—Sweden.
372—Denmark.
375—Scotland (C. Bloice 77, I. Brotherston 76, G. MacGregor 76, C. Montgomery 72, S. Stephen 74).
376—Spain.

RAIN UPSETS HENLEY'S PREPARATION

By GEOFFREY PAGE

THE persistent rain in the Thames Valley, ranging from torrential downpours to intermittent drizzle, is beginning to threaten the organisation of Henley Royal Regatta, now only a week away.

Many of the installations of the course cannot be erected because of the heavy stream and, unless rain stops in the next 24 hours, some traditional course markers may be missing on the Regatta.

The Regatta chairman, Peter Coni, while insisting that the distance signals at the Barrier and Fawley must be put up, those at the quarter, three-quarter and mile may not be installed in time.

The starting installation is not yet up, though Coni hopes this may be possible today ready for tomorrow's qualifying races. Nor has it yet been possible to put in the marker buoys on the first part of the course.

Heavy stream

The heavy stream is providing some problems for the crews and leaving and returning to the boat raft has become hazardous, though so far there has been no damage.

Cornell are doubtful starters for the Grand, but since they are reported to be slower than Harvard and Princeton, their non-appearance will affect the draw rather than the actual result.

Two members of the A R A squad, Warner and McTeague, are scheduled to take part in the qualifying race for the Goblets on Friday evening and to race in Amsterdam on Saturday morning—which could extend their organisation.

Sandy Lyle, who was disqualiled from the Irish Open, is hoping for a happier tournament in Monte Carlo

By RICHARD JAMES in Monte Carlo

LOW cloud, which reduced visibility to a few yards, yesterday thwarted Sandy Lyle's hopes of a swift return to competitive action in the Johnnie Walker Monte Carlo Open pro-am following his disqualification last week in Dublin.

Lyle was ruled out of the Carrolls Irish Open for failing to return a card after picking up his ball on the 18th when heading for a second round 92.

Having by-passed the Jersey Open the week before, he immediately filed a late entry for the £136,000 Monte Carlo tournament.

The big Ryder Cup Scot, fourth in the Epson order of merit with official European prize winnings of £34,286 had, however, to confine himself to five hours of putting practice when billowing low cloud, which caused last year's event to be cut to 36 holes, again enveloped the Mont Agel course perched 2,600 feet above the principality.

Pro-am abandoned

The pro-am had to be abandoned, but Lyle did manage a practice round on Tuesday and confessed he found the roller-coaster layout much more to his liking than he had expected.

He claims he has put his Royal Dublin experience behind him and explains: "What happened was caused by a combination of high wind and feeling generally jaded through playing too much golf.

"It's a repeating pattern for me. I played 12 tournaments in 13 weeks in America and five in six weeks in Europe."

But Lyle is fully rested and starts among the favourites, along with United States Masters champion Bernhard Langer, beaten in a play-off in Dublin by Seveciano Ballesteros and also making his debut, and Japan's Isao Aoki.

Way collects car

Paul Way, who beat Lyle in a play-off for the P G A Championship and heads the order of merit with £57,647 prize money, is in Monte Carlo to collect one of the six American-made Excalibur touring cars, worth more than £50,000 awarded for holes-in-one on the European tour. He might just collect the title as well.

Ballesteros is sitting this one out, but countryman Manuel Pinero, winner of the Madrid and Italian Open titles, is in the field. So is Sam Torrance, who went within a stroke of Pinero in both events but has slipped to 12th in the money league.

Ian Mosey defends the title he won over two rounds last year and there is an appearance, too, from Gary Player, 49, of South Africa.

LORETTO WILL DEFEND TITLE

By MAURICE HART

Sixteen public schools have entered the G L Mellin Salver and each will be represented by three foursome pairs on West Hill Course, Brookwood, Surrey, on July 12-13.

One of the most successful schools in the 25 years of this competition are Loretto, the reigning champions and winners for the past three years.

They open their account against Sherborne and other first-round matches will be between Oundle and Shrewsbury; Lancing and Bradfield; Hurstpierpoint and Aldenham; Bedford and Downside; Cheltenham and Haileybury; Cranleigh and Forest; Mill Hill and Felsted.

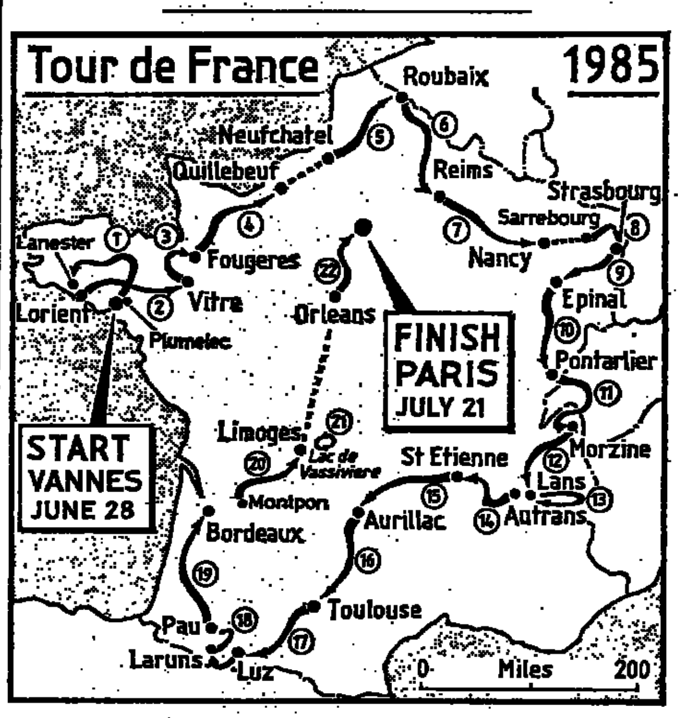
WALLACE INVITED

Shaun Wallace, a cycling silver medallist at the Commonwealth Games in Brisbane, has been invited to ride in the three-man English team that will contest a major series in Australia next year. The competition, which will feature eight nations, begins in Sydney on Jan. 18 and ends in Brisbane on March 22.



Start in Brittany will suit Hinault

By PHIL LIGGETT

THE 72nd Tour de France, which begins in Plumelec in the heart of Brittany with a four-mile individual time trial tomorrow afternoon, looks likely to be one of the most interesting editions for perhaps a decade.

Although the French, in the absence of Laurent Fignon, the winner for the past two years, will support Bernard Hinault, a Breton, there is no obvious favourite for the 2,550-mile journey around the perimeter of the country.

For the first time since the race began in Nice in 1981, the route is clockwise and, apart from a brief incursion into Switzerland on July 9, it stays entirely in France. It has been known to visit as many as five countries.

The survivors who reach the Champs Elysees on July 21 will have pedalled 2,550 miles in 23 days and of those who begin only perhaps a dozen or so have the ability to entertain thoughts of winning La Grande Boucle. The others ride as helpers to their team leaders with hopes of only winning one of the 24 stages.

Despite the increased interest worldwide—this year there is the possibility of an American or Australian winner—the Tour de France remains the pinnacle of a professional's career. The winner can within two years become a millionaire on the strength of his victory.

Hinault, 30, is a rich man after four victories since 1978, and if he wins this year he will join Jacques Anquetil and Eddy Merckx in the exclusive "Five Club". His victory in the recent Tour of Italy, another race over 2,000 miles, is a pointer to Hinault's's form.

The first tour was held in 1903 and the riders paid a 10 francs entry fee (£1) to ride a 1500-mile route linking Paris with five of France's major cities. The first prize then was £60 but is now more than £20,000 and it is the team rather than the rider who pays to enter.

Fewer mountains

The clockwise route, which keeps the race in Brittany for three days before it heads towards the borders of Belgium, does not include as many mountains as usual. This is a point that will not have escaped Hinault's notice.

The 100 miles of individual time trialing will also help Hinault to capture the leader's yellow jersey but, as he showed in the Tour of Italy, he is susceptible at times and this year especially there is an abundance of riders able to attack him.

Robert Millar, from Scotland, who finished second in the Tour of Spain last April, will await the Alps which begin after Pontarlier in the second week and from then on will hunt the polka dot jersey he won last year as King of the Mountains.

He said this week: "I don't think I can win the race itself this year because it's not hilly enough, but I'll see how it develops."

After the Alps the route has many corrugations before the Pyrenees are reached in the third week. There are two hard stages that climb the Col d'Aubisque and Col du Tourmalet.

The six-mile climb to the ski station at Luz-Ardiden on the Spanish border is another feared ascent. If Millar leaves the Pyrenees in the yellow jersey then a reasonable performance in the last time trial of 29 miles around Lake Vissiviere would confirm the first ever British winner of the race.

BELGIANS COVER FINE RISK

By LEWINE MAIR in Brussels

BRUNO PANI, the man behind the £40,000 Belgian Women's Open which starts today at Royal Waterloo, is anxious that there should be no repeat of the incident at the closing stages of the recent Hennessy Cognac Cup in Paris.

He was referring to the £50 fine on Laura Davies by Colin Snape, of the W P G A, for wearing what he termed "scruffy" trousers.

"We don't want that kind of thing here," said Mr Pani. "We would like this to be a happy event so that everyone wants to come back next year. The Belgian Golf Federation are very keen to promote the game and if the week is successful we will increase our prize money and maybe have the biggest tournament in Europe."

He said the Federation had been in touch with the WPGA to say that if a Laura Davies situation should arise over the next few days, they would like to be allowed to sort it out themselves.

Special prize

Because they have not yet had a reply from the WPGA's executive director the hosts have devised a plan in case their worst fears are realised.

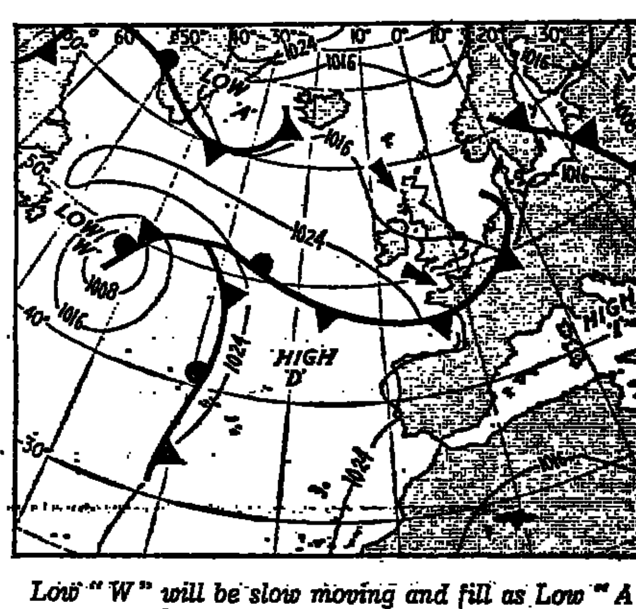
"Obviously," said Mr Pani, "we will not interfere if a player is being fined for good reason. However, if it is for something like her clothes, we shall create a special prize so that she does not have to dig into her own pocket."

Grateful though they no doubt will be for his remarks, the W P G A players, with Miss Davies's case so fresh in the memory, will probably continue to worry as much about the crease in their trousers as the line of their putts.

The course is playing very much longer than was the case in 1983 when Claire Hourihane of Ireland, returned a record 69 during the Women's European Team Championship.

With the exception of Kathy Panton, who is back playing on the L P G A tour in the United States, all top 10 players in the W P G A's order of merit are in action. What is more, they have been joined this week by Liselotte Neumann, 19, one of the most gifted women golfers in Europe.

ATLANTIC WEATHER—Noon June 26



Low "W" will be slow moving and fill as Low "A" moves south-east and deepens a little. High "D" is expected to drift south-east and build, while High "I" declines a little and drifts south-east. Low "Z" will fill.

TELEVISION

THURSDAY GUIDE BY RONALD HASTINGS

BBC-1

6 50 a.m.-9.20 BREAKFAST TIME. 10.30-10.50 Play School.

10 55 CRICKET: SECOND TEST—England v Australia. First day from Lord's. Unanimous agreement from readers on our recent complaint about the TV commentators, with the exception of Dexter, Benaud and Tony Lewis. In the First Test obscene gestures from Australia's Thomson are examples of sporting hooliganism we could do without. 1.5 News, Weather. 1.22 Regional News (London and South East: Financial Report and News). 1.25 Camberwick Green, rpt.

1 40 CRICKET: SECOND TEST and WIMBLEDON—England v Australia from Lord's and the fourth day of tennis from Wimbledon where, no doubt, the same old team of commentators will also bring in the yearly crop of red-hot complaints. 4.18 (not London) Regional News. 4.20 Gran, rpt. 4.25 Stop-Go!, rpt. 4.35 Dogtanian and the Three Muskehounds.

5 00 JOHN CRAVEN'S NEWSROUND. 5.10 We Are the Champions: new series of inter-school competitions. 5.35 Dr. Kildare, rpt. (Wales: Wales Today.)

6 00 NEWS, WEATHER.

6 35 REGIONAL MAGAZINES. (Wales: Dr. Kildare.)

7 00 EASTENDERS—A proposal to re-develop Albert Square upsets the residents. (Ceefax.)

7 55 ATHLETICS—The Oslo Games.

9 00 NEWS, WEATHER.

9 25 MIAMI VICE—The Maze. Tubbs goes undercover to join Cuban thugs made angry by a trigger-happy cop.

10 15 WIMBLEDON—Match of the Day. Plus other highlights.

11 15 ATHLETICS—Highlights from Oslo. 11.45 Weather.

BBC-2

6 30 a.m.-7.20 OPEN UNIVERSITY. 9.55 Daytime on Two, a run of seven short educational programmes.

3 00 WIMBLEDON, CRICKET and ATHLETICS — The fourth day of tennis at Wimbledon (and complaints about commentators began to arrive even before the tournament opened!); England v Australia from Lord's; and Athletics from Oslo including the 1500 metres.

7 55 NEWS, WEATHER.

8 00 DANCE INTERNATIONAL: BALANCHINE—Second of the two programmes from the U.S.A. on the choreographer George Balanchine, covering his career from 1965 to his death in 1983, with excerpts from his work in both historic and contemporary performances.

9 00 SING COUNTRY—More from the Wembley Country and Western Festival, featuring Jimmy C. Newman, Susan McCann, Freddie Fender and Johnny Russell.

9 25 ★★ ALEC CLIFTON-TAYLOR'S ENGLISH TOWNS—Lewes, Sussex. Excellent repeat with all his usual humour and expertise. (Ceefax.)

10 05 CARDIFF SINGER OF THE WORLD—Fourth round with five more competitors from abroad singing two arias each, all singers at the start of their professional careers.

10 55 NEWSNIGHT—At 11.40 Weather.

11 45 CRICKET: SECOND TEST—England v Australia. First day highlights presented by Richie Benaud. 12.10 Weekend Outlook, Open University preview.

12 15-1.10 OPEN UNIVERSITY.

LABOUR RUSH TO SHAKE UP PARTY HQ

By NICHOLAS COMFORT Political Staff

LABOUR'S National Executive set in motion yesterday a sweeping reorganisation of the party's headquarters after being warned by Mr Larry Whitty, its new General Secretary, that delay could cost Labour the next election.

By 16 votes to six the Executive voted both to accept the recommendations of a review team, headed by Mr Whitty, and to implement them without waiting for approval from October's party conference.

It acted on the basis of a report describing the management structure as "top-heavy," the performance of key tasks as "inefficient" and "unprofessional" and fund-raising activities as loss-making.

The reorganisation, and the need to make an early start on it, was strongly supported by Mr Kinnock.

No time to lose

But the plan came under fire from left-wingers led by Mr Eric Heffer and Mr Dennis Skinner who argued that it was too concerned with management and not enough with politics.

They also pressed, with support from Mr Wedgwood Benn, for a final decision to be left until the party conference.

However, a clear majority accepted Mr Whitty's argument that with an election maybe only two years away, there was no time to lose and that given the size of Labour's task every day would count.

They also agreed that in implementing the central proposal to cut the number of departmental heads within the 130 staff at Walworth Road from 10 to 3, the new appointments shold be externally advertised.

Mr Whitty aims to have the entire new structure functioning by Christmas, with his three lieutenants who will head new "super-departments" for organisation, policy development, and campaigns and communication in place by the end of September.

The report put to yesterday's meeting, which Mr Whitty wrote although much of the work was done before he took over as General Secretary from Mr James Mortimer, put the party's organisational problems in stark terms.

"The organisation of elections is les efficient, less adventurous and less flexible than our opponents," the Mr Whilly declared.

Furthermore, money-raising activities, including literature sales, LABOUR WEEKLY and NEW SOCIALIST, "make a substantial loss for the party."

At first effect of the impending charges is that the party has appointed a Temporary Director of Publicity from August 5 to succeed Mr Nick Grant, who has been offered a liaison post with Mr Robert Maxwell's Mirror Group.

Miss Veronica Crichton, 36, a former Labour and County Hall Press Officer, will hold the appointment only until the hierarchy in the new campaigns and communication section can be settled.

Lawson rebuffs CBI

three days after the Cabinet's special discussion at Chequer's about long-term public expenditure and two weeks before the Cabinet has its first look at the extra spending totals wanted by individual Ministers for the 1986-87 financial year.

Trouble in containing public expenditure has meant that the Government has done less than it hoped to reduce taxes.

In his speech yesterday, the Chancellor said there was a link between high levels of taxation and sluggish economic performance.

He added: "That is why a priority for the remainder of this Parliament—and I know the CBI agrees—is to bring taxation down.

"By next year we shall have the lowest rate of corporation tax of any major industralised country.

"But income tax is still too high. The economy is growing fast.

"It is right that taxpayers should benefit by being allowed to keep more of what they earn, and it is good for jobs, too."

The Chancellor also responded sharply to the call by the CBI on Monday for an urgent two per cent. cut in interest rates to stimulate industry and employment.

He made it clear that he would not act to induce lower interest rates, which also affect home-buyers with mortgages as well as other borrowers as well as industry.

Mr Lawson said: "I well understand industry's concern about the level of interest rates.

"I said in the Budget speech that short-term interest rates would be held at the level needed to maintain monetary conditions that will continue to bring down inflation.

"That remains the position.

"All outside forecasters agree that inflation will be appreciably lower by the end of the year and I expect it to continue falling next year.

"As a result of the politicies we have been pursuing as well as its own efforts, British industry is doing well.

Record profits

"Company profitability last year was the highest ever recorded. Investment reached an all time high, and CBI surveys point to a further big rise this year.

"But I have to say that companies can do more to help themselves than I can do for them.

"According to the CBI, one per cent. on interest rates—if maintained for a full year—is thought to cost industry about £250 million.

"But one per cent. extra on pay costs over £1,000 million a year.

"And earnings in the private sector have risen by around nine per cent. over the last year, well above the rise in the cost of living.

"So lower pay settlements are far more important to business even than lower interest rates.

"Furthermore, if wages rise less fast and industry borrows less, that in itself will tend to bring about lower interest rates, to say nothing of the beneficial impact on jobs.

"The link between pay and jobs is well established."

CBI HITS BACK

Pressure will be maintained

OUR BUSINESS CORRESPONDENT writes: The CBI quickly hit back at the Chancellor's criticisms and made it clear it intends to maintain the pressure for an interest rate cut.

Sir Terence Beckett, director-general, said high interest rates increased costs both to firms and individuals with the result that mortgage payments were becoming an increasingly sensitive factor in wage bargaining.

He added: "It is important to keep both interest rates and wage settlements down to make Britain more competitive and create more real jobs."

There is widespread concern in industrial quarters about the widening gap between British and other interest rates.

The trouble with old Nick . . .

By GODFREY BARKER

THE House has got a problem with Mr Nicholas Winterton (C., Macclesfield). Loosely speaking, it is one of undischarged violence.

On Tuesday Mr Winterton erupted without warning into the right earlobe of Mr Edward Heath. Yesterday, in Committee Room 21, it was Mr Tony Newton's turn.

The DHSS Minister was rhubarbing gently on his Green Paper, the one that is all prose and no figures, on reforming the Welfare State.

MPs snoozed comfortably under his impressive grind of detail. Suddenly Mr Winterton broke loose in the unholy company of Mrs Renee Short (Lab., Wolverhampton NE), the committee chairman.

"What are the internal DHSS figures on gainers and losers in the Green Paper?" snapped Mrs Short.

Mr Newton looked shocked. "We're told," added Mrs Short fiercely, "that 7 million of 7½ million claimants will be worse off, including 4 million pensioners."

"You know," responded Mrs Short. "The figures you're not willing to give us."

She reeled off some more horror statistics invented at the Brecon and Radnor by-election about 650,000 housing benefit claimants losing over £5 per week and 1·8 million losing benefit entirely.

Mr Newton demurred. The Government had no figures. It was time for Tories to shut up. Mr Winterton jumped right in.

After three minutes, it became clear that Mr Short was the nice guy in the darkened cell at the police station who invites you to co-operate over a cup of tea and a cigarette. Mr Winterton was the one the nice copper has to restrain.

"Are you prepared to say," howled Nick in capital letters, "that these are NOT figures that have been used by your department?"

Mr Newton was all bland professionalism. "All I cany say is that they are not figures which can describe the position in relation to decisions which have not yet been taken," he shrugged, not unhelpfully.

Mr Winterton took on the menace of the bus conductor on the midnight skinhead service to Wembley. "So you're denying the chairman's figures, are you?" he boomed.

Mr Newton, smart operator, was not intimidated. "Without knowing the basis on which they're contructed, I can't comment."

Very formidable

Nick got very formidable. Tories cowered. He assumed the belligerence of the travelling salesman who's wedged his Encyclopaedia Britannica into the narrow chink at the front door.

"So these are NOT the figures you've used, eh?" he bellowed.

Mr Newton found he could not helpfully add to his previous answer, Mrs Short said he might think about it and let the Committee know. Mr Newton said charmingly he would. Mr Winterton was not done with him.

Yesterday he left his foot in Mr Newton's door for 20 minutes, pressuring him unmercifully. No Tory could get in to stop him.

AIRPORT EXERCISE

BEIRUT

By JOHN BULLOCH

French the more practical embassy as it has extensive grounds and buildings.

Mr Berri set out three basic conditions for the eventual release of the hostages, two of which seemed capable of immediate implementation.

He said he wanted the American fleet off Lebanon to stay outside Lebanese territorial waters, which he defined as 12 kilometres, presumably confusing kilometres and miles.

In fact, the eight-ship-strong American task force led by the aircraft carrier, Nimitz, and ships carrying a 1,800-man marine assault force is much further than 12 miles off the Lebanese coast.

Secondly, Mr Berri asked for an assurance that there would be no attacks on Lebanese territory, either by America or by Israel, once the hostages drama ended.

The United States has threatened retaliation once all Americans are out of Lebanon, but indications were that the "punishment" officials had in mind was against Iran rather than Lebanon.

Thirdly, the Amal leader said that all the Lebanese detained in Atlet prison camp, Israel, would have to be released before the Americans could be sent home.

Assurance rejected

Asked if he could agree to the Americans being freed against an American assurance of eventual freedom for the Lebanese prisoners, he gave a brusque "No."

Mr Berri said two of the 12 Westerners kidnapped over the past 18 months in Beirut and held by various groups would be released at the same time the American hostages were set free.

The two would be the missing French journalists, Jean Paul Kaufmann and Michel Seurat, who were picked up at a checkpoint outside Beirut airport as soon as they arrived in Lebanon a month ago.

When I asked Mr Berri about the fate of the other ten missing Westerners, including seven Americans and the 65-year-old British journalist, Mr Alec Collet, he said he had no knowledge of their whereabouts.

The groups holding the two Frenchmen had contacted him and offered to include the two in the eventual prisoner exchange, he said.

The Amal leader, still insisting on his status as a mediator rather than a primary figure, said the International Red Cross had visited all 40 American hostages in Beirut on Tuesday.

A second American, named only as Mr Grossmeyer, was in poor health, and a decision on whether or not to free him would be taken today.

Mr Palmer added that the hostages had been assembled in one central location, all had been spoken to and some had been examined by doctors.

In Beirut last night, the main group of hostages was being kept in a hall in the southern and solidly Shi'ite suburb.

Another eight were in a villa not far away held by Hizbollah men, and the three flight crew of the Trans World Airlines plane were still aboard the aircraft.

The three crew members, aboard the plane since June 14, have been allowed into the airport building for showers, but desperately need a change of clothes and reading material to pass the time.

They have been allowed to write to their families.

HOSTAGE LECTURED

Lessons on Islam

The American hostage released yesterday in Beirut, Mr Jimmy Dell Palmer, arrived in Cyprus later and said he was given regular teaching on Islam by his Shi'ite Moslem captors, who believed the sky-jacking of the Trans World Airliners was "in the name of God."

"Their line of thinking was that anything done in the name of God was OK," he added. "But I don't understand their cause."
